On Monday night, the contractor, E. K. Graham, told the Council he was unable to continue the work at his contract price, he said he could not afford to pay his men the wages they demanded. Labour and the maintenance of his eleven horses had exceeded his estimate. He was losing money and to hold his men would cost him a great deal more. Last night Mr. Graham repeated his ultimatum, and while Mayor Duffus and several of the Aldermen were prepared to give him $500 more than his contract price, the rest of the Council adopted the attitude of washing their hands of the contractor's and consequently the city's predicament. Yesterday the last two of Mr. Grah[illegible] assistants left him, and his efforts to fill their places were fruitless. He had been paying wages of $50 a month, a sum considerably less than the average labouring wage to-day. Left without help, the contractor was unable to continue the work. The Council told him it was his affair, and he would have to live up to his contract, but for ten days front lawns have been decorated with garbage cans piled high, and all the available containers are rapidly filling. Besides the hot weather is here, and the unremoved garbage has become, not only a nuisance, but a menace to the public health.

And the Council confronts this situation by the futile method of telling Mr. Graham to live up to his contract when he has plainly and unequivocally stated that he can't. The result is inaction, when the Council's duty is to demand or provide adequate and efficient action however it may be secured.

Mr. Graham states that the city has broken its agreement with him in the citizens disregard of the regulations, limiting the quantity of ashes and garbage in any container. As a result his men had grown more and more dissatisfied until they finally left. Enquiries to-day brought no definite information regarding the continuance of collections. Hence the garbage cans might as well be removed from the lawns and sidewalks until the system is revived.

LIEUT. WORTH TELLS OF THE VIMY FIGHT

Peterborough Officer Was Hit by Machine Gun Fire After Objective Had Been Reached and Position Was Being Consolidated.

SHOT THROUGH JAW

LIEUT. WALTER G. WORTH.

Lieut. Walter G. Worth of Peterborough, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, gives the following interesting description of the Vimy Ridge battle in a letter just received. His letter is as follows:

3nd Western Gen. Hospital,
High Street, Manchester,

Dear Folks at Home.—Just a line to let you know how things are progressing with me. I dropped you a line on Saturday as soon as I got in here, and also a cable, which I had a reply to yesterday. I was so glad to hear you were not worrying too much, as it might have been worse, and by this time many families will have received news of the death of their dear ones which took place in the same battle. You would notice from the tone of my letter lately that we were expecting something to come off, but of course did not exactly know the time. The last two weeks before Easter we were out training for it, behind the lines, and had everything taped off as the actual part we were to go over. We got a good idea about it that way. We were first informed that it was to be Easter Sunday, "the better the day, better the deed." However, it was postponed twenty-four hours, and we spent Easter Sunday getting ready for it. It was a lovely day and the bands were playing all over; you would have thought we were all going to a picnic.

At 7.30 p.m. we moved off and it was a great sight to see all the men with all the extra equipment on for an attack. The boys are certainly fine when it comes down to the real thing, and every man was there on time. It was an 8-mile walk up to the line, and with the enormous number of troops that were moving all around you had to stay close together in the dark. We got up into our position about 2 a.m., and the trenches were mostly knee-deep in water, so you can bet it wasn't any too pleasant a stay there till 5.30. It kept me busy saying a few words to the men and see that they understood everything. At 5 a.m. I issued the rum which warms you up and just gives you that bit of extra nerve you require.

At 5.30 on the dot our guns opened up and you can't imagine it; it is just as though someone was turning a handle, just one continuous roar. We jumped over just as it was nicely started and then the fun commenced. We slipped and fell all over the place. We had to keep waiting for our barrage to lift, and then go a little further and so on till we reached our objective, about 600 yards. We then had to hold it for 40 minutes, and consolidate the position. I was feeling quite clever, and thought I was safe, and walked along getting my men together in one place and seeing that they were connected on the flanks. It was about 7 a.m. when I was hit. A machine gun got me and I can remember the crash till the end of my days. I thought a tank was coming and was going to run over me. I realized that I was hit in the head, and thought it was all over with me, as I naturally bled very much. My stretcher-bearer was handy and put me a dressing on, and by that time I felt that I could get up and two men were detailed to take me back, and lost their bearings and were taking me over to the German line. It was a good thing that I was conscious enough to notice it. We finally got right and struck a former German dugout, where I decided to have a rest. The 41st Battalion had taken it over as their advance headquarters, and their doctor was there and gave me every attention.

I stayed there a couple of hours till the fighting had moved further on, and then got assisted back to our H. Q., but you may be sure it was a struggle as I was wet through to my knees and for every step I took I got cramps in my legs, and you know that sensation, but I eventually got there and our doctor looked me over and started me on my way. I was sorry to hear there that my Company Comm. was killed, half way across, and another officer got a bad one through the chin, before me, so that made three out of four, which appears rather bad, but amongst the men, the casualties were much lighter. From our H. Q. I got a lift on a light artillery, and made some Fritzies push me for a couple of miles, and after that between walking and ambulances I reached a decent hospital the following morning.

It was strange one kept running into friends from different battalions and getting news about others. Jack Watt came over with a sprained ankle. All cases who are able to travel get through to England as soon as possible so as to avoid congestion. When you get here you are sent wherever there are vacancies, and I was surprised to get here although I am perfectly satisfied as it is a lovely place and splendid staff throughout. The food is splendid, and plentiful, and I shall be glad when I can take everything. As yet I can only swallow liquids, but am not starving. For breakfast, I have a good portion of porridge and a scrambled egg; lunch, soup and pudding, and dinner, same; so you see I don't do so bad. The time passes very nicely as we are about 24 together in this room. I have my wound dressed three times during the day, and same at night. The side the bullet went in on, the hole is very small. But in passing through it took a few teeth and part of my jawbone with it, and consequently made rather a gash on the left side. I have a tube in it and they keep getting a lot of stuff out each time and they say it is cleaning up fine. My gums are badly swollen yet and teeth tender; so I am not exactly comfortable yet, also you will know I cannot clean my mouth properly, and have a nasty taste most of the time. However, I notice an improvement each day and before long I should be more comfortable. The doctor does not say anything about an operation, so far; there might be some little cleaning up to do inside later on. One thing sure, I will have to see the dentist, worse luck. Well, never mind, I am worth many a dead one yet, and I am out of it for three months, anyway.

MONAGHAN DECIDES TO TIE UP ALL BUT FARMERS' DOGS

Acquiesces in City's Request—Mr. Peck Explained the Judgment in the Lockie Suit—Other Business of the Council Meeting.

The North Monaghan Council met in the Court House on Saturday, May 5th. All the members were present. Reeve Rye presided.

Mr. E. A. Peck, township solicitor read and discussed the judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Lockie vs North Monaghan. Mr. Peck's interpretation of the court's judgment is as follows: That the plaintiff Lockie is barred from further appeal, that the plaintiff did not establish his claim to the disputed road, and, from the evidence produced, the court decided that the disputed road is now a public highway; that the plaintiff is entitled to a reasonable amount of water for his stock and that the township has been negligent in this respect, that is, in not maintaining the culverts in proper condition; that on account of the township being negligent in respect of maintenance of the culvert that the plaintiff, Lockie, be paid by the township $100. The amount awarded by the County Judge was $350, and each party has to pay their own costs.

SMITH TOWNSHIP'S COMPLAINT

On a motion of Messrs. Dobbin and Bell a deputation from Smith was then heard. Reeve McKee said that complaints had come to the Smith Council that North Monaghan had been negligent in not properly maintaining its portion of the Smith boundary, especially the western end.

Mr. George Monerief, road commissioner for No. 5 division was present and asked for a grant for his division. He asked the Council to inspect the roads in his division and said that he would put the roads in good condition if the Council would furnish him with the funds.

TO TIE UP DOGS.

A communication was received from the City of Peterborough asking that the township of North Monaghan deal with the dog question. Moved by Mr. Henry, seconded by Mr. Dobbin that the Clerk prepare a by-law on account of the outbreak of rabies in the city, that all dogs in the township of North Monaghan shall be tied up after the passing of the by-law for a period to be decided upon, except farmer's dogs and they shall at no time be out of call.

The Clerk reported re Joseph Drummond's taxes that the back taxes against the land assessed to John Henry in 1915 should have been returned against Lot 31, Plan 49 instead of against Lot 39 and 40, Plan 49.

The following bills were passed and ordered to be paid.

B. Morrow, searches, $1.25.

Moved by Mr. Bell seconded by Mr. Henry that Road Commissioners be paid $3.00 per day; that Foster Moncrief have running control of the stone crusher and gravel pit; that the wages of men be $2.50 per day; that each team shall haul one and a quarter yards of gravel per load and shall be paid $4.75 per day of 10 hours per annum.

On a motion of Messrs Williams and Bell that a new bridge be built at the corner of McKellar and Park street; that the Council meet at the bridge some evening at a date to be arranged by the Clerk.—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

Coal Production To Be Speeded Up

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 9. — Creation of a national committee on coal production to increase the mining output and to accelerate distribution was announced by the Council of National Defence. The committee comprises fifteen coal operators and welfare experts, with F. S. Peabody at their head. Sub-committees throughout the country will deal directly with producers and distributors.

"It is clear there must be a tremendous increase in production at the mines," said Director Gifford, of the Defence Council; "that there must be no interruption of any mines; that there must be improved freight facilities. The committee will co-operate with the mine owners and the labour committee in minimizing the danger of strikes and in bringing about conciliation and mediation. It will assist the transportation committee in making available more cars and in giving coal cars a clear track.

"Co-operation with concerns engaged on government work and in immediate need of coal will be an important branch of the committee work."

A home near Buckhorn which he had visited last winter and found in a deplorable condition, had been completely transformed. The bedroom had been repapered, new bed clothing and furniture purchased, the mother and children appeared brighter and the home was greatly improved.

A motion was passed, receiving Mr. H. B. Cowan as a member of the Society.

The rest of the meeting was devoted to a discussion of Mr. Spence's resignation, which was finally accepted on a motion Mr. Edgar, seconded by Mrs. Stocker.

PROHIBITION IN BRITAIN.

LONDON, May 9.—In the Commons Joseph Martin asked the Government if it intended to introduce a bill providing for the complete prohibition and sale of intoxicants in England during the war as had been done in a large part of Canada. Bonar Law said he had nothing to add to his previous statement on the subject.

Sergeant Cobb Slightly Wounded

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Cobb, 223 London street, have received the following letter from their son, Sergeant Harry Cobb, who went overseas with the 21st Battalion:

SERGEANT HARRY COBB.

"Received your letters and parcel O.K. Got the parcel just at the right time, the night before we went into an attack. The gloves are just fine, and so are the cigarettes and the rest of the parcel.

I have been slightly wounded in the face and am now at a rest camp getting fixed up. Expect to be out in a couple of days, so if you see my name in the casualty list do not worry, as I only got a scratch."

THIRTEEN CANADIANS CAPTURED 56 GERMANS

Sergt. Harry Wilford of Peterborough Says His Platoon Went in With 43 Men and Came Out Only Twelve Strong.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Writing from France on April 17th to his wife, at 59 Olive Avenue, Sgt. Harry Wilford of Peterborough gives some interesting details in connection with the battle of Vimy Ridge. He says: "Just a few lines, as promised, I guess that you have got my note to you after the battle of Vimy Ridge, and I dare say you have heard all the news about it from the papers. Well you may guess we will remember Easter Monday for some years to come, for it certainly was some fight. I was in charge of a platoon of 43 men, going in, and we came out 12 strong; the remainder killed or wounded. I managed to get my men, twelve in number, into the German trench, and had to hold it until 7 o'clock that night and I can tell you from 5.45 a.m. to 7 o'clock p.m. without relief wanted some doing. All the officers and N. C. O's. either got killed or wounded and I had the enemy around me all the time, but we managed by grit and determination to hold on. I guess the battle was the biggest affair the Canadians have had anything to do with up to now, and I can assure you that I thank my Maker for bringing me safely through for it was nothing but Providence that saved us. There is talk of military medals, etc., but of course we don't know anything yet. All I can say is I am thankful to be spared. Poor Charlie McCusker was with me and got killed; I mean McCusker of the Water Department of the C.G.E. I am writing to his parents to tell them about him. There were several poor Peterborough boys got it. I will tell you more about it some other day, as we are out for a few more days' rest and I am busy drilling recruits again. I can tell you I am some man in this new battalion, but I don't want a commission, as the Germans pick you off too quick on account of the dress.

I think Fritz will soon be through by the way I and my twelve men captured 56 Huns, not counting his dead and wounded.

CECILIE NOT LIABLE HAD RIGHT TO TURN

WASHINGTON, May 8.—New York banks lost their litigation in the Supreme Court against the North German Lloyd liner Kron Prinsessin Cecile, at Boston, in which they claimed $2,240,000 damages for failure of the vessel to deliver gold bullion worth $11,000,000 shipped to England and France just at the outbreak of the war.

The Cecille, the Supreme Court decided, is not liable in damages to the shippers for turning back to America in mid-ocean and abandoning her voyage. The decision determines large sums claimed against scores of other German vessels in American ports. Justice Holmes delivered the decision. Justices Pitney and Clark dissented.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading, containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements must be couched in decent language, be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I see that an attempt is made by some of the restless spirits of the Council to change some of the names of our streets. The changes proposed will make confusion to say nothing of their inappropriateness.

It seems that the name of Elm street does not find favour with them; then why not change it to "Elmwood Avenue," which finds favour in many of the nicer cities. To call it Block street will be misleading and difficult to locate. The two streets do not abut each other by many yards, and vary in their bearings by sixteen degrees, and are not of the same width, which will make both streets look ridiculous. If it is so undesirable a street, that its name has to be changed to get rid of the stigma that attaches to it, as one would infer, it is not complimentary to Brock street to have them merged into one. Perhaps there are less differences to overcome between Murray and Cedar streets, which they also want to merge into one.

A greater objection applies to the proposed meddling with Park street. It marks the boundary line between the original survey of the town limits and the Park lots of Monaghan from which its name was derived, and which is looked upon as almost a venerable landmark by the older residents. Besides the Monaghan boundary varies sixteen degrees from the original town site, and to call any part of Reid street by the name of Park street, and to change a short section of Park street to some new name would lead to the utmost confusion and appear nonsensical.

It is to be hoped that the good sense of the better part of the Council will prevail and that such a change will be relegated to a back seat.

Yours truly,
PROPRIA.

CONSERVATIVE M. P.'S SUPPORT MOTION

J. J. Hughes Would go Further and Prohibit Manufacture of Liquor

OTTAWA, May 8.—Emmanuel Devlin, of Wright, moved the adjournment of the House this afternoon to discuss a subject of definite and urgent public importance, namely, the necessity, owing to the high cost of living, and the importance of conserving all food products for the benefit of the consumers of Canada, the Empire, and our allies, of taking measures under the War Measures Act to have the supply of grain to brewers and distillers immediately discontinued.

Mr. Devlin declared that it could not be contended that whiskey and beer were necessaries of life, but that the raw materials from which they were manufactured were certainly necessaries of life. The Minister of Finance had preached that production should be increased and that the essentials of life should be conserved. It was the duty of the Government to eliminate from consumption in this course of the raw materials used fro ber and whiskey manufacture, and to conserve them for public use as food.

In 1916 a total of 2,353,273 bushels of barley, 539,394 bushels of corn, and 123,801 bushels of rye, or a total of 3,016,468 bushels of grain had been used for the manufacture of liquors.

Curtail Great Waste.

"I am now pointing out to the Government one way in which a great waste may be curtailed," declared the member for Wright. "Moreover, if the action I advise is taken, the people will have more money with which to meet the high cost of living."

When Mr. Devlin concluded, there was a pause. Sir George Foster made no move to reply. Sir Wilfrid interrogated him with a motion of his head.

J. J. Hughes, of Prince Edward Island rose. He declared that he would support the resolution, and would go even further. He would move for the prohibition of the manufacture and importation of liquor altogether. At its best, liquor was a luxury and not a necessity. At its worst it was a curse and a waste.

Mr. Hughes was called to order by Mr. Speaker, who pointed out that the question under discussion was not that of prohibition.

Mr. Hughes concluded by strongly endorsing the motion.

D. D. Mackenzie thought the proposal of Mr. Devlin was an indirect way of stopping the production of liquor while it conserved the production of foodstuffs.

Conservatives Support Motion.

Captain Burnham of Peterborough begged leave to support the motion because of the principle involved.

Hugh Guthrie, Wellington, declared that Canada was lagging lamentably behind the United States in this matter of food conservation and control. That three million bushels of grain had been used for the manufacture of something which was prohibited in most of the Provinces was something which should not be.

He believed that the licenses of brewers and distillers should be revoked in the seven out of nine Provinces where prohibition was in force. It was no doubt a difficult matter for the Government to accede to the public demand in face of the fact that there were eleven distilleries and ninety-four breweries operating in Ontario.

Edmond Proulx of Prescott thought that in view of the scarcity of seed grain the action advised should be taken.

E. W. Nesbitt of North Oxford warned the government that it would be necessary before the snow flies to take steps to conserve the food supply of the country.

J. G. Turriff favored the action proposed not so much from a temperance standpoint, but as an absolutely necessary action in view of the great shortage of the world production. The factories could be employed for war purposes.

W. F. MacLean Supports It.

W. F. MacLean declared that a production committee had been formed in Ontario whose purposes it was to conserve, increase, and mobilize the resources of the Province. Moreover, the Province had declared in favour of prohibition. To be consistent, therefore, it was necessary to vote for this motion. It was not only necessary to increase the production of grain, but it was quite as necessary to increase the production of cattle, and the raw products used in making liquor constituted the food of the herds of the Dominion.

When the first lord arrived at the admiralty he summoned the heads of departments, and told them what he required of them.

It was a brief address and dwelt principally on the need for closer co-operation, but the sting was in the tail.

"Gentlemen, in my profession, when a jury disagrees, it is discharged. I don't think I need to say any more."—Boston American.

They were in a dug-out just along the trench. I got my wounds handaged up. The next thing was, how would I get out to the dressing station without getting another blighty or even something worse. I waited in the dugout till the shelling had quieted down a bit. It was then about 3.30 in the afternoon, so out of the dug-out I came. I climbed out of the trench and struck across the open country towards our lines. I could see the German shells bursting ahead of me. I dropped in shell holes occasionally for a rest. I was feeling pretty well played out. Mind you I had nothing to eat since early that morning. We carried bully beef and hard tack, but I left them in my haversack in the trench. Well, I got to our lines all right, and was directed to the dressing station further down the line.

Coffee from Y.M.C.A.

On my way down I got a cup of coffee from the Y.M.C.A. dug-out. It went fine. There must have been one hundred stretcher cases waiting to be taken out, and twice as many walking cases. I was put in the ambulance there and was taken to No. 2 Canadian Field station. There I was inoculated in the breast to prevent disease. I had all the cocoa and biscuits I could get down me. This must have been about 7 o'clock. Well, I was moved from there to a town called Hersin Coupigny. There I passed through No. 13 Canadian Station. We stopped there all night. The next afternoon we took the train and landed at Boulogne. The next morning I was taken to No. 2 Can. Stationary Hospital. This is the place where I struck a fine feather bed. They were good to us there.

We got lots to eat and the best of grub. Well, I only remained there two days when I got my papers for blighty (England). I came across the Channel in the Hospital ship St. Andrew's. Arrived in Dover on Friday night. We were put right on the Red Cross train and landed in Birkenhead Saturday morning.

When you are writing back tell me if any of the Warsaw boys got it. I am anxious to see the casualty list. I got a letter from Bill the night we went up the line. He was saying he hoped I came through the big drive all right. I have lost my kit, razor, socks, and everything. Some mother's son will get them, so they will not be wasted.

Well, dear mother, if any of the people around the Burg are inquiring, tell them I am getting along fine.

With love,
VIVIAN.

To Mrs. Aitken, Warsaw, Ont.

France, April 15, 1917.

Dear Parents,—Just a few lines to let you know we two boys are O.K. after the big battle which I guess you will have read of long ago, before this reaches you. Jackson, Morrison and Stanley Thompson were wounded, but I haven't heard whether any more of the home boys were hurt or not. Vivian was hit in the arm and Charlie in the leg. I don't know about Stan, but I think his wounds were more serious than the other two boys. I hope they all make Blighty. Jackson had a big smile on his face. Charlie stuck with me on the gun, twelve hours after he'd been hit, but had to go out at last.

I guess old Fritz thought we could not make Vimy Ridge, but we had to show him we could. When we would capture a Fritz it was fun to see him going through his usual course of putting his hands above his head and crying "Mercy, kamarade," while we fellows gently searched his pockets to see what souvenirs we could find or dangerous weapons. Most of them had something that was worth while keeping. One fellow handed me a watch that had either been taken from a French soldier or a jeweller's shop. It may have quite a story attached to it.

The Fritzes that we were up against were just back from the Russian front; the 58th and 263rd Pioneer Battalion, I think.

Verne and I have received all your parcels and the cake was sure great. A parcel came for Vivian the next night after we were out, and of course it came to me, for all my crew said before we went over the top that whatever parcels came for any of use who were hit, they were to be divided up, but I kept the sox, because I didn't know but what Vivian would need them, so when I get his address I'll look after his needs. The Women's Institute parcels also came last night; so I had to do likewise with the other boys' parcels; but I want you to thank all the ladies for Verne and I. Tell them I am just enjoying a pipeful of T. and B. tobacco, which was in the parcel. I have a pair of the socks on and they're jake.

Well, mother, I think this is more than a note, if I keep on. We were having fine weather for a few days, but we are getting our share of rain to-day. In Canada, it's more rain, more rest; but just vice versa in this country.

I think Jackson will be able to write, for if I remember rightly he got hit on the left arm, so he will be able to tell the rest of his ordeals better than I can. The next day after we went over the top we had about four inches of snow.

Hope this letter finds all the friends around the old Burg as well as myself and Verne.

Your son,
CLAYTON.

Last Chance of Seeing "Her New York"

The extra quotation marks are rightly around "her" because the New York in the story is wholly and absolutely in the proprietorship of Phoebe Lester, the lively little country girl, played by Miss Hulette.

She first sees its rising in a glorious mirage from out a cornfield wherein she imagined she was in "her" New York, rubbing elbows with scores of glittering people instead of brushing against cornstalks.

TO-DAY'S WAR NEWS

LONDON, May 9. — Probably fewer than thirty British vessels have been sunk by German submarines in the week ending to-day, according to authoritative prediction of the official statement of losses due to-morrow morning, given the United Press this afternoon. The statement will show a considerable decrease over last week's losses. A larger number of vessels also succeeded in escaping from the attacks of submarines.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The billion dollars Uncle Sam will spend at once for ships to combat the submarine menace will go for the purchase of second-hand vessels and construction of new ones. This was decided on to-day at a two-hours' conference between the President and thirty members of both House and Congress and officials of the Government ship board.

LONDON, May 9.—Stewart Lyons, special correspondent in Flanders, cables to-day that the Canadians were not in Fresnoy village itself, but their line extended to the north. This would seem to indicate that there is little ground for fears of extremely heavy casualty lists of Canadians in this battle.

FOOD RIOTS IN SWEDEN

Stockholm's Potato Supply is Exhausted—Women Attack Police.

STOCKHOLM, May 8.—Women, who stood in line to buy potatoes in the southern part of Stockholm yesterday, when they were informed that the stock was exhausted began a demonstration which assumed proportions that kept the police busy until after midnight. Several policemen were injured by stones and a number of the rioters received scalp wounds from the police sabres. Sixteen arrests were made.

Serious rioting also occurred in Gothenburg. It was begun by buyers who demanded bread from the bakers without presenting bread cards. When supplies were refused they began taking bread by force, often without paying for it. This procedure was eventually extended to the butcher shops, which were plundered until a troop of Hussars was summoned. These soldiers were kept busy during the night, and several of them were injured by stones and other missles. Ten of the rioters were taken to hospitals. Many other persons were injured, but went home.

Hunger demonstrations occurred at Norrkoeping on both Friday and Saturday. Butcher shops there were plundered, chiefly by factory girls, of whom many were arrested.

No potatoes are to be had in Stockholm and many other cities and villages of Sweden.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, May 9. — Under the grip of an almost unprecedented liquidation movement that started late yesterday, the entire list, including some of the best investment issues, suffered a sharp decline in the stock market to-day. Losses averaged from fractions to almost four points in some cases.

Details of the Federal tax programme and investors desire to buy government bonds, were some of the causes held responsible for the heavy selling. Rails were most affected by the movement, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific and other leading roads falling off from 3 to almost four points. U. S. Steel sold to low of 112 1-2, but rallied slightly during afternoon trading.

BIG PASSENGER STEAMER IS REPORTED LOST

Big Passenger Steamer Lost With Several People of Note

Editorial in the London "Chronicle" Condemns the "Inconsistent Policy of Concealing Facts"—Seventy Persons Lost

NO NEWS PUBLISHED

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, May 10. — Loss of a big passenger steamer with seventy persons including several "people of note" aboard, was announced in a long "Chronicle" editorial to-day. The editorial voiced the insistent demand that the House of Commons explain why the Admiralty "pursues its inconsistent policy" of concealing facts. "About two weeks ago," the editorial declared, "a large steamer was sunk and seventy lives were lost. Some of them were people of note. No news has been published of the disaster. Other outrages, involving loss of life, have been announced and descriptions published. On what principle does the Admiralty censorship work?"

Vimy Village Is Now Merely A Vast Heap of Rubbish

Canadians Have Had Something Else to Do Instead of Clearing Up—Church Has Only One Wall Intact—Those Who Think Advance Slow Should See Ground Fought Over

AMMUNITION LIES UNTOUCHED

Canadian Headquarters, France, via London, May 10.—Canadians lying comfortably in little white cots at Orpington and Chivedon, told me something three weeks ago about how they helped take Vimy ridge. It has been my privilege since then to go over myself a goodly portion of the ground, and also see the one further away where our men are now entrenched after new struggles with the enemy.

"Good golfing weather," remarked one member of the divisional staff. The other agreed "and plenty of bunkers about here, too," he added, throwing a glance at the sun-scorched desolate waste spreading from the huts.

NO PLOWS MADE THIS FIELD

Tramping over a ploughed field is a favourite simile for heavy walking effort. Let any civilian, though, do a few miles on Vimy ridge as it now is and he will be richer in the possession of more expressive illustration. You slide and you stumble over loose earth and stray wire. You get some relief for perhaps a quarter of a mile by keeping to the light railway track thrust out almost directly the ground is torn from the Boche.

You pass our men toiling in the sun at this track. Sweat trickles from under your heavy metal helmet, and the satchel containing your gas mask wobbles uncomfortably around your body. With every step you pass men going up ten times as heavily loaded.

You do four miles of this, passing on the way our soldiers "consolidating the ground won," as newspaper writers and official communiques so light-heartedly put it.

GERMANS SHELL GENEROUSLY

Before us is Vimy ridge. The Boche this morning is busy shelling the whole neighborhood. He distributes generously, but I am told his shells are duds. I don't know the difference between the dud and the genuine article, and even my experienced companion looked around apprehensively at odd intervals. Frankly, I am glad.

Socket holes in the brick wall stand for what were casements in Vimy villas and cottages. One wall only remains of the church, and that will soon be a heap of bricks. The wreck of more than one aeroplane is within view. Somewhere beyond the village is our new trench line. Not one regular inhabitant of the village remains. The Germans took them all away weeks ago. There are indoubtable signs of his having left the district himself a good deal more hurriedly than he ever imagined possible.

AMMUNITION LIES UNTOUCHED

In deep tunnels at various points of ground over which we have come, I have seen to-day whole boxes of ammunition untouched and appurtenances in plenty of well-fitted officers' mess lying round just as the Boche left them when he quit. There are shattered German guns with heaps of projectiles around as when they were fired against the Canadians for the last time.

Other jobs have been tackled by the Canadians since Easter than merely clearing up this rubbish. Anybody who wonders, in his perhaps excusable simplicity, why our troops have not yet reached the Rhine ought to behold a stretch of ground when there has been such heavy fighting for it as at Vimy, and ought also to remember there will be, as far as anyone yet anticipates, the same bitter fighting for every further advance. His wonder at what he regards as our rather slow progress would dissolve at once.

Another Peace Offer in Sight

SAVING FRENCH ORCHARDS.

Grafting will repair much of the Damage Done by Germans.

PARIS, May 8.—France is not unduly depressed by the destruction of the orchards in the evacuated area of her territory, because a remedy is said to have been found for the evil inflicted on these agricultural districts by the Germans.

As soon as the wholesale felling of the fruit trees was announced by the French press an astute Norman peasant wrote to his paper, pointing out that nothing was easier than to save the stem or hacked fruit trees at this time of the year by careful grafting. The Horticultural Society of France took up the idea at once and issued detailed instructions for the grafting of every kind and variety of fruit trees. This work is to be completed by May 15.

Had Bronchitis FOR YEARS

Bronchitis comes from a neglected cold and it, if neglected, will surely turn into pneumonia. The first symptom is a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing and a feeling of oppression or tightness about the chest.

The phlegm raised from the bronchial tubes is at first of a light color, but as the disease progresses it becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often hard to raise.

Dr. Wood's Norway is just the remedy that you require as it loosens the phlegm and heals the lungs and bronchial tubes.

Mrs. Chas. Brenn, Amherst, N. S., writes: "I was troubled for years with bronchitis, and could not find any relief. I was especially bad on a damp day. I went to a druggist and asked him for something to stop the constant tickling in my throat. He gave me a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I found gave me instant relief. I think it is the best remedy for bronchitis that I know of. I now take care that I always have a bottle on hand."

Russia Will Stand Loyally By Allies

Absolutely No Idea of Separate Peace Entertained by Those in Power—Government Wins Says Milukoff in Speaking of Clash With the Revolutionary Democracy.

WILL DEFEND COUNTRY

CHICAGO, May 10.—A special cable to the Chicago News, dated Petrograd, May 6 (delayed) and sent by Michael Farbman, after describing the clash between the Provisional Government and the revolutionary democracy, which, according to M. Milukoff, has resulted in a "great victory for the Government," says:

There is a tendency to pervert the expressed attitude of the revolutionary democracy towards peace by accusations of a desire for a separate peace. Prof. Milukoff in his speech to the crowd Thursday night tried to represent matters in such a light as if he had been urged to become a traitor to the allies' cause and conclude a separate peace with Germany.

These allegations against the democracy are credited to some extent even in Russia. I can imagine how largely they are spread and believed beyond Russia's borders, and how unfavourably they impress the allies. Far from that being the case, a separate peace is absolutely out of the question.

This ought to be known with certainty by Russia's allies. No Socialistic party or any representative organization of workers or soldiers admits the slightest possibility or desirability of a separate peace. Even those irresponsible groups which shout "Down with the war!" do not desire a separate peace. I wish to impress strongly the fact that the only conception of peace in Russia is one of universal peace—peace among all nations. And the only way to peace is by agreement with Russia's allies and common efforts with them.

The Russian democracy does not wish to stop the war at any price. It is as keen to defend the country as any imperialistic party could be, but it refuses to prolong the war for a single day in the name of any conquest or any obviously masked annexation.

Regular Meeting Of The Smith Township Council

The members of the Municipal Council of the Township of Smith met in the County Council chamber, Peterborough, on Saturday, May 5th, at ten o'clock, summoned by call of the Reeve. All the members were present, with Reeve McKee in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Mr. S. T. Milburn addressed the Council re some sheep lately destroyed by dogs. Reeve McKee pointed out that as the owners of the dogs were known, the matter was practically out of the control of the Council and that damages could be collected by the owners of the sheep.

By motion the Clerk was instructed to write any party or parties who were known to own or harbour any dog or dogs that were suspected of chasing or worrying sheep, that they were doing so contra to Sheep Protection Act, and were liable to a fine.

Complaints Received.

A number of complaints were received from ratepayers residing on the first concession about the bad condition of that portion of the boundary road, which under agreement belonged to Monaghan.

By motion the Clerk was instructed to write the Monaghan Council re the bad repair of the boundary road under their jurisdiction, requesting that steps be taken at any early date to have it repaired.

Yesterday's Grain Market Quotations

The government crop report issued Tuesday sent all former calculations topsy-turvey and the markets yesterday out of bounds. May wheat at Chicago jumped up 7½c above yesterday's at one stage, closing 1½c above Tuesday's close. There is now very little trading. One of the leading brokerage houses announced that they would take no more business outside of the Chicago market, thus cutting out the Winnipeg and other outside markets. The Board of Trade committee declined to give out any official quotations on Manitoba wheat or oats.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

FOUR WOMEN STRIKERS

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

After due minute deliberation Mrs. Henry Skaggs sent her son, Sammy, with three written notes to three wives in the neighborhood—Mrs. Perkins, Mrs. White and Mrs. Davis. They were asked to call at her house at 2 o'clock in the afternoon to help bring about a social revolution for the benefit of the female sex all over the world.

When the hour arrived the three women also arrived. They were very busy women, but anything that promised to benefit the sex aroused their sense of duty.

"What I have to say is this," began Mrs. Skaggs as she took the floor and cleared her voice. "The men are on a strike east, west, north and south. Some are striking for higher wages, but most of them want eight hours' work a day. Their claim is that no man can work more than eight hours a day and do his best and great numbers of them are completely tired out when the eight hours have expired.

"Have they given a thought to us women amid all this turmoil and confusion? Not a thought—not even one. We arise at 6 o'clock in the morning and are through with our housework about 9 in the evening. That makes fifteen hours' work for us, and most of the time we are on our feet. Poor man! He can't work more than eight hours a day without being tuckered out, and he thinks we can work fifteen without having the least cause for complaint. So it has always been and always will be unless we go at it and raise a revolution."

"Let us raise one!" was shouted in chorus.

"That's what I wanted to see you about, and I'm so glad you agree with me. We shall raise a revolution. We will raise it right here and now! From this village it will spread all over the known world, and if our sex in Eskimo land as well as at home do not bless us they deserve to be slaves forever."

So thought Mrs. Perkins, Mrs. Davis and Mrs. White, and the four women then and there entered into a conspiracy and perfected the details. Each one pledged herself to die rather than surrender, and each went home with a grim look on her face.

What befell Mrs. Skaggs befell the others. When her husband came home that evening she met him with a query:

"Henry, you are on a strike for eight hours a day?"

"Yes, dear," was the reply.

"Well, I want to say to you that, beginning Wednesday morning, I shall go on a strike myself. If you feel that you can't work more than eight hours a day I feel that I can't either. I work almost double that now and have worked so ever since we were married, and it's no wonder I look like an old woman at my age of thirty-eight. Have you any reasons to advance why I should not strike?"

"Not a single reason," he replied when she expected him to advance a dozen or more. "Your work is hard and long, and if you can manage to make it easier I shall do all I can to encourage you."

Mrs. Skaggs was much surprised and put out by the attitude of her husband, but she was grimly determined to carry out the conspiracy. When Wednesday morning came she said to her husband across the breakfast table:

"Henry, this is the day."

"Yes, this is the day," he quietly replied.

"But you will be home to lunch, as usual. But after that is cleared away the strike begins."

Soon after 2 o'clock and just as Mrs. Skaggs was getting interested in a book Mrs. Jinks, a colored woman of very ample proportions, entered the house. She was chasing the three Skaggs children before her, and as she took off her hat and made herself at home she said to their mother:

"Dose chill'en need to have dar ears cuffed, an' I'll make a great improvement in less dan a week. Dis floah ain't been swept, an' I'll tackle dat fust."

"And who on earth are you?" demanded the surprised Mrs. Skaggs as she closed her book and stood up.

"Why, I's Mrs. Jinks, of co'se," was the reply.

"But I didn't send for you."

"Of co'se not, but your husband cum fer me an' said I was to be de second relief. I cums on at 2 o'clock an' leaves at 10. Dat makes my eight hours, an' dunno' my time here don't you have too much to say about things. I knows all about runnin' a house an' don't need no biddin'."

"Now, then, Mrs. Jinks, or whatever your name is, you take yourself right out of here or I'll have a constable take you. You are not wanted here, and it's singular that my husband sent you."

"But you is all tired out wid your work an' am strikin' for eight hours," was the reply.

"And I'll be striking you if you don't move on. When it is time to get supper for my husband I shall do so."

When Mr. Skaggs came home he found a better supper than usual prepared for him, and his wife had slicked up a little in matters of dress. All he said as he took his accustomed seat was:

"I see, dear, that you have won your strike, and I am glad of it."

Mrs. Skaggs looked at him indignantly and reproachfully and made no reply. She had gone back to fifteen hours a day.

CANADA NEEDS HER FARMERS

The Empire is looking to Canada for food, and the farmer is the chief factor in its production. In these days of scarce help every farmer must work his hardest, and every farmer knows from painful experience that it is his back that first feels the strain. Almost every movement, whether with the plow, the fork, the hoe or in the harvest field, tests the muscles of the back and kidneys. A pain in the small of the back is the warning that inflammation, although slight at first, but persistent, has started in the kidneys or surrounding tissue.

Farmers, if you only knew how quickly Gin Pills soothe and heal the overworked and strained kidneys and restore perfect harmony between the kidneys and the bladder, making both work as nature intended them to do and in the process also relieve you of rheumatism, painful urination or other troubles incident to impaired kidneys, you would not delay a moment.

Gin Pills are also a gentle laxative and are wonderful, not only in their effect on the kidneys and bladder, but they keep the bowels in perfect condition.

We want every lame-backed farmer to try Gin Pills. Go to your dealer and buy a box. If you do not get relief, we will refund your money, or a free trial sample will be sent on request to National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 94

SLEW 400 NAVAL OFFICERS.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 4.—How the higher officers of the Russian Baltic fleet at Helsingfors, the capital of Finland, were slain during the Russian revolution and how the Admiral himself, though he had gone over to the revolutionists, was also killed, was related to-day by G. S. Westman, a shipbuilder of Helsingfors, who has come here to purchase supplies.

"During the night of March 16 I was awakened by shooting in the streets," he said. "Fighting continued for to days, the sailors of the Baltic fleet attacking their officers in their homes. I have heard estimates as high as 400 as the number of officers killed.

"Admiral Neppenin, one of Russia's ablest naval commanders, was among the killed, although he had gone over to the new Government, and was the man who arrested Governor General Seyn, later turning him over to the revolutionary chiefs. He was hated by the sailors. Leaving his ship the last day of the revolution, he noticed a sailor did not salute him. He reprimanded him, whereupon the sailor shot the Admiral.

"The sailors had lists of all the officers and their residences. They killed most of the high officers and spared the younger ones. The sailors did not harm a single civilian and maintained order in the city."

Nervous Headaches And Neuralgic Pains

Are the Surest Symptoms of Exhausted Nerves—Lasting Cure Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Peterborough, Ont., March 5. — Among the hundreds of cures being reported from this city as the result of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the most prominent symptoms are headaches and neuralgic pains. About one-fifth of all the blood in the human body is consumed in the brain in the manufacture of nerve force. When the blood gets thin and watery the nerves are starved and you have headaches, neuralgic and sciatic pains. Dr. Chases Nerve Food, by forming new, rich blood, affords lasting cure of such ailments.

Miss Edythe Cowles, 363 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "For some years I have suffered from nervousness, sleeplessness and a run-down system. Many times chloroform had to be resorted to to relieve the severe headaches I used to have. I had doctored for years, and had been advised that it would be necessary to have an operation, but I kept putting it off. Finally, I procured a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had taken many of the pills found that they were doing me good, so I continued the treatment. My headaches have ceased, I can now eat and sleep what I have nothing so well for many years. This is the only medicine I have taken, and I can give the full credit to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I have already recommended it to many of my friends."

Mrs. W. T. Abbott, 536 Patterson street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "My system was in a run-down condition, and I was troubled with nervousness and sleeplessness. For some time, also, I had been bothered with neuralgia, and, although I tried many remedies, it was without success. Upon the advice of a friend, I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found in five or six days that my neuralgia was cured, and I have not been troubled in this way since. I also find that now I can eat and sleep well, and I give full credit of this great benefit to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I might also mention that I had lost considerable in weight, but after using the Nerve Food I gained back the flesh I had lost. My husband has also found Dr. Chase's Nerve Food of great benefit to him, and uses it when he feels run down from overwork."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Fall wheat, $2.75.
Eggs, 35c to 37c.

Wheat has been steadily increasing in price almost daily, and the market remains firm at the top prices.

Eggs stored at this price can scarcely work through the channels of trade to the tables at less than 60c a dozen next winter. If fresh eggs are scarce at that time 70c a dozen for this class should be reasonable. This is alarming to the distributors whose volume of business depends on keeping prices down to a level where the people can buy. "There isn't a man on the street who does not want to keep prices down," said one dealer, when speaking of any "attempt" to raise prices.

GRAIN PRICES.

Wheat, per bush.	$2.75
Oats, per bush.	.80
Rye, per bush.	$1.25
Barley, per bush.	$1.15
Small peas, per bush.	$2.50
Blue peas, per bush.	$2.00
Buckwheat, per bush.	$1.25

HIDES.

The prices of hides are as follows:

Veal skins	25c to 28c
"Deacons" each	$1 to $1.50
Yearlings "runner-kip"	15c to 17c
Sheep skins	$1 to $3
Tallow, per lb.	7c to 8c
Washed wool, per lb.	45c to 47c
Unwashed wool, per lb.	35c to 37c

Matthews-Blackwell quote 16.25 for hogs.

Last week's sensations on the cheese board are set aside by some new ones this week of quite a different nature. The top of the week was made at Campbellford on Tuesday, when 26 9-16c was paid for 196 boxes. Out of total boardings of 14,238 only these 196 sold. All others were paralysed by a fear of future developments.

At New York there were rumours that a maximum of 18c would be established by the Canadian government and that there would be no cheese shipped to the United States, or American cheese cleared through Canadian ports.

The grain and flour situation is naturally attracting more attention in the Street than might be the case were shares more active.

Who is getting the benefit of the high prices of those two important commodities? This is one of the questions most frequently heard.

A prominent capitalist who is familiar with both grain and flour situations takes the view that the Imperial government is the biggest beneficiary as it has contracted for months ahead. This party said to-day:

"A Winnipeg telegram reveals the fact that the British government practically controls the surplus wheat in the Canadian Northwest, and it is understood that they also with France, own a large proportion of the supply in the United States. It is also stated that they own at least 75 per cent. of the flour that is being manufactured by the larger milling concerns throughout the Dominion.

"We are told that flour is now being shipped and has been contracted for to the end of August at prices ranging from three to five dollars per barrel less than those of to-day, so it is evidently not the grain buyer or the miller that is getting the benefit of the rise, but the Imperial government, who are feeding the armies at the front, and who realised months ago the world's shortage, and provided against it."

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it, entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

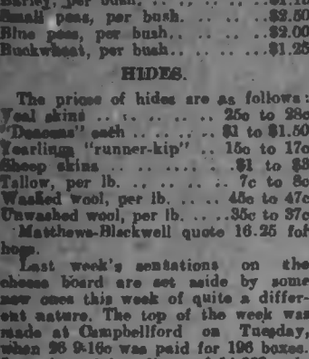
You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Peanut Sandwiches—Shell peanuts, chop fine, mix with dressing, and spread between bread, with a lettuce leaf between. Brown bread iv aor dom dwaom woinf wontw yaf is very nice to use, when the lettuce may be omitted.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

KOZYWRAP PATTERN.

By Anabel Worthington.



A bunywrap, such as is illustrated, is just what many mothers have been wishing for, so that it would be possible for baby to get his airing and to even sleep [illegible] old Jack Frost might find his way to him.

The body of this bunywrap is in cape effect of this illustration.

piece; the back extends over the front and buttons to it, fully protecting the feet, and a tab attached to the lower part of the sleeve and buttoned up on the front arm protects the hands. No matter how active the child he cannot become uncovered if wrapped in this garment. A woman who cannot always take the time to go out with the baby herself can feel sure that he will keep covered without her supervision if this bunywrap is chosen. A flannel pad is used inside the wrap.

The wrap should be of eiderdown, blanket robe material or like weave. A hood attached to the neck of the wrap is fitted with a drawstring for adjusting to the head size. It should be lined with something soft.

About all there is to do in making this garment is to sew a few seams, make some button holes and put buttons at spaces to correspond with them.

The bunywrap pattern No. 8,169 cuts in sizes 6 months, 1, 2 and 3 years. To make in size 1 requires 2¼ yards of 36 inch material, ⅛ yard facing for hood, 3⅛ yards ribbon to bind the edges and ¾ yard flannel for a pad.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of glass of water before breakfast each Jad Salts; take one tablespoonful in a morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

PALE, DELICATE GIRLS

Does your daughter inherit a delicate organization from you? The anaemia of young girls may be inherited or it may be caused by bad air unsuitable food, hasty and irregular eating, insufficient out-of-door exercise and not enough sleep and rest.

It comes on gradually, beginning with languor, indisposition to mental or bodily exertion, irritability and a feeling of fatigue. Later comes palpitation of the heart, headache, dizziness following a stooping position, frequent headaches, and breathlessness. In a majority of cases constipation is present. There may be no great loss of flesh, but usually the complexion takes on a greenish-yellow pallor.

Cases of this kind if neglected, become serious, but if taken in time there is no need to worry. The treatment is quite easy and simple. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which are free from any harmful or habit-forming drug are just the tonic needed to remedy this wretched state of health. Though it is not noticeable improvement actually begins with the first dose. As the blood is made rich and red the pallor leaves the face, strength and activity gradually return and if the treatment is continued until the last symptom disappears the danger of a relapse is very slight.

If any symptom of anaemia appears, prudence suggests that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be given at once, and the sooner they are taken the more speedily will the trouble be overcome. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HAD AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

For 5 or 6 Years

Diseases and disorders of the heart and nervous system have become frightfully prevalent of late years.

One can scarcely pick up a paper but he will find recorded instances of sudden deaths through heart failure, or of prominent men and women unable to prosecute their ordinary business or profession on account of a breaking down of the nervous system.

We do not desire to unnecessarily alarm anyone, but to sound a word of warning.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, has shooting pains through it, it is time to stop and think.

To all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N. B., writes: "I had awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At the present time my sister is using them for nervousness and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Many people devote a lot of time to digging out a creed which does not require them to do anything after they get it.

The British Make Progress South of Lens

The French Widen Their Wedge Into The German Lines

MORE GAINS ARE MADE BY FRENCH AND BRITISH TROOPS

General Nivelle Widens Wedge Into the German Lines and Repulses Heavy Attacks Along the Chemin Des Dames---British Advance South of Lens and Also to the East of Grecourt--Severe and Continuous Fighting Continues at Bullecourt

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official), May 10. — More gains by General Nivelle's French troops in repulsing an attack in the region of Chevreux and a widening of the French wedge in the German lines across the northern slope of the Plateau of Vauclerc were detailed in to-day's official statement. German counter attacks of great force were struck during the night against several parts of the French lines along the Chemin des Dames, the War Office said. All were unsuccessful. The most powerful of these blows was upon the positions taken by the French in the region of Chevreux. So successful were the French in repulsing this violent assault that they moved forward themselves in following it up. The capture of a fortified German position was announced in the official statement as the net result. On the northern slope of the Plateau of Vauclerc the French succeeded in widening their grip, taking a number of prisoners belonging to a new German division. There were patrol and skirmish engagements all along the remainder of the front.

LONDON, May 10.—With the British offensive temporarily deadlocked around Fresnoy and Bullecourt, Field Marshal Haig struck in a new direction to-day and captured a portion of the German front and support lines south of the Souches river, just south of Lens. His official report to-day announced the capture of a number of prisoners.

Despite the apparent deadlock at Bullecourt, the British Commander-in-Chief reported success and gains by his forces, in the fact of tremendous losses inflicted on the Germans in their repeated efforts to counter attack and shake the British grip. To the east of Grecourt Haig reported a further advance.

"At Bullecourt fighting in that neighbourhood yesterday was severe and continuous," Haig's report said. "We progressed despite repeated and costly enemy efforts to shake our hold on his positions, which were all unsuccessful.

"To the east of Grecourt our lines advanced, also to the south of the Souches River, where we captured a portion of the enemy's front and support lines and took a number of prisoners."

"Northeast of Lvein and south of Hulluch enemy raiding parties were driven off," the report continued. "To the north of Givenchy and La Bassee we carried out a successful raid."

PETROGRAD, May 10.—Resumption of artillery firing over nearly the entire Russian front was reported in to-day's official statement. The fire was especially heavy in the Dvina region. Near Zlotchoff a German attack failed with heavy losses to the enemy, the War Office said.

British Destroyers Chase the Enemy

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, May 10.—A destroyer action in which four British vessels pursued eleven German destroyers to within range of the batteries at Zeebrugge was announced in an Admiralty statement to-day. "One of the enemy destroyers had been hit by our fire," the statement said. The Admiralty did not specify the British destroyers engaged. The statement indicated the Germans, despite the superior force, made a running fight of it, withdrawing toward Zeebrugge.

Rear Admiral Tyrwhitt, who was in command of the British destroyers, reported one man wounded on the British ships. It was evident the German destroyers were seeking to raid the British east coasts. The British destroyers forced to give up the chase when they entered the German mined area near Zeebrugge.

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, May 10.—A British storming party which attacked German positions at Trois Sauvages to the north of St. Quentin, reached its objective early to-day, but was compelled to retire in a German counter attack.

The German forces were hastily reinforced and their superior weight literally pushed the British back from their gains.

Summer weather and summer skies to-day brought about a resumption of the general offensive-defensive aerial warfare. The air was literally full of aeroplanes, observation machines, fighting plants, bombing biplanes and balloons and dirigibles. Standing east of Vimy Ridge at early dawn to-day I saw a Prussian air fleet across the battle line far below, and swing around in an attack on a British "sausage" balloon. British planes circling near darted to the defence of the unwieldly gas bag and a long aerial battle ensued. The planes circled and swooped and turned and twisted seeking vantage. Finally the enemy turned tail and ran for home without inflicting any damage. Between Fournes and Wervicq alone fifteen German aeroplanes were fought during the morning by British patrol machines and battle planes. Two of these were promptly downed by the British, and two others forced to alight out of control of their pilots. In all this fighting the British lost just one plane.

SALONIKA, May 10.—Nine conspirators, charged with attempting to assassinate President Venizelos of the Greek Provisional Government, were arrested here. They confessed that they were acting under instructions of a committee in Athens.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 10.—Joseph B. Foraker, 71, former United States Senator and Governor of Ohio, died here to-day.

PARIS, May 10.—The American Flying Corps at the front has recently brought down six German aeroplanes within the French lines, and compelled several to land within the German lines.

LONDON, May 10.—Two more British hospital ships have been sunk by German submarines, Chancellor Bonar Law announced to-day. He declined to state in answer to questions in the House, whether Britain had decided to make any reprisals.

FRANK APPEAL TO RUSSIANS TO FORM A COALITION

Russia's Future is Darkly Menaced by Quarrel Between the Provisional Government and Soldiers' and Workmen's Committee

GOMPER'S APPEAL

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, May 10.—Frank admission that free Russia's future is darkly menaced by the quarrel between the Duma Provisional government and the Soldiers' and Workmen's committee, was made in striking phrases of a proclamation posted today throughout Petrograd inviting a coalition government. The Provisional government believes it a duty to declare frankly this state of things may lead to internal disorders, defeat at the front, with the phantom of anarchy and civil war threatening the liberty which arises before Russia."

The Governments complete frankness in this appeal to the people created favourable response to-day. All newspapers comment at length on it.

The appeal of Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labour, to Russian workmen to stand by the Government and firm for freedom, was widely published here to-day.

MOTHER'S DAY

Next Sunday will be "Mother's Day," and will be commemorated by the wearing of a carnation in memory or in honour of our mothers.

True, they should be honoured every day in the year, but let next Sunday be a special day, and let us create in our fair city an atmosphere of loving remembrance of those mothers who have gone from us, and loving regard for those who are still with us.

The Playgrounds' Association will have for sale plenty of beautiful carnations. Their object is incidentally to help the playgrounds, but primarily to establish "Mother's Day" in Peterborough. The flowers will be sold on Saturday from several centres and on the streets.

CAPT. R. E. PICARD OF PETERBORO' MEETS DEATH AT THE FRONT

Well Known Local Officer Killed in Action on May 3rd--Pte. E. G. Avery is Dangerously Ill--Interesting Letters From Overseas--To-day's General Military News.

KILLED IN ACTION.

DANGEROUSLY ILL.

Pte. E. G. Avery, late 93rd Battalion, Cordova Mines.

CAPT. R. E. PICARD.

Capt. Romulus E. Picard, of Peterborough, son of Mr. Jos. Picard, Sr., of H. Le Brun and Co., has been added to the long list of Peterborough soldiers who have given their lives for the Empire. This morning Mr. Picard received the tragic news from Ottawa that his son is officially reported killed in action on May 3 the day the Canadians wrested Fresnoy from the Germans.

Capt. Picard was born in Peterborough, and had lived all his life in this city until a couple of years ago, when he accepted a position as draughtsman with a St. Catharines firm. Previous to going to St. Catharines he had been employed in a similar position with the Canadian General Electric Company. He went overseas as a subaltern with the 31st Battalion and was transferred to the 3rd Battalion at the front, fighting with the Toronto unit during the battle of the Somme. He was promoted to captain at the front last winter. Capt. Picard was widely known in Peterborough and the news of his death will come as a shock to a large circle of friends. He was a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and was a splendid type of Canadian manhood.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Picard, Lock street, four brothers, Messrs. L. J. and Leo Picard of Peterborough, Mr. E. A. Picard of St. Catharines, and Mr. A. A. Picard of New York, and three sisters, Mrs. Geo. Pope of Lindsay, Miss Beatrice at home, and Sister Marie, at Mount St. Joseph, Peterborough.

PTE. E. G. AVERY.

The casualty list issued from Ottawa yesterday afternoon contained the name of another member of the 93rd Battalion, No. 195758 Pte. E. G. Avery, of Cordova Mines, who is officially reported dangerously ill. Pte. Avery enlisted with the Peterborough county unit in March of last year.

PTE. WALTER PEACE.

In connection with the report of the death in action of Pte. Walter Peace, of the 93rd Battalion, the Examiner stated yesterday that Pte. Peace had no relatives in Peterborough. On the contrary, his wife and two children reside on Cameron street, where they have lived for some time. A sister and a niece live in Toronto. Mrs. Peace and her family will have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

Mrs. Geo. Dwyer, Browntown, has received a letter from her husband, Pte. Geo. Dwyer, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, stating that he has been invalided back to England. "Just a few lines," he writes, on April 18th, "to let you know that I am back in England, safe again. I arrived Sunday morning at Southampton. I am at present at Seaforth. This is not the base that I belong to and am awaiting for transportation to Shoreham. I have not gained much strength since I left the hospital."

Writing from hospital at Southend-on-Sea, England, to his wife at 249 Simcoe street, Pte. C. W. Wiggins of Peterborough, who went over seas with the 93rd Battalion, gives some interesting details about the fighting at Vimy, in which he was wounded, after being in the trenches six months with the 1st Battalion. He says, in part:

We have done splendid work this week. You cannot imagine what it was like. The Germans have had enough I tell you. The poor devils, they were so paralyzed with fear that they did not know what happened to them. How they escaped I don't know, under such a withering fire, as we gave them. We started at 5.30 and there were a thousand guns, all told, and they started like one gun. Talk about a row; it was deafening. It was a terrible day; raining when we started, and it kept on until noon. I got wounded in the German third line trench. I had to walk to a place called Mount St. Elis, about four miles and a half, before I got my leg dressed. I was covered with mud to my waist and was played right out when I got there. I had a lunch and then I walked another three miles, then rode on a motor lorrie to a place called Hurson. We stayed there until 10 o'clock, when 500 of us were put on to a train for Boulogne. Then they shipped us to Chatham. We remained there one night, and then to Southend-on-Sea; so you see we did not get much rest until we got here.

In a letter, Pte. Wiggins states that his wounded leg is doing splendidly, and that he expected to be able to get up again soon.

Calgary, Alta., May 9.—Alberta Great War Veterans, in convention here, passed resolutions favouring conscription of single men and of those married since the beginning of the war, and pensions of $1,200 to those totally disabled in service and land grants of 320 acres to returned soldiers.

Mrs. S. Curtis, 229 McGill street, has received the following letter from her husband, Pte. S. Curtis:

Dear Wife,—I guess you will be surprised to know that I am back in England. I was taken sick suddenly on Easter Monday and was sent down to the Canadian Hospital at Boulogne and was marked to be sent to England, but had to wait a week before I could get on a boat. The Germans had sunk two hospital ships about four days before we came across in mid channel so I happen to be lucky. Well, it seems a treat to be in a good bed for awhile instead of lying in a trench half full of water and wondering where you would be the next minute, and to be out of the sound of shells bursting all around you, wondering whether one is going to get you or not. Thank God I am in a safe place for a while, but I guess I shall have to go back when I get better. I have just seen the doctor and he says I have trench fever and rheumatism.

Pte. Curtis has been in the trenches fifteen months and seen some hard fighting.

Mrs. Curtis has a brother who has been missing for six months. He was in an English regiment.

THE CANADIANS DID NOT LOSE FRESNOY

CAPT. R. E. PICARD, Peterborough officer, who is officially reported killed in action on May 3, the day the Canadians captured Fresnoy.

PRAISE FOR CANADIANS

By Philip Gibbs

War Correspondents' Headquarters, May 9.—The bombardment I described yesterday was the preliminary of a strong attack against our position in and around Fresnoy. Upon this village and the neighboring ground the enemy concentrated everything he has in artillery which can be directed on this sector of the front, and in addition to ordinary high explosives and shrapnel flung a storm of gas shells wherever he thought we had battery positions. Fresnoy itself had been a difficult place to hold since the Canadians took it so gallantly on May 3. Having Acheville to the north of it and Oppy to the south, it jutted out like a square-walled bastion with exposed sides, along which at the time of capture the Canadians had to form defensive flanks. The enemy had marked it down for an attack, and for several days made strong counter-thrusts on each side of it in order to prevent our troops from getting forward to straighten out the line.

ENGLISH BEAR THE BRUNT.

It was the English troops who had to bear the brunt of their concentrated fury, timed for yesterday's dawn. The German Army Corps Staff evidently decided to attack with the greatest strength possible on a narrow front, which was already held by their best troops. North and south of Acheville they had the Fourth Guards Division and north and south of Oppy the First Guards Reserve Division. Round about Fresnoy was the Fifteenth Reserve Division, and to stiffen and support this the German Guards sideslipped down a thousand yards. As further precautions against any weakness on the part of the Fifteenth Reserve Division, already tried by our shell fire, fresh troops of the Fifth Bavarian were suddenly brought up, and after the first attack yesterday morning, passed through the lines of the Fifteenth, and, in dense column formation went forward like a battering ram against the English troops, who had already suffered in the intense bombardment. Canadian officers are full of praise for the dogged spirit of the south country English lads, who held on in spite of the frightful fire, served machine guns to the last, and only fell back from the advanced lines when, for a time, Fresnoy village was a heap of ruins, like all these villages of the war, and became a death-trap in which no man could stay alive. They have already gained back part of the lost ground, and hold it at the

BIG SUPPLY OF TOBACCO HAS BEEN SENT TO THE FRONT

Tobacco Funds Committee of Overseas Club However Report That More Funds Are Needed to Supply All the Peterboro' Boys

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE

An important meeting of the Tobacco Fund Committee of the Overseas Club was held last evening in the Bank of Montreal Chambers

Mr. H. Dearle presented the following report: Total amount collected, 1915, $702.84; 1916, $1,314.50; 1917, $699.53.

We have a balance on hand of $413.86, part of which will be sent overseas this week, and the balance as soon as the necessary cards can be prepared to accompany the packages.

This amount represents 10,868 packages containing 524,400 cigarettes, 2,174 lbs. of tobacco with papers, matches, etc., or sufficient smoking material to last an ordinary heavy smoker 208 years.

Assuming that we have 1,000 Peterborough men in the trenches in the various services, we require to send them a package a week —$1,000 a month and we are not averaging $200.

The main reason for the falling off of subscriptions seems to be the failure of the recipients of the packages to acknowledge the receipt of them on the card which is provided for this purpose. There are obviously many reasons why these cards are not returned, but these do not seem to be readily apparent to the average subscriber, who appears to consider that his own contribution should at any rate be acknowledged.

There also seems to be trouble in having packages delivered addressed personally to individuals, and some subscriptions have been lost on this account. Letters have been received from men at the front that they have not received any tobacco although we know packages have been constantly addressed to them personally.

I have made these matters the subject of several letters to Mr. Evelyn Wrench, the Secretary of the Fund in London, England, and have also written several men at the front to ensure that so far as possible the cards are returned to the donors of the tobacco. No replies are yet to hand.

A display of the cards we have received to date might with advantages be made, or a space reserved in the paper for the reproduction of one each evening.

H. DEARLE.

From a perusal of the report it will be seen that the Committee have sent the boys from Peterborough, who are in the trenches, a large amount of tobacco, cigarettes etc., but the supply is far short of the demand.

Arrangements are being made to hold the first moonlight excursion of the season, and in other ways to augment the funds of the Club for the purpose of securing and forwarding tobacco to the Peterborough boys.

Lieut. Stock 93rd Battalion Is Wounded

Lieut. A. P. Stock, who went overseas as a subaltern with the 93rd Battalion, and who has been at the front all winter with another Canadian battalion to which he was transferred, has been wounded in the recent fighting, according to an official message from Ottawa, received by his wife this morning. Lieut. Stock was one of the first officers to be appointed to the 93rd Battalion and was a subaltern with A Company of the battalion.

WOMAN REASONING.

Superficial thinkers or unthinking speakers are condemning woman suffrage and declaring all women as unfit for political responsibility of any kind—beginning with using the ballot—because Miss Jeannette Rankin, the only woman elected to the United States House of Representatives, has in some way disappointed expectations—voted against the resolution that brought the United States into the war. Of course to the thinking of many, Miss Rankin was wrong. But to condemn all women as unfit for politics because one has disappointed certain expectations, is the folly of unfairness. It is known that two prominent male politicians, Senators Lodge and Gronna, voted against the same war resolution. Are we to condemn all male politicians and declare that men are unfit to have the ballot or to share in political service? It would be just as reasonable, and just as unreasonable, to adopt such a conclusion as to argue condemnation of woman suffrage and woman's part in politics from a few months' experience with the action of one woman in a representative assembly, who to the natural physical and emotional weaknesses of her sex, added the perhaps male quality of subservancy to the character of opinion of the constituency she represented.

SAVING AND PRODUCTION.

The demands of the war require that we act warily, not only energetically but reasonably. There is insistent call for the total prohibition of the manufacture, sale and importation of strong drink. While in the abstract meeting such appeal would be right, there are substantial reasons why it should not be met and these reasons are founded upon the same ground as the demand itself—to increase efficiency.

Those who demand total prohibition of manufacture, import and sale of alcohol are in one sense demanding a course of action that would be contrary to the interest of our greatest efficiency in conducting measures of war assistance. Sir George Foster, speaking in the House to a resolution calling upon the government "to take steps to have the supply of grain to brewers and distillers immediately discontinued," gave some interesting information. He said the distilleries of Canada were manufacturing large quantities of alcohol for use in making high explosives, in which alcohol was a necessary material, to help Canadians win the battles which they were winning at the front. He pointed out that the case was different with the breweries, which consumed in their operations an average of 100 million bushels of barley per year.

If it is true, as claimed, that the distilleries of Canada are making little or no whisky—a beverage—but producing large quantities of alcohol, then we can't meddle with the supply of grain to distilleries. Munitions are needed as much as provisions, though without adequate food provision we cannot have the munitions. But we can certainly save the hundred million pounds of barley now converted into beer, and put them to better use. Sir George in answer to the objection, that curtailing the use of barley in breweries, would be hard on the farmers of the west, who, owing to the late season, would in some places chiefly grow barley, said that the demand might not be lessened, and that barley might have to be used for bread, if not here, in Britain. We in Canada, had no idea, he continued, of the sacrifices Britain was making. In Britain, he said, not an ounce of white bread could be procured. The people had to eat barley-bread and rye-bread.

Great Britain is making those great sacrifices without a protest or murmur, and Canada should bring itself to the point of living up to the reputation for sacrifice to accomplish which our soldiers in the ranks are giving us. We can certainly, as good business and patriotism, give up our beer, close our breweries, and convert millions of barley into bread. If we don't need it at home for that purpose, we can send it to the Mother Country, where it will be welcomed. We grumble because we have to pay twenty cents for a loaf of bread in Peterborough, but in the Mother Country many would be glad to get a loaf at twice that figure—for as Sir George Foster says, no white bread can be got for love or money—especially for love.

The lesson of all this agitation for saving and production is summed up in the declaration of Sir George Foster, in closing his remarks. He said:

"No matter what a man's personal predilection, the irresistible conclusion is that at the present time whatever can be saved must be saved, and whatever can be produced must be produced."

The intimation involved in this sentence and the hearty "hear, hear" of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, show that both the government leader pro tem., and the leader of the Opposition, are in sympathy with the proposal to prevent the waste of food material upon a man wasting product.

THE FUEL PROBLEM.

The present discussion in regard to the city coal supply situation, is natural and adoption of a municipal coal yard, immediately justifiable, though there is reasonable room for doubt whether that would be a solution of the problem. If the reasons for the shortage of fuel supply, are purely local and artificial, then it might do good, but if the trouble reaches as far back as the mines, a municipal coal yard would be confronted with the same conditions that are claimed to hamper the operations of local dealers in coal. At the best, however, a municipal coal yard or its equivalent, would only be a partial and temporary, not a radical and permanent, solution, of the problem, the puzzle of fuel supply.

Scarcity and difficulty of obtaining adequate supply of black coal, naturally suggests attention to the possibility of utilising our almost unlimited and inexhaustible supply of "white coal"—electric energy. Coal deposits will become exhausted, but the sources of electricity—our waters— are inexhaustible; to adapt the language of Tennyson's Brook, —mines may come and mines may go but we go on forever. Ontario has immense supplies of electrical energy, virtually under our Hydro-Electric system, under municipal control. The possibilities of the utilisation of electricity for popular and domestic purposes has had so far only surface exploitation. Its uses in lighting and power production have been successfully tested. But comparatively little has been done in the utilization of electricity for heating and cooking purposes. That it is capable of practical employment for these purposes, has been demonstrated; but we have not yet hit upon the means of making the use of electricity for these purposes economically possible—to the extent of popular ability to take advantage of it.

Electricity for heating—on a limited scale—and cooking, is a feasible source of energy in regard to the price at which it can be secured by householders, but the prohibitory element to general use is the high cost of the medium—the stove for cooking purposes the first sixty for electrical current, constitutes no attraction to the average householder, in view of the investment of fifty or sixty dollars in a practicable electric cooking range.

To make electricity popular and its use for domestic purposes general, a cheap stove must be produced—at a price within the reach of the average householder. It seems that it would be easily possible with some inventive genius at work and some system of experiment directed to this end to produce such a stove. When the bicycle was first introduced the cost was from $75 to $100. To-day in spite of the sharp advance in the cost of materials and labour, an even better machine can be bought for from $25 to $30. The same comparison applies to autos, and why should not, with proper steps taken, the same apply to electric stoves? One cause of the high price of electric stoves is the limited demand, a cause that would be removed by the production of a cheaper article. If this is possible, some philanthropist should get to work in producing it. Not only would his financial reward be great but the public benefit would be greater and help would be provided to solve the problem of overcoming or neutralising the disadvantages of coal shortage.

"But A Mother Never Forgets" Says Scotland's Great Singer

By Harry Lauder

Sitting in my little parlor—Mrs. Lauder on one side of the fire and I on the other side of the fire—we came to the conclusion that I might say a few words to the mothers of soldiers.

I may mention here that Mrs. Lauder is a great woman and far cleverer than I. And it was natural when I thought of writing such a thing as this present article that I should ask her advice. So you'll understand that the following words came equally from Mrs. Lauder and myself.

Nobody but a mother can understand what she gives up, when she gives up her son. There's a tie between father and son which can never be broken, and the loss of my boy leaves me with a sinking, broken, lonely feeling round the heart. For we were pals, my boy and I.

But the mother's loss! My dear wife bears it very quietly, and very quietly at such moments as these she tells me a little of what she feels.

From birth up the child is so near to her—from the time when somebody tells her "It's a boy!" to the time when she tells her husband with glad and tearful wonder: "He's a man, now, John," or "Harry," as the case may be.

At first he's just a wee bundle in her arms. And how she has to care for him then! Every moment of the day and night her thoughts are with him. Such a to-do with feeding and minding and soothing! Such a dressing and undressing! Such a making and making fine of baby clothes! Such a ceaseless watch and guard to keep away the thousand little ills that baby flesh is heir to. The wee bairn is still part of her, and his faintest cry goes through her heart.

Oh, be sure that the mother of a dead soldier sees her son as he was in those old days. Be sure that in the lonely night watches, in fancy she still holds him against her breast, rocking him gently to sleep, and crooning over him old world songs her mother sang to her. He was a great strapping fellow when he went out to war—six feet, maybe, with broad shoulders and fierce moustache. But to his mother he is always, first and foremost, that wee bundle in her arms.

SHE REMEMBERS NOW.

And then he learns to toddle. That's a grand day when he first toddles from his mammy to his daddy and back again. And he learns to talk. Was ever poetry as wonderful as those nonsense baby words? And now he's hanging at her skirts all day, peering from behind them at the great world and the postman. And now he's breeched. His daddy's proud man, and may be his mother is proud, too. Yet she sighs as she folds up the baby petticoats and puts them in the press with a sprig of lavender and a tear.

Care for him! How a mother has to care! All the childish mishaps, ay! and all the childish naughtiness fall upon her. 'Tis she must send him out to school with shining morning face, and welcome him back to dinner—black from head to foot from a roll in the mud with lang Sandy Tamson's Sandy. Oh, he'll vex her often enough (what lad that is worth his salt doesn't); but she's proud of him, he's the apple of her eye, and even her severest reproofs are caresses.

All this the mother remembers now, as she sits with her man, or maybe by herself, at the fireside. Those childish hands still pull at her skirts, that childish treble still echoes round the house. A heavy-footed young rascal comes clattering down the stairs and a beloved little voice seems to ask: "Mither, should I buy some sweeties wi' ma penny?"

More, much more, she remembers. She remembers the boy growing up into the man; she remembers the jealous pang she had when first his eyes were cast upon the lassies. She remembers him passing from school to work, or to college. Perhaps he does not like to tell. But he still comes to his mammy when he's hurt. And what a pride she has in his achievements! How her heart exults, though only a flash in her eyes betrays her pride when she hears one neighbour say to another: "Rab Anderson's Wully is a clever boy!"

THINKS OF HIM NIGHT AND DAY.

Care for him? Does she not still care for him night and day? Has she not planned and prepared for him since his birth? Does she not still plan and prepare for him? Is she not always dreamed of what her body will become Does not all that has been, and all that might have been, flash before her eyes, as she sits lonely before the fire, and knows that it is all over, and knows she will never see her son again.

Never again? Blot out those words! She knows she will see him again. She knows it as surely as that the fire burns before her and the wind whistles in the street. Not on this earth, not with these poor eyes that have looked upon him so often and with such fond love. Not here, oh, not here, dear brave mothers, but somewhere, else, where love is never more parted from true love, and mothers and fathers are never more parted from their sons.

This is her consolation; this is her strength. This gives her the courage to face the world and her daily round of duties, though her heart seems gone. God for His own good purpose has taken this boy. Well, she will just bow her head and endure—and wait. After all, it is only a few years of waiting. Then she will hold him by the strong shoulders and look into his face again.

God knows it is hard enough for a man to bear the loss. Yet the man goes out into the world; he takes up his work and in the sights and rounds of everyday life he will not be constantly reminded of his loss.

EVERY MOMENT REMINDS HER

The mother stays at home—in the home where once he was! And every moment she is reminded of her boy. Every room is full of his presence. In this chair he sat; here he played; at this table he did his lessons. That iron mould in the table cover was an ink stain once. This is his bedroom.

Seated beside her there she oftimes crooned a low song until the little sleeper stirred no more, and the room grew so quiet that you could hear the night air nudging at the window-pane.

Supposing all that, supposing all those memories were really buried out in France. Why should the mother so bereft live on?

But just here, in the old house, relief comes to her. These are not dead memories. She does really feel her boy beside her, feel his arm around her neck, hear his voice, feel his cheek against her cheek. The poor, heroic flesh of her boy is out in France, but he himself is here, here now, nearer to her than he has ever been.

So the brave woman tells herself over and over again, yet cannot stifle the dull aching of her heart.

Since I have learned what sorrow means I have thought much of you, mothers of our dead soldiers, and wondered at your splendid courage and resolute faith. The times are hard and some of you do not lead easy lives. Yet you never falter. We could well have forgiven you had you cursed the country which demanded of you this strenuous sacrifice. Your patriotism puts us men to shame.

And in the hearts of many of you there is no thought of mere revenge. Just now I said to Mrs. Lauder: "If only I could go out as a sniper and get two for my one." And she said to me: "Harry, Harry! Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord." Oh, women women! We are dirt compared with you.

Yet to Mrs. Lauder John was more than most sons are to their mothers. For I was often away from home, and they were always together. When at last I had more time to be with him I found him a man and my equal. That was great, too, but his mother had walked with him up the years.

GOD'S JUSTICE BE DONE.

All the same, my wife has no patience with the sentimental cowards who would let murderers escape without punishment. Let God's justice be done, she says. And, so she hopes that if the Kaiser is taken it will not be by the British. She knows our softness when our blood is not up. But if the French take him they will give him his deserts.

And what would you think of us, mother, if we men failed in our great purpose and were false to you and your sons? You would esteem us little better than those unmentionable things fit for service in every way except the way of courage who let brave men go out to die for them. You accept your loss because of the greatness of our cause. What, then, if we betray that cause?

Your sons went forth to battle with no mean purpose in their hearts. A dear friend of my boy's has written to us: "He has died for the cause he believed to be the best and greatest that had ever been at stake in the world—the freedom of his country. He gave his life—not impulsively, nor in adventurous recklessness—but with a settled enthusiasm belonging to the depth, and not the tumult of the soul."

In that spirit our sons went out to fight, in that spirit they died. And in that spirit, by God's help, we will endure, oh mothers of Britain, till the cause they fought for is triumphant.

BRITAIN HIRES SEIZED SHIPS FROM PORTUGAL

LISBON.—Sixty of the seventy-six German merchant steamships which were in Portuguese ports when Portugal entered the war and which were promptly seized by the government have been turned over to Great Britain on a rental basis. England has rented the ships for $7,000,000 a year to be paid after the war.

What will become of the ships after the war, whether they will become the permanent property of Portugal or England or go back to Germany is much in doubt. But the prevailing idea is that the ships will go into Portugal's merchant marine, thus bringing it up to rather respectable proportions. The renting of the ships to England has caused a good deal of criticism, particularly at this time, when the lack of merchant ships is sending up the cost of living and disturbing the whole range of Portugal's exports and imports.

One of the most serious results from the lack of shipping is the coal famine gradually spreading over the country and affecting all branches of industry as well as domestic life. Ordinarily coal costs about $6.50 a ton, but the price now is $37 to $40 a ton.

Despite the pinch on shipping, Portugal had more foreign trade last year than it had before the war. For Lisbon alone the exports increased last year $14,000,000 over the previous year and the imports increased $20,000,000. The trade with the United States was particularly active, increasing about fifty per cent over the previous year. One of the chief causes for this increase was the call for American goods to take the place of German goods now shut out of the market.

Portugal's island colonies are also sharing in the shifting of trade away from Germany and toward the United States. Both Maderia and the Cape Verde Islands about doubled their business with America last year, largely because of the falling off of trade with Germany.

The submarine danger since February 1 last has interfered seriously with two Portugal products, wine and cork, and the British embargo on luxuries has further hit the wine trade, as England bought more wine from Portugal than from the great wine centre, is feeling the chief effect of the cutting off of wine shipments and the depression is spreading throughout the regions which produce the famous ports and sherries. There were 150,000,000 gallons of these wines produced last year and a considerable part of this huge product is locked up here, a drag on the home market.

France, Sunday, April 8.

I am writing to you on behalf of my friend, Pte. McCall and myself to than you and the ladies of the Kitchener League for your kindness in sending a bundle of socks to Pte. Darwin for distribution among the boys of the 93rd Battalion. Pte. Darwin gave us two pairs each and I can assure you they will be very comfortable and useful. Again thanking you for your kindness, I remain.

Pte. W. L. Evans, No. 195868
First Canadian Labour Battalion, France.
(formerly of the 93rd.)

Somewhere in France,

April 8, 1917.

Dear Friend,—Just a few lines to let you know I got the parcel from the Canadian Kitchener League and we are all thankful to you for the same. I may say that I gave them around to the boys of the 93rd Battalion who were drafted into the 1st Canadian Labour Battalion and I can tell you that they appreciated them very much as they come in very handy when we get our feet wet. We have been having some very cool and wet weather lately, but to-day is the first spring day we have had for some time and I hope it will stay fine and dry now and hope the work you ladies are doing for us boys at the front will be crowned with success. I also got your letter two weeks before the socks came and I must thank you again and all the rest of the Peterborough boys that are with me thank you the same for your kindness to us.

Yours truly,
Pte. J. H. Darwin,
1st Canadian Labour Batt.,
(late 93rd Battalion).

France, April 8th.

To the members of the Kitchener Club:

Dear Friends,—Your parcel of socks sent by Mrs. Armstrong to J. Darwin was distributed by him last evening to the members of the 93rd who are in this battalion, and thankfully received. Although we were not at present scarce of clothing, still it gave us very much pleasure to know that the people of the dear old city have not forgotten us as members of the 93rd Battalion, even if it has been our lot to be transferred to another battalion.

There are only nine of us in this part of the country as far as I know, and we are as one family. Every one is benefitted by what comes from Peterborough, and although we will be very glad again to walk up George street, still we have more desire to see the end of the war, so that we have a re-union of our battalion and know how many of us are left to answer the roll call.

Again thanking you for your kindness.

Pte. David Miller,
1st Canadian Labour Batt.,
(formerly of the 93rd.)

If Your Hair Is Coming Out Read This

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and falling hair who, having tried nearly every advertised hair-tonic and hair-grower without results, have resigned themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless; the following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness, and is also unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original colour, stopping hair from falling out and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not make the hair greasy, and can be put up by any druggist; Bay Rum, 6 ounces; Lavona de Composee, 2 ounces; Menthol Crystals, one-half drachm. If you wish it perfumed, add 1 drachm of your favourite perfume. This preparation is highly recommended by physicians and specialists and is absolutely harmless, as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics. Ladies should be careful not to apply to face or where hair is not desired.

WILL BITE GRANITE SAYS MR. SUNDAY

"I am not one of those who believe that the Kaiser can make President Wilson bite granite!" shouted Billy Sunday before an audience of 14,000 persons in New York, who rose to their feet with a tumultuous yell of enthusiastic cheering. Another wave of applause and cheers swept the tabernacle when he said:

"If he does there will be 100,000,000 of us biting it with him, and I will stand by him and help him take the last bite."

Several hundred college and high school students were among Mr. Sunday's hearers, and the evangelist aimed much of his discourse at them.

"Patches on your pants are better than pawn tickets in your pockets," was one of the epigrams he hurled at them, and which caused a gale of laughter to sweep the throng. His sermon was based on the story of Samson, the Jewish hero, who was led to his ruin by Delilah, his Philistine wife.

After drawing a vivid picture of Samson's troubles and showing the young men how that stronge man of Scripture failed by letting a woman fool him with her "gazelle eyes and sniffles and curls," the evangelist leaped to present-day conditions in the metropolis and with all his "pepperino" put it up to the students to get a running start on life.

Millions Are Clean.

"I am not one of those who think that young men are all bad," the preacher cried after he had warned them of the easy way to hell. "Millions of them are clean and pure, the salt of the land. Look at them shutting their books through the country when Uncle Sam calls, and standing erect, ready to rush to the colors and to pour out their lives for their land."

In this day with the world afire and when they are preparing to rush to register and then to rush to the trenches, Mr. Sunday said it was more urgent than ever in the history of the nation for young men to pause and give heed to their souls.

Gateway to Hell.

Delilah was the lightning express that swept Samson to his ruin, Billy said, cautioning the young men to pick their company and fall in love right when they do it. Telling of Samson's latter life, Billy said:

"It is hard to have to come down in the world; it is hard to come back to New York and eat in a stale beer joint when you have been eating in the St. Regis."

The gateway to hell is filled with stained glass, the evangelist cautioned the students, and he advised them to look at the "ragged, bleary-eyed, bloat-faced bum" who is kicked out of the back door of a saloon. "Look at the grist before you jump into the hopper," he advised. Here are some of Billy's "don't" for young men:

"Don't start gambling, because the moment you do the devil has got a rope around your neck.

"Don't spend more than you earn; the devil works harder to get a young man in debt than to get an old man to rob a bank.

"Don't buy clothes on credit; wear patches rather than togs owned by a tailor.

"Don't eat at Sherry's, the Vanderbilt, the Astor, the Savoy or any other swell place unless you have got the price. There is more satisfaction in getting a bowl of soup and a sinker in a beanery, where it suits your pile."

The delegations of students represented practically all the universities, colleges and high schools. Among the first trail hitters were several students from the Horace Mann School. They were followed by a few bluejackets, then came two men who walked with unsteady gait, a score of Japanese and Chinese young men, and children, and more students.

LETTER FROM EYEWITNESS OF LINCOLN MURDER COMES TO LIGHT

When President Lincoln was shot in Ford's Theatre in Washington on the evening of April 14, 1865, a young medical student, a graduate of Princeton University, who was sitting just beneath the President's box, saw the tragedy and took an active part in the pursuit of Wilkes Booth, the assassin. Two days later this young student, James Suydam Knox, wrote a letter to his father, in which he graphically described the tragedy and told of the part which he played in the episode.

Knox died in 1892, and his widow has recently presented to Princeton a copy of this interesting letter, which, so far as can be learned, has never come to the attention of Lincoln biographers. It appeared in print for the first time in The Princeton Alumni Weekly during the last week.

It will be remembered that Booth had entered the President's box from the rear and, after shooting the President, jumped from the box to the stage and made his escape through the back door. Knox seems to have been one of the few in the theatre who realized what had happened, and he was one of the two men who tried to capture Booth.

On Sunday, April 16th, 1865, Mr. Knox wrote to his father, as follows:

Washington, D. C.,

Dear Father.—It is with sad feelings that I take up my pen to address you. Last Friday night, at 10 o'clock I witnessed the saddest tragedy ever enacted in this country. Notwithstanding my promise to you not to visit the theatre, I could not resist the temptation to see General Grant and the President, and when the cutain at Ford's rose on the play of "Our American Cousin," my roommate and I were seated in the second row of orchestra seats just beneath the President's box. The President entered the theatre at 8.30 o'clock amid deafening cheers, and the rising of all. Everything was cheerful, and never was our Magistrate more enthusiastically welcomed or more happy. Many pleasant allusions were made to him in the play, to which the audience gave deafening responses, while Mr. Lincoln laughed heartily and bowed frequently to the gratified people. Just after the third act, and before the scenes were shifted, a muffled pistol shot was heard, and a man sprang wildly from the national box, partially tearing down the flag, then shouting "Sic semper tyrannis," the South is avenged," with brandished dagger rushed across the stag and disappeared. The whole theatre was paralyzed.

But two men sprang for the stage, a Mr. Stewart and myself. Both of us were familiar with the play, and suspected the fearful tragedy. We rushed after the murderer, and Mr. Stewart, being familiar with the passages, reached the rear door in time to see him spring on his horse and ride off. I became lost amid the scenery and was obliged to return. My roommate had followed me and secured the murderer's hat. The shrill cry of murder from Mrs. Lincoln first roused the terrified audience, and in an instant the uproar was terrible. The silence of death was broken by shouts of 'Kill him!' "Hang him," and strong men went and cursed and tore the seats in the impotence of their anger, while Mrs. Lincoln, on her knees, uttered shriek after shriek at the feet of the dying President.

Finally the theatre was cleared, and the President removed. Still greater was the excitement in the city. Rumours of the murder of Secretary Seward and his son reached us as we gained the street. Mounted patrols dashed everywhere, bells tolled the alram, and excitet crowds rushed about the avenues. Despair was on every countenance and black horror brooded over the city. Until long after midnight I was detained at Police Headquarters, giving my evidence, and when I sought my room, in a distant part of the city, dark clouds had gathered in the heavens, and soldiers sternly paced their patrol.

May I never see another such night. I could not sleep, I could not think, till thought was weary and in despair thought again. Yesterday morning the President died. At 8.30 o'clock the kindest, noblest, truest heart ceased to beat, and Abraham Lnicoln was dead • • • • Andrew Johnson has been sworn. His speech was simple: "The duties are now mine; the results are God's." I trust he may perform his task faithfully, but, oh, for the confidence and the hope that we had in Lincoln! Like a ship without a rudder is the nation tossed. Outwardly are we quiet, but in each heart what terror, misgiving, and despair. • • •

How You Can Remove Every Trace of Hair

(Toilet Talks.)

A stiff paste made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on a hairy surface about 2 minutes will, when removed, take every trace of hair with it. The skin should then be washed to free it from the remaining delatone. No harm can result from this treatment, but be sure it is delatone you get and you will not be disappointed.

CONSIDER THE LIQUOR POLICY.

Government not yet ready to Make a Statement.

LONDON, May 10. — The whole question of the purchase of the liquor trade by the state is now under consideration by the government. Chancellor Bonar Law has given this information to the House of Commons, adding that he could not make a definite statement on this subject at the present time.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

FIFTEEN VACANT HOUSES IN THE ENTIRE CITY

Census of Vacant Houses Taken by the Letter Carriers Substantiate the Claim Made by the Manufacturers Respecting a Shortage of Houses —Not a Single Vacant House in the South Ward.

Some days ago attention was drawn to the scarcity of houses in the city, and particularly in the South Ward, where a number of large manufacturing plants are located. Through the courtesy of Postmaster Edgar, it has been possible to secure a census of the vacant houses all over the city. This was accomplished through the medium of the letter carriers. The total number of houses reported vacant over the entire area covered by the letter carriers, which takes in the entire city, was fifteen. Of this number not one house was reported in the south end of the city. Vacant houses were reported on Charlotte street, Gilmour street, Stewart street, Caddy street, and a number of streets in the central district, but not a single vacant house was reported in the South Ward where houses are most needed.

MORE HOUSES NEEDED.

A movement is on foot to erect a number of new homes in the South Ward with easy walking distance of some of the manufacturing plants. The manufacturers in that particular locality say it is impossible to hold men in their employ as long as the present scarcity of houses continue. The industrial expansion of the future will to a large extent depend upon the housing accommodation of the city. A similar condition prevails in almost every city in Eastern Canada. In the light of such circumstances it is apparent that the city which makes a real practical effort to solve the housing problem will be that much better equipped to compete with other towns and cities when it comes to exploiting local advantages.

WHAT MANUFACTURERS WANT TO KNOW.

Almost one of the first questions that a prospective manufacturer will ask, concerns the amount of accommodation available for the workingmen. It is little use of a manufacturer locating in Peterborough, or any place else, for that matter, unless he feels confident that the housing accommodation is adequate for the needs. Mr. W. R. Breyfogle, of the Le Laval Dairy Supply Company, has suggested that a number of terraces be constructed in the south end of the city. By terraces, Mr. Breyfogle means, a structure embodying several houses of pleasing design with all necessary conveniences and sanitary conditio... This is not the generally accepted idea of terrace construction.

A. R. O'Regan, Ex-officer of the 16th Lancers, Pleads Guilty to Misappropriation of Funds

TORONTO, May 9.—Broken in spirit and in health, A. R. O'Regan, an ex-officer of the 16th Lancers, who figured in the famous retreat at Mons, stood in the dock of the Sessions this afternoon and blamed drink for his downfall. He pleaded guilty to a charge of appropriating over $600 while he was acting as a clerk in the employment of the Imperial Munitions Board. He went to Buffalo with some of the money and was arrested in that city seven weeks ago; since that time he has been in custody.

Stepping into the witness box, O'Regan said he had been wounded at Mons, and was discharged as medically unfit. He recovered sufficiently to come to Canada and joined the 216th Bantams' Battalion as a prvate. He was made captain and paymaster, and was, on the admission of Crown-Attorney Greer, one of the best soldiers in Canada. He stated he had served eighteen years in the Lancers.

Explaining the defalcations of the accused, District Inspector, J. B. Holland, stated that O'Regan received cheques for $438 and $600 respectively, to pay accounts and of these amounts only $430 had been put to the purpose intended.

"He has a record as a soldier that is scarcely equalled by any man in Canada," said Mr. Greer, "and it is an unfortunate duty for me to prosecute him."

The Magistrate took O'Regan's good service to his country into consideration and made his punishment a light one of three months on the jail farm.

FORTUNES OF FORMER CZAR AND FAMILY

M. Titoff, the commissary appointed by the provisional government to take charge of the affairs of the former Czar and his family, has applied for a grant to cover their immediate expenses.

According to a rough estimate of their private fortunes, it appears that Nichalos II. owns not more than 1 1-2 million dollars in cash and securities. His wife's fortune amounts to about $550,000. Young Alexis is much wealthier, and his allowance has been accumulating. He possesses about 2 1-2 millions .The fortunes of his sisters are estimated as follows: Olga, 2 1-4 millions; Tatiana, 2 millions; Marie, 1 1-2 millions; Anastasia, 1 million.

Since 1906 the civil list has amounted to 8 millions annually, but enormous revenues were derived from mines, forests and lands belonging to the emperor's cabinet. The expenditure of the court swallowed up these vast sums on the maintenance of imperial residences, shooting boxes, and a whole host of retainers. Hence, in spite of his great possessions, the Czar appears to be a comparatively poor man, inasmuch as the real estate belonging to the cabinet will become state property.

The position of the grand dukes and other members of the Romanoff family will also have to be considered. Some of them, like Nicholas Nicolaievitch and the heirs o fthe late Grand Duke Constantine ,own large private properties. The other kinsmen had little besides an annual grant from the revenue of the imperial appanages, which will also revert to the estate.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

APPOINTMENT FOR PETERBORO' OFFICER

Lieut. W. G. Worth Who Went Overseas With the 93rd Battalion Will Be Member of Wool Commission

Realizing the world-shortage of wool and the imperative need of some action being taken to facilitate the business of the Canadian textile trades, the Federal Government has, on the sanction of the Imperial authorities, formed what is to be known as the Canadian Wool Commission. This body will have charge of the distribution of the Australasian wool released by the British Government to the Canadian interests. This Commission consists of Mr. George Pattinson, Preston Mr. L. Bonner, Paris; Mr. C. W. Bates, Carleton Place; Mr. James Rosamond, Almonte; Mr. George Forbes, Hespeler, and Mr. F. B. Hayes, Toronto, Honorary Secretary.

The necessity of appointing this Commission, as a means of facilitating Canadian business, and preventing an absolute cessation of many of the textile trades, was brought to the attention of the Right Hon. Walter Long, Secretary for the Colonies, on April 7th last. The explanation was made at that time that the British Government was taking drastic action regarding the exportation of Australasian wool for military reasons.

Sanctioned by Britain.

On the 26th of April the British authorities notified Sir George E. Foster, Acting Premier, that 16,000 bales of Australian and 7,000 bales of New Zealand wool could be sold to Canada, on the understanding that allocations would be strictly for manufacturing purposes and not for accumulation or speculation. The personnel of the proposed Wool Commission was soon decided upon, and the members advised the authorities that they would appoint the Canadian Trade Commissioners at Melbourne and Auckland, as the Canadian wool representatives through whom the orders should be transmitted. Lieut. W. G. Worth, of the 18th Battalion, C. E. F., was selected to act as the Canadian Wool Commission's agent at Bradford, England.

Ireland Has Any Old Time

Ireland as a whole was utterly unprepared for the inauguration of the summer time clock this year, writes a correspondent of the Association Press from Dublin. Last year Ireland had its own local time, and the difference between the newly instituted summer time and the local time was only 35 minutes. But this summer the Irish clock already had been legally pushed forward to correspond with Greenwich time; consequently noon to-day would have been only 10:35 a.m. before the two alternations. With the double change there is nothing like general agreement. The Irish are entirely at odds regarding the time of day. For some business purposes in the cities the new time has been accepted. Trains run by it and Government offices demand it. Some schools also conform to it, but the Commissioners of National Education have not yet promulgated it. In the farming communities a considerable portion of the population is still going by the old time, on the ground that earlier time disarranges farm work and the making of cows.

In regard to church services, the greatest divergence prevails. The Protestant churches generally have adopted the new time. The Archbishop of Dublin, Dr. Walsh, however, has adopted the new time for his diocese. The Primate of All Ireland, Cardinal Logue, favours the old time.

Popularity Of The Bicycle

Manufacturers Are Having a Very Busy Time Supplying the Demand

As has been very apparent everywhere this year, the bicycle is becoming more popular than ever before. Business men are recognizing the usefulness of the bicycle in furthering the efficiency of their business, people in city and rural districts are taking advantage of the benefits to be derived from bicycle riding for pleasure, and bicycle clubs are being formed throughout the country, the members of which take part in road trips and special tournaments. This popularity for bicycling is naturally greatly increasing the demand for bicycles and the bicycle manufacturers are having a very busy time supplying this demand.

The plant of Hyslop Brothers Limited, Toronto, when recently visited, was found to be a hive of industry. Ths Firm, who have been manufacturing bicycles in Canada for 28 years, are turning out their well-known high grade models as fast as possible. It is stated that the higher priced bicycles are in greatest demand, people now want the best bicycle they can buy for their purpose. The Hyslop Bicycle is high grade in every way, the equipment is first class and the manufacturers claim that the general satisfaction with their product, is the result of their long experience in manufacturing bicycles. As each bicycle passes through the various stages of manufacture it is tested and inspected, so that every part of the machine must be fully up to the high standard set, before it can be finally finished and shipped. The result of this rigid inspection is that the final purchaser of a Hyslop Bicycle knows that he possesses a machine that will ride easy, always look well, and, in general, be entirely satisfactory.

time I write the line running up from the northwest corner of Fresnoy Wood. It is a setback on a small scale which must be expected from time to time, now that the enemy has decided to stand and give battle rather than retreat at once beyond the Hindenburg line, and is an episode revealing again his desperate way of fighting since our success on April 9 menaced him with supreme disaster.

PRAISE FOR CANADIANS.

The Canadian troops, who fought up from Neuville-St. Vaast right over Vimy Ridge and then on through Arleux to Fresnoy, a marvellous thrust of six miles in depth since the first day of the fighting in April have, in spite of all their losses—and the price of all this was not light—absolute faith in ther supremacy as soldiers over the enemy's troops, though they do not despise him or underestimate his strength, and I find today battalions which lost much are by some strange inward light most high-spirited and hopeful. These men who took Arleux and Fresnoy are great soldiers, excelling in certain grim qualities of the spirit which makes them terribl ein attack and strong to endure. They have been long in this war, and suffered much at Ypres, at St Eloi, and at Courcelette and all that training in and out of the trench es has made then as hard as steel. The sound of shell-fire is as familiar to them as their bands, which I heard playing to-day when the Guard turned out, and the other day, under shell-fire on the southern slopes of Vimy Ridge. Even these bandsmen had just come back from Fresnoy, where they carried up supplies to the fighting men, and the pipers of the Canadian Scots played their men into battle and out again with lament for those who did not come back.

GREAT DEEDS OF HEROISM.

In the month of fighting the men I saw to-day have done astonishing things to add to the great tale of human courage, and acts which reveal not only that, but the life which goes on day after day on the modern battlefields on these stricken fields of France. Imagine the spirit of men who will walk through two barrages, falling walls of shell-fire, in order to get at an enemy beyond! That was what happened on the way to Fresnoy. The enemy dropped his barrage this side of ours to smash our men if they went on. They went through our own shells and into a German trench, where they routed the enemy. They waited a minute or two while our storm of shells swept over them and beyond them. Through such a wall of shells one of these Canadians ran straight to a German machine-gun emplacement which he saw beyond, waiting to mow down his comrades as soon as our curtain fire had passed. By some miracle he passed unscathed. Just as the enemy machine-gun team came up from their dug-out to begin their deadly work they never made a start, for that single Canadian soldier ended their business.

The Canadians' hard fighting has told, and they are quick to see a thing and to do it in a moment of extreme hasard. So, on the way to Fresnoy when they found in front of them a trench filled with German Grenadiers they fell flat as in their practice camps and fired rifle grenades steadily and with deadly aim till the enemy surrendered or fled or died. It was an act of high sacrifice when a corporal said to men caught under machine-gun emplacement, where it exploded "Wait till I run, then you beat it." He ran, drawing the enemy's fire, and the other men had a greater chance. In an attack a mortar bomb fell at the feet of a bomber, and he had fourteen seconds to save his men and himself. He flung it at the German machine-gu nemplacement, where it exploded instantly.

THEY KNOW NO FEAR.

What is the dividing line between courage and fear? I have seen a great deal of war and I cannot tell. Certainly the bravest men are the most candid in their telling of their fears, and it was a very brave man, a French-Canadian who said the other day between Arleux and Fresnoy: "by gum, I got scared, I got fair scared." And no wonder, for arriving outside a German dugout a man whom he took prisoner told him in French there were more inside. "More" is an uncertain word. The French-Canadian expected two or three, but out come two German officers and seventy men, and just then the Canadian was quite alone. It was then he got scared. He was armed with only two bombs, and he pulled out the pins and shouted: "Stand back, stand back, or will I kill you." The seventy-two Germans stood back until three other Canadians arrived and formed an escort for them. "By gum, I was scared," said the French-Canadian. But it was men no braver who captured Fresnoy. For the time that village is lost, but one day sooner or later our men will take it back. These men of ours do not reckon the cost, even though it is their own life that pays.

WOMEN DESECRATE FLAG.

The D. A. R. is up in arm over what they term the "desecration of the flag." They threaten to take action through the District Attorney.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES

The following new books have just been received at the Public Library. They are the remaining volumes of the series entitled the "Chronicles of Canada" and can each and all be confidently recommended to the public as pleasant and profitable reading:

Days of Sir Wilfrid Laurier—Skelton.
Railway Builders—Skelton.
Fathers of Confederation — Colquhoun.
Cariboo Trail—Laut.
Winning of Popular Government — McMechan.
'Patriotes' of '37—DeCelles.
Father of British Canada—Wood.
Acadian Exiles—Doughty.
Jesuit Missions—Marquis.
Fighting Governor—Colby.

Attention is also drawn to the fact that the Library is often in receipt of most interesting pamphlets supplied by the Overseas Club and also by the Board of Trade. The first-named are valuable as supplying entirely authentic information in regard to various aspects of the war and the latter as giving valuable data concerning the conditions of trade and commerce in various parts of the world.

The pamphlets regularly supplied to us by the Bureau of Education at Washington have a value, many of them, above and beyond that attached to them as educational factors in the teaching profession.

Re-Furnish the Home! The Old Rooms can be Transformed---Like Clay in the Modeller's Hands

A new home within the old walls. What a revelation! Behold the soft velvety rugs on which one loves to tread. Note the superb carvings and general richness that antique furniture contributes and lo, what cheerful coziness is reflected from the wall coverings and hangings. Verily you will agree a new interior is a greater variation than a new home with old furnishings.

Furniture--

Jacobean, William and Mary, Sheraton, Colonial and many others of the bygone periods contributed much to the art of decoration. When discussing decorating it would be folly to ignore such artistic pieces as the above mentioned. They are much in vogue today because of their unequalled dignity, and for this reason you will find much of an antique nature on our furniture floors. There are pieces unique in form and use, that will fit into an odd corner and serve for some utility purpose. We promise you an interesting hour on third and fourth floors.

Carpets--

Rugs all sorts and sizes. Never before has our Rug stock been so comprehenstve. All carefully selected patterns, Many were purchased because of their harmony with our period furniture, and this leads us to remark that our Carpet, Drapery, Furniture and Wall Paper Departments enable us to completely furnish any room. We can assemble it all on the one floor, giving you a realistic idea of the finished effect.

Wall Papers---

We have a most suitable assortment for any room from kitchen to attic. Plain oatmeal, applique frieze, imitation leather in soft and brilliant hues, then come the floral patterns, some with wee garlands of rose and vines, others with large spreads of foliage that seem hopelessly tangled, yet the effect is most symmetrical; then the stripes with their stiff unalterable preciseness. This is only a smattering of what we have in store for you. Visit the department on 3rd Floor.

Draperies---

Chintz, curtains, scrims, Madras, etc., all that any window ever required is here shown in great profusion. Some of the chintzes are a medley of fruits, others more rigid in design and suitable for their own particular purpose. Fine, filmy curtains garnished with handsome bits of lace, some all laciness developed in the famous designs of Josiah Wedgewood. There is no use continuing further, we are enthusiastic about them. You will be too. See them on 3rd Floor.

Canadians Were Not in Fresnoy Village Itself

AIR SUPREMACY IS NOW ASSURED

(By Stewart Lyon, Canadian Press Correspondent in France.)

The Enemy's Fire From Heavy Guns Distinctly Slackens Around Lens.

Canadian Army Headquarters, May 10.—The night of Tuesday passed in comparative calm on the Canadian front, but to the south, around about Fresnoy, there has been heavy fighting.

Concentrating the greater part of a division of his most trusted Bavarian troops against the Fresnoy front, held by a single British battalion, Prince Rupprecht attacked at dawn Tuesday and carried the village. Its overmatched defences fought with tenacity and stayed the Bavarian advance well to the east of Arleux. The Canadian front to the north was realigned to conform to the new line in the region about Fresnoy, and the artillery set about its task of making the village untenable for the enemy.

Counter-battery work still engrosses attention on the Canadian front with satisfactory results. The enemy's fire from heavy guns mounted in the region of Lens, has distinctly slackened. He makes much use of gas shells.

Aerial activity at present is great. The British supremacy in this department, challenged earlier in the season, is now assured.

JOFFRE WOULD WAIT TURN

Slipping away from the guards who always accompany him, Marshal Joffre on Saturday entered the barber shop of the Chicago Club, where he was to attend a luncheon in his honour, to be shaved. The Marshal was not recognized at first, and was about to take a chair to await his turn when the barber and two men who were awaiting their turn to be shaved became aware that the smiling face under the military cap was that of the hero of the Marne.

The barber could not entirely suppress a gasp as the man he had just finished shaving left the chair. He did not call "Next" in the immemorial barber's fashion, but politely invited the Marshal to climb into his chair.

Marshal Joffre at first refused to do so, indicating that the two men ahead of him were waiting, but they, too, had recognized the Marshal of France, and would not permit him to wait until the barber had finished with them.

They insisted that the Marshal take precedence over them, and, rather than seem ungracious, the Marshal accepted the situation, thanked them for their courtesy and climbed into the chair.

Another Day Without Garbage Collection And Dog Net Already Relegated To Police Store Room

A considerable quantity of garbage has been removed during the past two days by residents who developing a peevishness over the situation carried the containers back into the yards. But this has been the only sign of life in the city's boasted department. Spders are spinning their webs over the wheels of the garbage waggons while the boilers, tubs and boxes that serve as containers are bulging with their accumulating contents.

The Council seems to be insensible of the fact that the system has come to a dead stop and has been in that condition for three days. The situation is becoming so serious in many instances that it will shortly become if it is not already, a menace to the health of the community.

Moreover, the incinerator plant with its two firemen (formerly only one was required) has been reduced to idleness, the efforts of the Sanitary Inspector are rendered abortive and all this system of which the garbage collection is an essential factor has come to an absolute standstill.

And yet the Council refuses to strike directly at a solution of the problem, contenting itself with half measures they knew would be worse than fruitless. This is the season of the year when civic house-cleaning is of first importance, and yet the Council remains inactive and almost unconcerned, while the garbage collection waggons are as motionless as snow plows.

DOG BY-LAW NOT ENFORCED

The emergency dog by-law is another inglorious example of the Council at its worst. The bark of the city fathers is unquestionably worse than their bite, and when some of them do attempt to bite they hasten to apologise for the modicum of spirit they essayed to display. Dr. Amys stated that last week he attended three children who had been bitten by dogs. But a dog catcher has not been appointed, no effort has been made in that direction, and the catcher's net has been placed in the store room at the police station without a single nick on its handle. The original by-law has been ameliorated, and in the general opinion of citizens, emasculated by the Council whose amendment permits dogs to be "exercised" on the streets.

They must be on leash and muzzled. Thus, the only action the city has taken since its first burst of determination has been retrograde. Surely some members of the Council are interested in the city to the extent that they will demand that both these matters be dealt with as the citizens desire them. And the first signs of life can't appear too soon.

Don't pattern after the busy little bee in letting the other fellow eat all your honey.

What They Are Doing in Other Towns and Cities

Free Water For Potato Patches and Seed at Cost Are Among Some of the Things Provided

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., May 9.—Stamford Township Council has decided to start a municipal coal yard and will begin to buy up coal for next winter. It will also purchase a carload of seed potatoes to be sold at cost to citizens, and will give free water to all Stamford soldiers' families till the war is over.

Niagara Falls Council will plow soldiers' gardens free, and is also buying a car of potatoes to sell seed to citizens at cost.

The city is also planting 20 acres of potatoes, which will be sold as cheaply as possible to people next Fall.

ORILLIA GARDENERS ACTIVE.

Water will be supplied free for the Season.

Orillia, May 9.—The great production campaign is being pushed here The Town Council has had several ploughmen here at work for a fortnight, who have already ploughed upwards of 200 gardens. The Council is also bringing in a carload of seed potatoes to be sold at cost. The Oval, the town's athletic grounds, is being ploughed up and broken into quarter-acre garden plots, which will be allotted to citizens in order of their location. The water, light and power commission is offering to supply water for gardens without charge this season.

THE POLICE FORCE WILL WORK 100 ACRES

Toronto, May 9.—At a meeting of the General Committee of the War Production Club having in charge the distribution of vacant lot areas in the outlying districts for the growing of root crops, in the Council Chamber of the Toronto Board of Trade quarters. Chief Constable Grasett, who was present at the meeting stated that the officers and rank and file of the Toronto Police Force were prepared to start work. Upwards of ninety-five per cent. of the force had already agreed to do their share of the work and others were still to be heard from. He had no doubt but that the entire personnel of the force would be represented before they start operations. It is likely that the police will undertake to cultivate one hundred acres, the crop from which will be distributed among the hospitals and charitable institutions. Chief Grasett and Mr. E. F. Trimble, Secretary of the War Production Club, will to-day inspect a large tract of land in the vicinity of Upper Canada College, which will be allotted to the police force.

GERMANY WANTS MONEY.

COPENHAGEN, via London, May 10.—The Berlin Tageblatt says that a bill will be introduced in the Reichstag within a few weeks for a new war loan.

According to statistics compiled by the United States Federal Reserve Board, Germany's war loans up to December 31 last aggregated $11,-25,000,000.

No Coal Is Delivered In Old Country

People Have to Bring It Home in Bags Writes Peterboro' Boy in England

An interesting letter has been received from Pte. Arthur Theobald, who went overseas with the Canadian Mounted Rifles, and after being invalided from France, is now on the P. O. staff, 3rd C. C. D., St. Leonards-on-the-Sea, England. He says, in part:

"I shall be very pleased to have any snaps sent, for when I look over my little collection they bring back sweet memories of the times I spent in good old Peterborough. Snow shoeing, did you say? My! I dare not think of it. It would be just grand to feel the snow crunching under the web of a snowshoe. I have not got out of practice though, for I am an expert where mud is concerned; had good training for that in France, you bet. Jim Peckman does not like it here. I guess he is tied down too much to suit him, for you see munition workers have to put in so much time. If they do not they are fined, and then living is so high and stuff so hard to get. In Woolwich people cannot get coal by the ton. They have to fetch it themselves in bags. Even then they run a big chance of not getting any. It is nothing to see men of all classes wheeling a bag of coal on a small truck.

The war is coming along in our favour. Our only danger now is that of starvation and that is a real danger. I have no doubt that we shall pull through, but we shall have to undergo many privations before the end is in sight and people who are living in safety in their homes should bear their burdens cheerfully, for they are not suffering one-quarter of what the men who are fighting their battles are suffering. It makes me real sore when I hear some people grumble over small things (there are only a very few who do, I am glad to say), but I would like them to have just one week in the trenches. Then they might have something to grumble about. All will come right in the end I guess, and I trust that all the nations of the earth will not leave themselves open to another conflict such as this. With the help of the States (I take my hat off to them) I hope and pray that before many months have passed we may once again live in peace and safety. I am glad to say that I am feeling almost myself again. At present I am working in the Postoffice here.

Y. M. C. A. NEWS

We are requesting every friend of the Association to support the Mother's Club in their patriotic work by purchasing tickets for the concert Friday evening, May 11th. The ladies have been working for weeks running the knitting machine presented by the late J. W. Bennet, and are now in need of yarn to keep up the good work.

Every person who will attend the concert is assured of a good time, for the programme contains the names of Miss Telgman, violinist; Mrs. Widdis and Miss Gertrude Stevens, soloists; Miss Harvey and Master Johnstone, recitations. Two special numbers by members of the Y.W.C.A. and Y.M.C.A. will also be presented. All seats will be rush and a good attendance is anticipated.

Every member of the Y.M.C.A. employed staff is setting the pace in vacant lot cultivation; an office schedule having been adopted to allow each employee three periods off each week for the production effort. The boys of the Association are really as earnest in their vacant land cultivation as they have been in any feature of the "Y" work this season.

Never bet with your wife unless you are prepared to lose whether you win or not.

Quilts From St. John's Church Are Appreciated

Mrs. Conway, president of the St. John's Girls' Auxiliary, has received the following letter from Major Davidson, in reference to the Auxiliary's donation of quilts to the hospital. He encloses a very appreciative letter from one of the patients.

My Dear Mrs. Conway:—I was most delighted with the kind letter received from the Girls' Auxiliary, and the list of the names—so well known—who brought many remembrances. I took the nice quilt at once to the matron.

Yesterday, I saw your former quilts with two from the W. A. and two from Campbellford also sent to [illegible] patients in the annex quite brightened up the room, and of one of our shell shock wards., The men spoke, or rather stuttred, with great appreciation. They are all sergeants there. Many of these patients come in quite dumb with shell shock and dased—some out of their mind. They are put under ether as a rule, in which state they speak more easily and when they come out they are able to say a few words or to stutter them which lasts quite a time; but in the end most of them come right. One man said: "It shows .. a great deal .. of interest .. to sew all that .. for us."

The weather has been cold, damp, and miserable up to now following extreme cold before—a snow storm two days ago. This is Holy Week, and one misses the regular devotional services which we can't well have, though I have prayers in wards when possible and services on Good Friday.

Most warmly yours,
JOHN C. DAVIDSON.

Thanks from a Patient.

France, 4-4, 1917.

Mrs. W. E. Conway.

Dear Madam,—I have much pleasure in writing to thank you for your splendid gifts to the above hospital. Writing as a patient I feel I cannot express in words forceable enough, my admiration of your association's great work and labour of love. The impetus for such work and love can only be obtained from one source, I am sure. Your bed spreads now decorate this ward. Here there are 8 beds. Each occupied bed sends its greatest appreciation and thanks to all who had a hand in the work. The swastikas upon each covering wishes us good luck. The words wish us God speed in our duty, and every stitch in the fabric reminds us that there are friends across the sea thinking and probably praying for us. The whiteness of the fabric dispels depression and so nicely worked with the red gives us all a gay and bright appearance.

I could well write your association a sermon on their handiwork but sermons are for those who need them. I think you all have taken to heart some sermon of love. We are al N.C.O.'s here in this ward, and we all thank you and admire your work much. One or two men who had said very little for days previous to the arrival of your gifts became quite eloquent in their admiration and praise.

I conclude by wishing you God-speed in all your work and trust that in days to come your association may receive God's richest blessings.

I remain, yours sincerely,
F. T. RIDGEWELL,

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Allow me, through your columns to draw the attention of the members of the I. O. D. E. to a matter which, in my opinion, deserves immediate attention.

The above members have issued cards by the hundreds, each card about a foot in length, for the express purpose of collecting pennies to buy socks for the soldiers.

I have it on reliable authority that many of the children who are collecting, when the card is full, are taking the money for their own use, (nothing easier), and presenting the same empty card and getting it refilled.

This is a great imposition on the kindness of the people of this city, who are generously responding to the appeal and I would suggest that the I.O.D.E. quickly find better ways and means of collecting pennies, thereby removing the temptation from the children.

Yours truly,
PATRIOTIC.

Bale Being Packed For Labrador Mission

Have You Any Warm Clothing You Could Send?

The bale that is regularly sent forward to the Labrador Mission is now being gathered together and packed for shipment. If you have any warm clothing or other articles that you think would be acceptable it would be greatly appreciated if you would call up Mrs. James Wood, telephone No. 1 or write to P.O. Box 990.

The Labrador Mission is a most important and worthy object, and the sympathy of the people of Peterborough, which has been so evident in the past, is again sure to warrant the belief that a goodly supply of much-needed articles of warm clothing will be supplied for this shipment.

HOW THEY KEPT WARM.

Wife — Terrible! Were they frozen to death.

Hubb — No, they warmed themselves on the mountain ranges!

A Tribute To The Ford

The Property Committee of Toronto's Civic Board Will Buy Only Ford Cars For City Use

The following is a copy of a report by one of the Toronto newspapers pertaining to the stand which the Ford cars have at the present time with the City of Toronto:

"Property Commissioner Chisholm at a meeting of Toronto's Property Committee on May 7, informed the aldermen that he would this year buy only small cars for civic use, as they have given the maximum of satisfaction for the minimum of upkeep.

"I don't know what the Property Commissioner meant when he said he would buy only small cars," remarked Ald. Hilts, "but I hope he meant Fords. There are a number of small cars, but they do not all stand up as well as the Fords, and some of them cost more money. None give as good service as the Ford."

"Hear! Hear!" said Chairman McBrien and several other members of the committee. There was not a dissenting voice.

The city of Toronto exacts from its cars a mileage which no private owner is likely to equal. When aldermen favor Ford cars for service of this kind, they are paying the highest possible tribute to the capacity of the Ford to outwear its rivals under the most severe test of endurance."

BRIDE OF 84.

A novel spectacle was witnessed at St. Barnabas Church, Finsbury, Eng., when a widow aged 84 was married to a veterna widower of 76. Both are old age pensioners.

After the ceremony had been performed by the Vicar, the Rev. E. E. Brooks, the bridegroom, who is entering into matrimonial bonds for the third time, warmly embraced the bride in the presence of the spectators.

On leaving the church the aged couple were deluged with confetti, and they walked with almost youthful step to their little back room in a street hard by to begin life on their joint pensions of 10s. a week.

Farmer Avenges Brother's Murder

When the jury in the Armour murder case, at Santa Fe, N.M., reported at two o'clock in the morning of April 25, that Elbert W. Blanchett, twenty-three years old, of Friday Harbour, Wash., had been found guilty of murder in the first degree the last chapter was written of one of the most remarkable stories in the West.

The record of the Armour-Blanchett case involves railway trips sufficient to girdle the earth; it tells the story of the body of a man left exposed to the wild beasts and the elements for eighty-three days at the apex of the transcontinental highway known as the Old Santa Fe Trail, but above all it tells the story of how a Nebraska farmer, refusing to believe the stories told about his younger brother, had spent a fortune and months of time to unravel a mystery that had baffled the police forces of half a dozen of the leading cities of the Middle West.

Roy Armour, a Dakota county (Neb.) farmer, during his forty-four years had never been in a city larger than Sioux City, only twenty miles from his home; he knew nothing of the secrets of unravelling crime but he proved that determination of purpose sometimes can do more than experience.

Started Tour to Coast.

On September 10, 1916, Clyde D. Armour started from Sioux City by automobile for Fresno, Cal., where he expected to make his future home. Accompanying him were his mother, Mrs. Mary Armour, and a sister, Miss Agnes Armour.

At the village of Clarks, Neb., Agnes Armour was taken ill, and with her mother continued the journey by rail. Clyde Armour went alone as far as Denver. There he stopped at the Young Men's Christian Association and advertised for a companion to make the remainder of the trip with him. Later he told the secretary of the institution he had found a young man. The next day he left, and for several days nothing was heard of him.

Early in November relatives of Clyde Armour, in Sioux City, received a telegram asking for money. Checks came to the Sioux City bank of the Armours bearing the signature of Clyde Armour and indorsed by proprietors of dives in Albuquerque and Santa Fe, N.M. Letters and personal messages to Clyde Armour in New Mexico remained unanswered.

From November 7 to December 1 no mesages came to the relatives at home and Roy Armour and other relatives began a search. Police officials of every city in the Southwest were notified, but days passed with no reports other than that such a man had been known to frequent disreputable houses.

Here the devotion of Roy Armour for his younger brother came to the front. With Glen Armour, another brother, and Myron L. Sawyer, a brother-in-law, he left for Las Vegas, the last place from which word of Clyde Armour had been received.

For six weeks Roy Armour scoured the country, twice returning to Sioux City. He kept at his task, even after being deserted by his brother and Mr. Sawyer, both of whom said they had learned enough to convince them that Clyde Armour was in hiding. Even the mother and sister accepted that belief. Roy Armour, however, refused to accept the theory.

"Clyde was clean through and through," said Roy Armour, "and all the telegrams and letters to the contrary would never bring me to doubt him. Knowing him as I did I could not believe these stories and determined to spend every cent I had to clear up his name if he were dead, and to find him if he were living."

Spent $20,000 in Search.

That determination cost Roy Armour more than $20,000, but he made good. He got "news stories" into every newspaper west of Denver and he offered rewards for the recovery of the body. At last his efforts were rewarded, for on the morning of February 1, 1917, he received a message at Dakota City saying the body had been recovered.

The story of the recovery is unusual. Antonia Sandoval, a Mexican rancher near Glorietta, N.M., lives within a few hundred feet from the highest point of the old Santa Fe trail. One night his pet dog came into the yard dragging a human leg. Sandoval tied the animal up for the night. The next morning he released him and followed him to a clump of bushes half a mile away.

There he found many human bones, scattered about by wild animals. He found clothing, a watch, spectacle case and other articles. In the pockets of the coat was a garage receipt from a garage at Clarence, Neb., made out to C. D. Armour.

Roy arrived to take charge of the car. He traced events and learned that at Denver Clyde had met an Elbert Blanchett. He then took up the search for Blanchett. On the hotel registers he found the signature of C. D. Armour differing from that usually signed by his brother.

Finds Trace of Companion.

In the hills of Northwest New Mexico he learned that an Elbert W. Blanchett had been a camp clerg on construction work and that he had relatives at Friday Harbour, Wash. He turned that information over to Sheriff George Mead, at Alberquerque. Sheriff Mead obtained requisition papers and went to Friday Harbour.

Blanchett was located on an island and upon being placed under arrest darted into a tent, seized a shotgun and tried to kill himself. The entire charge penetrated the neck, but was not fatal. An unusual circumstance, later proved, was that the shot had entered the neck of Blanchett in almost the same manner as that in which Clyde Armour was killed.

Blanchett was taken back to New Mexico, denying he had ever heard of Armour. He was placed in the penitentiary hospital to recover.

In District Court in April, before Judge Abbott, there started the legal fight to prove the guilt or innocence of Blanchett. The ablest attorneys of the State were engaged. The evidence had been developed so remarkably well by Roy Armour and his associates that hope was given up by Blanchett and the attorneys, and on April 20 Blanchett confessed to the killing, saying it was an accident and that fearing public opinion he had impersonated Armour, taken his money, sold his car and spent the proceeds in gambling and dissipation. The date of execution has not yet been fixed.

Frenchmen Kiss Bell of Liberty

New York Gay With Allied Flags When French Commission Arrived To-day.

PHILADELPHIA, May 10—Marshal Joffre, former Premier Viviani and each member of the French War Commission kissed the liberty bell in Independence Hall yesterday.

There was absolute silence as the men tip toed forward and bent toward the historic relic of America's freedom. Not a word nor cheer shattered the simple impressiveness of the scene.

As the commission paid homage to Independence Hall, Viviani hailed it as "the birthplace of the liberty of the world." Whirled from Broad Street station through flag buried and closely packed lanes of shouting humanity, the Frenchmen were escorted immediately to the room wherein the Declaration of Independence was signed.

"Liberty's Birthplace."

"It never has been the privilege of a Frenchman to visit this historic spot on a happier occasion," said Viviani, "it is a consecration of the union of liberty between the allied nations. For here was born the liberty of the world."

Passing from the declaration room, the party stood in silence a moment before the liberty bell. Joffre first stepped forward, and kissed it.

Leaving the hall, Viviani shook Mayor Smith's hand as a token of fidelity and kissed his cheek as an evidence of international affection between France and America.

Marshal Joffre was presented with a silver mounted baton, made from a piece of rafter from Independence Hall. He thanked the city in a brief speech.

His Real Independence.

Leaving Independence Hall the procession stopped opposite the Betsy Ross house, birthplace of the Stars and Stripes. The Frenchmen stood and saluted. Memorial wreaths were laid on Benjamin Franklin's grave. They paused to salute Joan of Arc's statue.

If there is nothing in a man you can get nothing but failure out of him.

Heavy G. T. R. Engines Begins Grain Haul

The first of the G.T.R. 1800 class of heavy engines passed through Peterborough yesterday afternoon with a load of empties for Midland. This is one of the preparations for the movement of the western grain that is now coming down Lake Superior for transhipment at Midland. These big engines haul loads that required a double-header of the small type. They are super-heated and have electric headlights. These engines will haul the grain freights over the Midland devision through this city to Belleville. The single engine requires but one crew, an important feature these days.

W. M. S. OF THE GEORGE ST. CHURCH

The Women's Missionary Society of the George Street Methodist Church met in the Church Parlour on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. James Kendry presided.

The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Troop. Business arrangements for next year were talked over. Miss E. Might was appointed delegate to the branch meeting to take place in June. Mrs. Troop reported for Mission Band work that $100 was given over to the society. Letters of thanks were read, and Mrs. Carlisle gave an interesting reading.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Well worthy of note is the one feature of thriving Peterborough that needs no boosting to be ever before us and our visitors. That its burden is the accumulation of a long winter's deposit of equine and canine fecal matter, ashes and debris of every sort with the consequent danger of health and comfort, does not detract from the attention it merits.

Boosting committees might well address their efforts to the bettering of the surfaces of our streets to a depth of say one inch, before reaching out in other directions in an effort to induce others to come and join us in our discomfort.

City street dust, the ghost of inefficient civic administration, cannot be "laid" by resolutions and conversation.

Thanking you,

INCOLA.

URGES DESTRUCTION OF THE STABLE FLY

Jacques W. Redway, F. R. G. S., of Mount Vernon, N. Y., contributes to The Medical Times an article on "The Menace of the Biting Stable Fly," in which he urges the extermination of the pest. He names some of the diseases the transmission of which is almost certainly due to this insect, and suggests measures that should be taken to exterminate it or keep its numbers to an irreducible minimum.

"Two animals—the Oriental rat and the biting stable fly—are a menace to humanity, and should be exterminated whenever and wherever found," he asserts. "Whether or not the one is a medium whereby bubonic plague is communicated and the other a means of spreading infantile paralysis, are questions and problems for the bacteriologist and not for the layman, to discuss. Their crime and offence against humanity is broader.

"Of the dozen or more species of flies that infest houses, the biting stable fly is neither more nor less objectionable in its habits than the common house fly or any other species. It is more dangerous not because of its habits, but because its mouth parts possess horny terminals that are sharp enough and strong enough to pierce the skin. The common house fly does not possess such mouth parts. The tsetse fly of tropical Africa does possess skin-cutting mouth parts, and thereby communicates sleeping sickness. Other local species, which are non-blood sucking, rarely communicate it. The ability to pierce the skin constitutes the chief danger of the biting stable fly—Stomoxes calcitrans.

"There is a popular tradition that flies 'bite' during rainy weather. The common house fly does not 'bite' at any time. During stormy weather, however, the stable fly seeks shelter, and indoors it 'bites' quites as ferociously as out of doors.

"The term 'stable fly' is something of a misnomer for the biting member of the family. Rotting straw stacks are its preferred habits. It infests stables because of the presence of rotting straw. A few years ago rotting heaps of straw manure were allowed to accumulate in a vacant lot next to a public school For a week or more there was no trouble. Then a swarm of biting stable flies invaded the school building, and there was trouble indeed. A few years ago there were bumper crops in the wheat belt of Texas, and stacks of loose straw were here and there. Nothing occurred until several heavy rains fell and the rotting process began. Then there were lively times. The swarms of flies were so savage that one might as well face a swarm of angry bees as to remain near one of the infested stacks.

The biting stable fly is everywhere and anywhere that rotting straw piles exist—the United States, Canada, Argentina, Russia, and India. In countries having cold winters a few eggs and pupae survive the winter and furnish the six or eight crops for the following summer. In tropical rice belts they breed all the year around. Where straw heaps and accumulations do not exist, decaying vegetation of almost any sort becomes a breeding place.

"The rotting provides two necessary things—the right temperature for incubation and food for the larvae. Indeed, in a general way, the breeding places of insects are a matter of natural selection, evolved through a process of survival. Nature is always able to short-circuit however and when occasion demands breeding may occur in any sort of substance that yields the warmth necessary for incubation. The tsetse fly, for instance, is structurally oviparous, but occasionally becomes viviparous—perhaps normally so. Instead of eggs, the famale may deposit larvae, which at once burrow into the moist soil (Austin). It is doubtful is such a short cut occurs to dipterous insects in extratropical regions, but certain it is that the abnormal in the case of insect genesis is not unknown; nature helps the insect to 'get there' in some manner or other.

"Ordinarily the life-cycle of the stable fly is simple. The eggs, each about one-twenty-fifth of an inch long, are deposited on stalks of straw. If the latter is warm and moist the maggots hatch in a day or two—frequently in twelve or fifteen hours. They shun the lights and seek to burrow into the breeding matter. The larvae stage lasts from fifteen to thirty days—more or less. The pupa stage requires from one to three weeks ordinarily. But the extraordinary frequently occurs: The pupae may remain in a condition simulating hibernation throughout the winter, thereby furnishing the 'seed crop' of a succeeding year. In very warm weather, however, the interval from the time of deposition of the eggs to the emergence of the fly may not be more than three weeks. Fortunately, the stable fly is short-lived, lasting rarely longer than two weeks. Unless carried or blown by the wind, it rarely flies more than a few feet from the place in which it was bred.

BAR OF SOAP BRINGS FACTORY GIRL HUSBAND

Several months ago Miss Anna Soderholm, 18 years old, wrote her name and address on the wrapper of a bar of soap in a factory where she works. The soap eventually found its way to Bridgeport, Conn., and to the hands of Nicholas Krikaie, an employee of the Bridgeport Tallow Company.

The young man wrote to Miss Soderholm, and the correspondence, begun as a joke, soon became serious. Although they never had seen each other until Saturday, they were married on Monday night of last week by the Rev. George M. Brown, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church at Bridgeport.

Miss Soderholm's father, who was present at the marriage, approved of the match as soon as he met the young man.

New Electric Player Piano Almost Human

Lovers of music have an opportunity to hear a most wonderful instrument give an reproduction of a master hand at the piano if they visit the Greene Music Store to-night or to-morrow. It is a Maestro-Style Electric Player Piano, and is almost human in its rendering of any piano selection, whether simple or difficult.

The selections are made as they are played by a master hand, and in rendering them the Electric Player gives you exactly every shade of tone, every time, interpretation of the artist, just as he originally produced the number.

Telling of the marvellous touch this instrument reproduces is insufficient, it must be heard before the musician can realize its wonderful capacity, and it is being freely demonstrated for all who care to call while it remains at the Greene Music Store during these two or three days.

Comforts for Returning Heroes

THE idea of providing hospital cars for invalided members of Canada's expeditionary forces originated with the Canadian Pacific Railway over two years ago, when floor plans and interior arrangements for hospital cars were submitted to the Director-General of Supplies and Transport. At that time it was considered that the time was not ripe for them. However, it was later found advisable to provide the greatest comfort possible in the transportation of returned invalided soldiers. The Military Hospitals Commission therefore agreed to the Canadian Pacific Railway building six new hospital cars, fitted up on the most up-to-date lines from the point of view of hygienic and medical efficiency. All the necessary points for comfort and easy transport have been considered, as well as the facilities for rendering every medical assistance to the men while travelling. The cars, which were inspected by the Hospitals Commission, were turned out on lines very similar to the original plans submitted to the Director-General of Supplies and Transport, with, however, certain innovations found valuable by the French and British railways in transporting men from the front. There are three units of two cars each, making six cars in all, and the direction of the cars rests with the Hospitals Commission. Each unit comprises what is known as a composite car and a ward car. The former contains six cots, in addition to the quarters for medical officers and nurses, while the latter car has accommodation for fourteen patients. Everything has been provided, not only for the comfort of the returned invalids, but for those in charge of the patients. The accommodation for the nurses is equivalent to that of a drawing-room on a standard sleeper, with a toilet room annex upholstered in leather, and all possible train comforts. Facilities have been provided for the storage of baggage, and there is also a kitchen attached, such as is contained in a tourist sleeper, to enable special foods to be provided for the wounded soldiers when occasion arises. The medical officers' quarters are fitted in the form of a compartment with upper and lower berths, and a small dispensary.

OFFICIAL INSPECTION MADE.

The ward car consists of one large room the length of a standard sleeper, and lavatories at either end. Standard hospital cots are installed in both cars; the floors are covered with linoleum and the aisles carpeted. A special feature is the introduction of a "bad weather entrance." The composite cars have two side entrances, in addition to the usual ones at each end. The side entrances, where the patients will be received, have been fitted with very heavy curtains which can be drawn closely in bad weather, thus affording ample protection from draughts to the patients already in the cars. The cars will be easily distinguished by the large Red Cross, painted on either side of the words "Military Hospital."

Casualties For Month 16,448

OTTAWA, May 10.— The Canadian victory of Vimy Ridge, and the fighting which has followed since April 9th, has caused the Dominion casualties now totalling 16,448. This is the price paid in thirty days' fighting on the Arras front. In other words Canada's effectives are being used up three times as fast as they are being replaced.

Vimy Ridge and Fresney have cost a total in casualties almost equal to the total enlistments for all purposes during the months of February, March and April, when a little over 6,000 men were raised.

Age Limit Is 21 To 30 For The U.S. Army

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, May 10. —The age limit for those subject to selective draft for overseas service was to-day fixed at from 21 to 30 years by Congressional Special committee. This will probably be adopted to-day or to-morrow by both houses and will provide the United States with two million fighting men if necessary within six months. The committee rejects the special clauses authorizing Roosevelt to raise a division by voluntary enlistment at once irrespective of draft legislation.

TRAVELLERS TO HELP

The following resolution was adopted at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association held on Saturday, May 5th, 1917.

Whereas all Europe is on short rations and the world is to-day facing a general famine, and whereas this Country can produce lots of foodstuffs but owing to a scarcity of farm labour a shortage in the coming crop is expected and whereas it would relieve to a certain extent the present conditions and enable us to do our bit in the world struggle.

It is moved by J. H. Paul Saucier, seconded by Romeo Brosseau that this Board recommends to the members that they offer to the National Service Cultivation Committee a week or more of their summer holidays to help harvesting in Canada, and that they at once notify the Secretary of the Association of their willingness to do so.

Ballast For G.T.R. In This Division

Ballasting work on the G.T.R. is proceeding on both sides of the city. McBernie's pit has been opened near Garden Hill to provide gravel for part of the main line and also for the section from Peterborough to Port Hope. A steam shovel is at work with a gang of men and a large quantity is being moved daily. Mr. Tom Yerrow of the G.T.R. also states that provision had been made to ballast the line from Peterborough to Lorneville and from Lorneville to Midland. Pits are being opened at Fenelon Falls and also Walker's pit near Camp Borden. All this western section has been laid with heavy rails, and on the east side of the city there is only the gap between Peterborough and Campbellford which will be connected up this summer. In fact the heavier rails are on the way now.

All these improvements should materially benefit the G.T.R. between Belleville and Midland and will certainly facilitate the movement of the heavy grain loads, apart altogether from the smoother road for passenger service.

Two Tractor Plows Are Working Well

"The two tractors are working fine," said Mr. George A. Gillespie this morning, repeating the reports he had received. The first tractor on Allan Wilson's farm in Otonabee has begun to strike its gait and is apparently doing good work. A second tractor that arrived on Tuesday, an International Harvester Machine, was sent out to Alex. Lang's farm in North Monaghan, and is said to be working smoothly. These two machines with the one Mr. McIlroy bought for his own use should provide a test for motor tractors on Peterborough farms.

THE FRESNOY SETBACK WAS NOT UNEXPECTED

British Held Line When They Might Have Been Expected to Retire—Allies' Plans Have Not Been Changed—Next Offensive Bigger Than Ever.

ENEMY CASUALTIES ARE TERRIBLE

LONDON, May 11.—The recent partial success of the Germans at Fresnoy, on the Arras Front in France, has not upset the British plans of operations, nor has it caused surprise, said Major-General Frederick B. Maurice, chief director of military operations at the War Office, in his weekly statement, yesterday. As a matter of fact, the general added, the British staff has been surprised that the Germans have not succeeded before in making gains in view of the tremendous counter-attacks which they have been hurling against the British front.

"Bodies of Teutons continually have been sent against the British over open ground without any apparent regard for casualties, but the British have held their line when it might have been expected they would give way and have inflicted tremendous losses on their opponents. The Germans have hurled great resources into the Arras conflict, employing people from Belgium, Poland and other conquered territory to release more Germans for military service. The British have forced the Germans to use up twice as many reserves as were employed in the Somme offensive, which ranks next to the present one in magnitude.

Satisfied With Defeat.

"The Germans claimed that in their so-called strategic retreat they inflicted a great defeat on the British in respect to their plans and that the Teutons held the situation in their own hands. Let me point again to the fact that the British plans for the Arras offensive were completed in February, before the German retreat began. Despite the German claims, we have continued our offensive according to the plans prepared.

"During the month the offensive began we have taken twice the number of prisoners, four times the amount of ground and five times the number of guns taken in the Somme offensive. The British and French between them have captured some 50,000 prisoners and 450 guns. If this is the result of a defeat, then we are willing to go on being defeated. We have kept on going and we are going to keep on going. The Arras offensive is much bigger than the Somme, and our next offensive will be bigger than Arras.

Enemy Casualties are Terrible.

"Regarding the German casualties it is impossible, of course, to give figures, but there is no disputing the fact that they have been terrible, and incomparably larger than ours."

Gen. Maurice was asked whether the Germans appeared to have withdrawn troops from the eastern front for use in the west. He replied there was no indication of this. On being asked whether the Russian crisis was causng any uneasiness in allied military circles, he said:

"Naturally there must be some uneasiness until the new Government is firmly on its feet. But it must be remembered that even had there been no revolution the Russians could not have started an offensive before this because of the condition of the ground, due to Russian winter. As a matter of fact, conditions are not yet favourable for operations in the east."

Hard to Drop Meat?
All depends on what you eat as a substitute. It is a good time to study "food value." You may be eating the wrong foods, the foods that cost most and give the least nutriment. Shredded Wheat Biscuit contains more real, body-building nutriment, pound for pound, than meat, eggs or potatoes and costs much less. Two of these Biscuits with milk and a little fruit make a nourishing meal at a cost of a few cents. Make Shredded Wheat your "meat." A satisfying breakfast on which to start the day's work. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-eat. Made in Canada.

A PRUSSIAN OFFICER SEES ALLY VICTORY

Prisoner of the Canadians, One of Higher Officers, Admits German Cause Hopeless—This Teuton Used to Live at Red Deer, Alberta—Was Taken in a Patrol Raid.

NO FAITH IN SUBMARINES

LONDON, May 11.—I have just returned from a ten days' visit to the Canadian lines in France, where I visited every division, and spent considerable time with the Railway Construction Corps and Forestry battalions; also having the privilege of visiting the Canadian Cavalry Brigade.

Among the prisoners taken by the Canadians recently was an officer of the Prussian Guard, a highly educated man and disposed to talk quite freely concerning the campaign, on everything except the disposition of the German forces. Officer prisoners never will talk on this matter. Specially interesting is the fact that this officer was captured in one of those night raids which Canadians during the long winter months brought to a fine specialty of military enterprise.

What Higher Germans Avoid.

I am told this is the first time even a German officer had been taken in one of these raids when opposing patrols meet each other in No Man's Land. This point was put to the captive under notice. He obviously did not like it being brought against an officer that Canadians had never met one of his own class in No Man's Land at night.

"Well," he said, "all I can say is if the Canadians have not met us in raids they have never had the best of our troops before them." He must have been aware that this statement was utterly contrary to established facts.

Teuton Used to Live in Red Deer.

This captive was additionally interesting, because he had spent several years at Red Deer, Alberta. He readily expressed his personal opinion that his countrymen were doomed to bitter disappointment over the final result of the submarine campaign, and did not hesitate either to express dismay that America had entered the field.

Asked if he thought there was now any possible chance of Germany winning, he replied: "When I look at things as they are, not merely in the field, but over the whole world, and steadily resist regarding them as they might be, I must admit the chance of our victory is not there. Nevertheless he was positive the Allies would never cross the Rhine.

No Glamor at the Front.

Personally I am not fond of talking about the splendid spirit of Canadians in France." The phrase has been overworked, and seems rather patronising. I would rather say that the Canadians at the front are in the best of health, the organization and discipline perfect. They lack nothing in material of every kind, and all is put to the best possible use. The much-talked-of splendid spirit really resolves itself into grim determination to strive and to suffer, to take success and reverse calmly as being but incidents of this great drama, and to await the grand denouncement.

It is a drab business, mostly in war nowadays. A business of mathematical calculation with the higher command, a business of existing in holes among pitiful remnants of villages, a business of never seeing the pleasant faces of your own country-women, indeed, of never seeing anybody who is not clad in dusty khaki.

No Complaint of Hardship.

"Hi, Bill, look at Civvy," shouted one man to a comrade as I happened myself to pass a small cluster of dugouts. The shout brought all the men in that quarter to stare at the phenomenon.

And when you talk with these chaps there is never a word about hardships or about it being a much longer business than they bargained for, and never even the idlest speculation as to when it is likely to end. They will often give a laugh, though, at hearing of folk at home who imagine the Boche is done for. In the field these fellows know better on that point, and they have not the opportunity to read newspapers, which record other matters, and which show how the stars in their courses are fighting against the German Kaiser.

BROODING OVER WAR HE LEAPED TO DEATH

I have a rendezvous with Death
At some disputed barricade,
When Spring comes round with rustling shade
And apple blossoms fill the air.
—From "I Have a Rendezvous With Death," by Alan Seeger, an American who enlisted in the Foreign Legion and was killed in action in France.

CHICAGO, May 8.—Newspaper clippings telling of the entrance of the United States into war and a war poem, "I Have a Rendezvous With Death," were found in the pockets of J. D. Kinnear, purchasing agent of the Mineral Point Zinc Company, after he had leaped to his death the other day from the twelfth storey of the Marquette Building in Chicago. His mind is believed to have been unbalanced from brooding over the war. No one saw Kinnear climb over the protective railing in the rotunda, but the height of the barrier was declared to preclude the possibility of an accidental fall. He was 29 years old and a graduate of Ohio State University.

MY TIRED FEET ACHED FOR "TIZ"

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel. You can wear shoes a size smaller if you desire.

The HOME CIRCLE

TEARS VS. WAR.

The women in these troublesome times of war must be well armed if the poet's ideas are correct. What is a woman's weapon? has been asked and answered in various ways. A quarter of a century ago, perhaps, there went the newspaper rounds an exquisite little triplet of stanzas each bearing an answer to the question, and below is the way it went:

"What is a woman's weapon?"
I asked a charming girl;
She dropped her lashes slyly
And stroked a vagrant curl;
Then consciously she murmured—
This rosebud nearly cut;
"I have a strong suspicion,
Her weapon is a pout."

"What is a woman's weapon?"
I asked a lover true;
He turned him to a maiden
With eyes of heavenly blue;
Her velvet lips were parted,
All innocent of guile,
And eagerly he answered,
"Her weapon is a smile."

"What is a woman's weapon?"
I asked a poet then;
With sudden inspiration
He seized upon his pen;
"Oh, I could name a thousand,"
He cried with accents clear;
"But a woman's surest weapon
I grant you is a tear."

Then, if tears are being shed from the weeping eyes and wounded hearts of troubled women in proportion to the blood that flows from the gaping veins of the fallen soldiers, surely peace, white winged, must soon surely come, with her mission of love and mercy.

MY COUNTRY.

What is my country Well, it is my own little world where I live. It is the dear little spot where my cottage stands. It is the sunshine over my head and the blue vault bounding my vision. This is my country. Again, my country includes the wondrous history of three hundred years wrought out by heroic hands and loving hearts on American soil. It includes the shocks of battle and the pursuits of peace. We kneel at its sacred altars, sing its immortal songs. We see waving over it the beauteous banner of the stars, the dear old flag that is always and everywhere, the symbol of protection and hope and home. May this love of country be the satisfaction of our old men, and the strength of our youth until—
"The dawn of a brighter, whiter day
Than ever blessed us with its ray
A day before whose purer light
All guilt and wrong shall flee away."

—:—

If you have any fault to find with anyone, tell him, not others, of what you complain. There is no more dangerous experiment than that of undertaking to do one thing to a man's face and another to his back. We should live, act and speak out of doors, as the phrase is, and say and do what we are willing should be known and read of all men.

TRIBUTE TO HIS MOTHER.

"I owe a great deal to my mother. She was seamstress, cook, washlady, and never until late in life had a servant in the house. And yet she was a cultivated woman. She read Channing and kept up the literature of the day. When I was a little tot she used to read good books to me.

"You young women have here every opportunity for literary culture, and you ought to avail yourselves of it. You ought to be very proud of money earned so honorably, for money that is not earned honorably will never do you any good."

The above words were spoken by Mr. Carnegie, the iron master, while talking to a large company of working girls in New York City. And then this man of unlimited wealth closed by saying:

"I shall never forget how proud I was when I got my first wages of $1.25 a week, and how felt when I was raised to $1.50 as a telegraph operator. To take home that sum to my good mother gave me such a feeling of manly independence."

Whoever helps to make a true home confers a benefit on mankind that no man can fully estimate. Indeed, the influence of the true home for good is absolutely incalculable, and reaches many even that never enter its inner circle. Simply to get a glimpse of it is to receive an impulse for better things, to obtain a more exalted view of life, and to feel an excess of faith in God and the immortality of the human soul. It is like a vision of the glories of the New Jerusalem, and the everlasting habitations, and no one can be wholly bad who has seen such things.

We certainly are blessed with an unusual number of bright little boys in this community. Little tots just starting on life's journey. They stand upon the threshold of life with foot uplifted and hand outstretched ready to begin the journey and happy in anticipation of the beautiful and wonderful things they expect to see. To them all is bright and promising, no thought of evil crosses their minds; their imagination clothes everything with rainbow hues. They little think that every rose has its thorn, every pleasure its corresponding grief. They are eager to be off. The path is narrow, and on either side are yawning precipices which threaten to engulf them at every step; numerous and enticing by-paths seek to lure them from the narrow way that leads to safety and honor. Here it is that the counsels of Christian mothers take root in their hearts, and their saint-like face will go before them on their journey, guiding stars whose gleam cannot be extinguished no matter how hard the storms of temptation may beat upon them.

DO YOU UNDERSTAND

that Zam-Buk is superior to ordinary ointments?

1st—Because Zam-Buk has superior soothing and healing power. This is due to its composition. Zam-Buk is compounded exclusively of herbal extracts and vegetable oils and is 100% medicine.

2nd—Because Zam-Buk cures are permanent. This is owing to the fact that the oils and extracts of which Zam-Buk is composed are so blended and refined that its power of penetration is extraordinary. While ordinary ointment remains on the surface skin, Zam-Buk literally soaks through to the underlying tissues, which is where skin diseases have their root. In this way, only, can a permanent cure be effected.

3rd—Because Zam-Buk is antiseptic—In other words, germs cannot live where Zam-Buk is applied. This prevents any danger from festering or blood-poisoning.

4th—Because Zam-Buk is pure. Its purity is due to its herbal composition, and this particularly commends Zam-Buk to mothers.

5th—Because Zam-Buk is economical. Owing to its freedom from animal fat, Zam-Buk cannot become rancid. It is, therefore, just as good to the last application.

Zam-Buk has been proved unequalled for eczema, ringworm, abscesses, ulcers, running sores, bad legs, blood-poisoning, piles, boils, pimples, burns, scalds and cuts. All stores or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 50c. box. 3 for $1.25.

Nine U. S. Regiments Will Go To France

WASHINGTON, May 9.—Nine new regiments of army engineers, to be composed exclusively of highly-trained railway men, will be the first American troops to be sent to France. They will go "at the earliest possible moment," the War Department announced for work on communication lines but speculation as to exactly when or to what points they will be sent is forbidden because of the submarine menace.

The new forces will be volunteers, raised at the nine great railway centres of the country. Each regiment will be commanded by an engineer Colonel of the regular army, aided by an Adjutant. All other officers will be railway engineers or officials.

The expedition will have a total strength of between 11,000 and 12,000 men, each regiment being composed of two battalions of three companies each. Every branch of railway workers necessary to the building or operation of lines will be represented in the ranks, and the War Department expects a response to the call that will permit a careful selection to be exercised and insure a force already trained to the minute, an army of experts in railway operation.

Recruiting for the regiments and the organization of each force will be directly under the Colonels of each regiment. Recruiting machinery of the regular service or the National Guard will be placed at their service, and it is hoped the enrollment of the troops will take little time. The recruiting points will be New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, Pittsburg, Detroit, Atlanta, San Francisco and Philadelphia.

Jesus the True Vine. John 15:1-16.

Golden Text: I am the vine, ye are the branches. John 15:5.

1. Verse 1. If the vine stands for the source, and the fruit of its branches for spiritual life, and all needed grace, what is the significance of this parable to us?

2. Verse 2. When a church ceases to convert sinners, and pays more attention to eloquent preaching and artistic singing than to spirituality, what evidence is there that it is still a branch of the true vine?

3. In what way does God "purge" or prune, partially faithful Christians?

4. Verse 2. When a Christian is faithful and bears fruit up to the measure of his capacity, what does God often do to him, to increase his fruit bearing power?

5. Why does God so frequently permit loss, sickness and sorrow to the very best of his children?

6. Verse 3. What is always the result of the character of those who are eager harkeners, and willing doers of the word of Jesus

7. Verses 4, 5. Explain in your own words what it is, to "abide" in Jesus?

8. How may we best cultivate a practical realization of the fact that we are in Christ and Christ in us, like the branch in the vine? (See John 17:21.)

9. Of what service is the regular means of grace to a man who is living in known sin?

10. Verse 6. What reason if any is there to believe that any person is in a saved condition who is living in known sin?

11. Of what service to the cause of God is a professor of religion, who lives in sin, even if no mortal knows of it but himself?

12. Christ here distinctly states that a branch of the true vine which does not abide in him and bear fruit "is cast forth"; what does he literally mean by this statement

13. Verse 7. What proof is there of these words of Jesus that those who abide in him, get from God all their hearts crave? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the Club.)

14. Verse 8. Why is it impossible to be a disciple of Jesus unless our lives are devoted to doing good?

15. Verses 9, 10. How would you explain the love of God; what is it; what does it do?

16. How do we manifest our love for Jesus?

17. Verses 11. What is the ultimate, subjective desire of the human heart which in the gospel is promised to us as a reward?

18. If a Christian has not joy in his heart at all times, would you say or not, and why, that he is living below his privileges in Christ?

19. Verses 12-16. How may we live so as to love God with all our hearts, love one another, and be perfectly contented, God always answering our prayers?

20. What may any earnest soul, who is not living a satisfactory life do, right now, in order that he may enter into, and enjoy all the blessedness Christ has provided?

Lesson for Sunday, May 20, 1917:—The Importance of Self Control (Temperance lesson.) Isa. 28:1-13.

DESERT ON DEAD GALLOP

Came Over to British Lines on the Run

The extraordinary story of a German soldier's "non-stop run" from Berlin to British headquarters was narrated by a staff officer back from "G. H. Q." on a few days' leave. "This fellow," said he, "arrived in France from Germany, I understand actually from Berlin. He was one of the new recruits, who compare most unfavorably with the men who first did Germany's fighting for her, and, almost immediately after completing the train journey, was brought with the rest of his lot up to the front line trenches. Arrived there, this Johnny evidently looked around him and did not in the least like, what he saw. And, within half an hour, when he saw what looked like a good opportunity, he jumped over the top and ran like a hare for our lines. It was then just coming over dusk and, though a few shots were fired at him by his own people, they all missed and he reached our front line and was promptly pulled in and made a prisoner. After he'd been given a cup of tea to buck him up after his run," continued the officer, "this Hun was brought to staff headquarters where he arrived beaming all over his face and evidently as pleased with himself as if he had inherited a fortune."

"Friend Not a Friend"

"Your friend was not a friend to give you the extra drink," said the magistrate at East Ham to a driver in the R.F.A., who pleaded that a friend gave him an extra glass of whisky.

MAKING IT PLAIN.

A common mistake which some people continue to make is to accept from a druggist an "extract" of cod liver thinking they will get the benefits of an emulsion of cod liver oil.

The difference is very great. An "emulsion" contains real cod liver oil, which has had the hearty endorsement of the medical profession for many years, while an "extract" is a product which contains no oil and is highly alcoholic.

Scott's Emulsion is the standard emulsion of the world. It guarantees the highest grade of real cod liver oil, skilfully blended with glycerine and hypophosphites, and is endorsed by good physicians everywhere.

U. S. WHEAT PROMISE POOREST SINCE 1888

WASHINGTON, May 10.—In the face of a threatened world food shortage, the American winter wheat crop shows the lowest condition recorded since 1888, and promises a smaller yield than any other since 1904.

Winter wheat planted last autumn, on one of the largest acreages ever sown to that grain, but which met disaster in several important states from severe winter conditions, now promises a harvest of 336,116,000 bushels this year. That quantity was forecast to-day by the department of agriculture, which based its estimate on the condition of the crop May 1. A month ago a crop of 450,000,000 bushels was forecast. Production last year was 481,744,000 bushels, and in 1915 it was 673,947,000 bushels.

On May 1 the area of winter wheat to be harvested was about 27,605,000 acres, compared with 40,000,000 acres sown last autumn and 34,929,000 acres harvested last year.

The condition of the crop on May 1 was 73.2 per cent of a normal, compared with 68.4 on April 1; 93.4 on May 1, last year, and 86.6 the average of the last ten years on May 1.

Agricultural conditions otherwise are good, the department announced and it recalled that although the winter wheat crop of 1919 showed an equally discouraging outlook, the total production of crops that year was the greatest on record.

THE BURDEN OF AGE.

The kidneys seem to be about the first organs to wear out and fail to properly perform their work. The result is weak, lame, aching back, rheumatic pains and failing eyesight. Many people of advanced years have recovered health and vigor by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They restore the normal action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

Dumba Declares Mr. Wilson Fears Central Powers

BRITISH SUPPORT AGAINST JAPANESE.

Also the Dismissed Diplomatist Says United States' Action was to Gain Seat at Peace Table.

Amsterdam, via London, May 8.—"The entire fault for America's entry into the war lies with President Wilson, who is an obstinate Anglophile aristocrat, filled with doctrinary stubbornness" writes Dr. Constantine Theodor Dumba, formerly Austro-Hungaran ambassador to the United States, in the May number of the Oesterreichische Rundschau, a copy of which has been received here.

Dr. Dumba begins his article by saying that before all else President Wilson wanted to prevent a disturbance of the balance of power in Europe in favour of the Central Powers. President Wilson, he adds, was convinced that the sharpened submarine warfare would carry the hunger blockade to England and bring the Entente to its knees by the destruction of cargo space.

The writer further credits President Wilson with the apprehension that the Central Powers would create a virtually self-supporting and mid-European bloc, extending to Asia Minor and Mesopotamia, which he says, in President Wilson's eyes would be more dangerous and more powerful than Great Britain. Hence the United States joined in the war.

Dr. Dumba says the United States was particularly anxious to obtain Great Britain's support against Japanese overlordship in the Pacific. Furthermore, the entry of the United States into the war was a plausible pretext for a big army, and finally by her action she has acquired a seat at the peace conference table.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Good style and becoming grace are expressed with just the right degree of smartness in this model—an excellent one for two or more materials in combination, with unusual effect. Such design always suggests the way to make over a frock that would be "passe" in its original style and of course makes for economy—a very important factor since prices for commodities do not recede with old winter.

With rever fronts of contrasting goods, the waist shows the newest style development—a surplice vest in light tone to match the revers and the collar that may be in either round or pointed outline, according to your own taste. A plait in each front of the waist below the bust results in panel or bib effect and this feature is accentuated by the trimming piece that looks like a dropped portion of the belt.

A two gore gathered skirt with a plait in each side of the front gore is joined to the waist at regulation line. When the long sleeve is chosen a trimming piece on the cuff to match that on the belt proves a fetching detail. If desired, banding may trim the lower edge of the skirt, as illustrated.

Serge, gabardine, satin, taffeta, pongee, as well as linen and the novelty basket weaves, are suitable for developing. The lines of this frock are very simple and the detail touches can be added like buttons—any one can reproduce the design without effort.

The dress design No. 8,176 cuts in sizes 36 to 42 bust. To make in size 36 requires 4¼ yards 36 inch material, 5¼ yards braid or banding, ⅝ yard 36 inch contrasting goods. To obtain the pattern send 20 cts. to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

WANTED ONLY THE EARTH

Pan-Germanist Ambitions were not any too Modest

Here is a Prussian idea of a certain Pan-German in all his pride and greed: "Count Reventlow demands in the East Courland and territory for German colonization—he does not speak very highly of the Polish scheme. In the West he wants the territory of the Walloons and Flanders as base for a strong High Seas and submarine fleet. He will hear nothing of an international freedom of the seas. His object is a German freedom of the seas and a German fleet strong enough to challenge any hostile coalition. The incorporation of the ore districts of Briey and Longwy in the Empire the speaker regards as a necessity for Germany. But on the other hand, he has no objection to relinquish Calais as he does not wish to be put down as a man with Utopian ideas. In conclusion the Count described himself as a home fighter with a sacred vocation, but it is probable that the man in the trenches will gravely doubt whether his praiseworthy zeal has been directed rightly."

GREATEST BATTLE SONG

Nation's Heart Voiced in the French "Marseillaise"

There can be no question that the world's most famous song is the Marseillaise. There is no other which, by its origin, history, and influence, can compete with it. For a century and a quarter it has voiced the aspirations and fired the courage of one of the most freedom-loving people on the globe—the gallant French—and to-day it is sung not only by the soldiers of that great nation, but by all the allies.

Everybody knows how the young officer, Rouget de Lisle, composed the words in a white heat of patriotism, composed the tune on his violin, and sang it to his comrades, and how, shortly afterwards, it was sung on the march from Marseilles to Paris by the red hot revolutionaries who were destined, out of a welter of blood, to bring to pass a new France. On July 4th, 1915, in the midst of the great war and France's heroic struggle to maintain her ancient freedom, the ashes of Rouget de Lisle were taken to the Invalides, where the President, the Ministers, and the Diplomatic Corps paid homage to the man who voiced the nation's heart.

Tall Prussian Guards

Three prisoners captured by the British were so tall that they made the Canadian who escorted them in, himself over six feet high, look small. They came from a regiment of the Prussian Guard Reserve, transferred from the Russian front to the west. It is a very smart body. When the fines were raided at 3 a.m. the Guards were already shaved. They fought like demons. But their fighting strength did not save them or their dug-outs from the Canadians.

Sunk, Saluting the Flag

When the French mail steamer Athos was torpedoed by a German submarine in the Mediterranean, says the Paris Matin, she had on board a battalion of Senegalese infantry, commanded by Major Colonna d'Istria. There was not room for everyone in the boats, and just before the steamer went down the black soldiers were drawn up in line on the deck, presenting arms. They went to the bottom saluting the flag.

IN CELLAR TWO YEARS

Between 7,000 and 8,000 of the inhabitants of Lens, which was long in the occupied territory of France, remained there and lived in their cellars for more than two years, says Elie Reumaux, manager of the coal mines there, who arrived in Paris. The former population of Lens was 40,000. All the cellars in the town, M. Reumaux says, have been armored with cement by the Germans, so that they constitute so many little fortresses. The entire civilian population was obliged to work at road mending and railroad building. The coal mines of Lens, which are among the most important of the region of the Pas de Calais and produced 20,000,000 tons a year before the war, have been idle since the invasion and have suffered immense damage.

100,000 CLERKS ARE NEEDED

Housing of Stenographers and Typewriters Ogers Perplexing Problem.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—One of the problems confronting the Government in its conduct of the war is obtaining the services of an army of clerks—most of them stenographers and typewriters—who will be competent to do the work required. About 100,000 additional clerical assistants will be required, and the work to obtain them has been undertaken by the Council of National Defense working through its Advisory Commission.

Perhaps the most perplexing feature of the problem is that of finding both office and home accommodations for this clerical army in the City of Washington.

The present population of the capital is about 365,000, and its housing resources would not be sufficient to accommodate anywhere near the number of additional people who would be necessary to help carry on the additional war business of the United States.

The problem has several other features, among them the possibility that house rents and boarding house prices would advance if the demand was increased by 100,000 applicants for bed and board. As the rates of pay for these additional clerks would be low, and the cost of living is already high, there would be no attraction to most young stenographers and typewriters to take up their residence in the capital. Another element has to do with obtaining a sufficient number of typewriting machines in quick order.

It is understood that the army of clerks may not be brought to Washington, but distributed around the country at central Government stations. At the best, however, the population of Washington would be increased by many thousands and the housing problem, more than the office problem is causing considerable worry.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur it Brings Back its Beautiful Lustre at Once

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

TAKE LAND UNTIL PEACE

British Government Acted Strongly Through Local Authorities

In view of the fact that the area of occupied land offered to meet the demand for allotments proved insufficient, the British Board of Agriculture, by an extension of their powers under the Defence of the Realm Regulations, authorized local authorities in England and Wales to take land compulsorily which, in their opinion, was not being usefully employed for the purpose of maintaining the food supply of the country. This order did not apply to gardens or pleasure grounds adjoining dwelling houses, or to common lands, except with the special consent of the Board.

In the case of occupied land, the local authority may pay rent for its use, but not in excess of the amount paid by the occupier, and is further empowered to purchase seed, fertilisers or implements required for the cultivation of the land and sell them to the allotment holders. As far as practicable the payments made by the cultivators are to cover the expenses incurred by the local authority in providing the land and adapting it for cultivation.

LIKEN SERBS TO SCOTCH

Both Rugged Mountaineers of Superb Fighing Quality

In a lecture delivered at King's College, London, England, R. W. Seton-Watson calls attention to the following fact: "To a Scotsman there comes the natural temptation to recognise among the modern Serbs some of those rugged fighting qualities which his ancestors developed under the inspiring leadership of Wallace and of Bruce." Perhaps in two countries where the conditions are so nearly analogous it is not surprising that the same conditions should have been developed. For centuries the Scotch have tended their herds among the hills and tilled their fields under conditions which made for a loveable ruggedness of character. The mountains of Serbia have produced a similar people ready at all times, as they have so often been called upon, to leave the plough for the sword."

POTASH IS LOOKED ON AS BIG TRUMP CARD

German Thinks His Country Holds World by the Throat.

AMSTERDAM, via London, May 10.—Discussing the significance of America's deprivation of German potash, Privy Councillor Wilhelm Ostwald declares in the Leipzig Neueste Nachrichten that America has begun the war in the position of a man with a noose around his neck, the end of which is in the enemy's hands and which has already been pretty tightly drawn.

"The value of Germany's natural monopoly in potash at the conclusion of peace," he says, "cannot be estimated too highly. We have the decision as to whether in the future the rest of the world will have abundant or scanty food. During the war the potash factor, like the U-boats, is working for us with daily increasing power."

Hot Water for Sick Headaches

Headache of any kind, is caused by auto-intoxication—which means self-poisoning. Liver and bowel poisons called toxins, sucked into the blood through the lymph ducts, excite the heart which pumps the blood so fast that it congests in the smaller arteries and veins of the head producing violent, throbbing pain and distress called headache. You become nervous, despondent, sick, feverish and miserable, your meals sour and almost nauseate you. Then you resort to acetanilide, aspirin or the bromides which temporarily relieve but not rid the blood of these irritating toxins.

A glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, drank before breakfast for awhile will not only wash these poisons from your system and cure you of headache, but will cleanse, purify and freshen the entire alimentary canal.

Ask your pharmacist for a quarter pound of limestone phosphate. It is inexpensive, harmless as sugar, and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

If you aren't feeling your best, if tongue is coated or you wake up with bad taste, foul breath or have colds, indigestion, biliousness, constipation or sour, acid stomach, begin the phosphated hot water cure to rid your system of toxins and poisons.

Results are quick and it is claimed that those who continue to flush out the stomach, liver and bowels every morning never have any headache or know a miserable moment.

GERMANS WEIGH OFTEN.

Desire to See How Much They Have Lost Makes Machines Popular.

LONDON, May 8.— The automatic weighing machine, once a toy or an instrument of amusement, is now a necessary of life in Germany, according to Dr. Reicke, the Assistant Mayor of Berlin. In a speech there recently he remarked:

"We have all lost in weight under our war rations. For this reason every one now feels the necessity of weighing himself from time to time on the automatic weighing machines. In the old days people resorted to them as a joke, a sort of holiday amusement for passing the time. Crowds now use them where one person used them before. The jocular man who used to announce that he was growing fat has given place to the mournful individual who registers the number of pounds he has lost since last month. The weighing machine has become one of our most intimate and necessary daily associates."

THE HOUSE AND GROUNDS

A HOMELIKE HOUSE OF PLEASING PROPORTIONS

THE foundation of this house, designed by Mr. Kenneth W. Dalzell, to be built at Maplewood, N. J., at a cost of $4,687, is of poured concrete, composed of cement, sand and gravel.

The chimney is hard burned common brick, lined with terra cotta flue lining laid in cement mortar with raked out joints, and the fireplaces of red tapestry brick with wide flush joints. All rooms, halls and closets, stair soffits, &c., are plastered over spruce lath with adamant wall plaster in scratch and brown coat, the hair being screened from the brown coat and floated to a slightly rough sand finished surface.

The bathroom floor is white tile, with cove base. Fireplace hearth is of red quarry tile; side walls of kitchen and bathroom of Keen's cement, in imitation of tiling. The cellar bottom is concrete.

The timber used in construction is hemlock and spruce; the exterior shingles, on side walls, 24-inch red cedar; on roof, 18-inch red cedar. The flooring on the first floor is double, finish flooring being oak; on the second floor, combed grain North Carolina pine.

The trim throughout the first floor is cypress; throughout the second floor whitewood; the doors are birch veneered throughout.

The exterior walls are painted with two thin coats of white lead and oil; the roof stained green. The interior woodwork is cypress trim stained dark brown and given one coat shellac and two coats flat varnish; birch doors finished in similar manner; whitewood trim, three coats flat white paint and one coat flat enamel. The oak floors, filled, shellacked and waxed; comb grain pine flooring varnished two coats and rubbed.

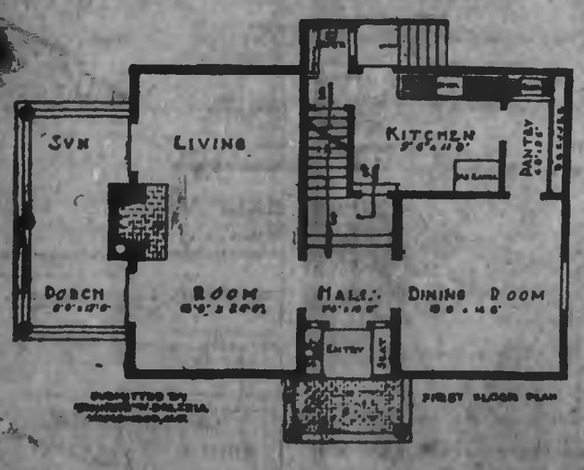
The house is heated by a low-pressure steam system.

Standard iron enamel fixtures with the exception of the water closet, which is pottery, are used in the plumbing.

Knob and tube system with switches is used for all ceiling lights. Allowance of $100 is made for electric fixtures.

The contracts for this house were as follows:—

Mason work	$1,210
Carpenter work	2,645
Plumbing and heating	725
Electric wiring	53
Painting and tinting walls	225



Flowers for Various Occasions

WHERE cut flowers are to be placed often determines their form. Therefore if you have a quantity of flowers with which to decorate the house pick out the places where they will look best and arrange them accordingly.

"Some plants or bouquets are most attractive when placed on a window sill and silhouetted against the light," Annette J. Warner points out. "White lilac or golden glow lighted up a dark corner effectively. Drooping branches or vines arrange themselves naturally when placed on a mantelpiece or in baskets or other receptacles hung against the wall.

"If the walls of rooms were thought of as the background for flowers, and pictures, many designs and colorings in wallpapers would never be chosen. The plain or soft tone papers in neutral colorings make the best backgrounds. Various flowers suit various moods, different occasions, different rooms. The flowers that supply the most charming and intimate features of the home breakfast table would be out of place at a formal banquet.

"It is a principle taught in art to decorate construction rather than to construct decoration. A rude dining room on the Maine sea coast, with unplaned posts and crossbeams, was transformed by covering the important structural features with the bayberry shrubs that grew in the vicinity.

"Beauty resides in quality rather than in quantity, and is often more in evidence when stem and leaf and growth are seen than when these have been obliterated by a mass of color. Table decorations should be so low that conversation may be general with persons sitting on opposite sides of the table able to see one another without obstruction. Flowers for the table should be with faint odor or none at all.

"Garlands of flowers or vines wandering in and out among the dishes or any forms of decoration that interfere with the service are out of place. There may be a central arrangement or something at each plate, or for a special occasion a combination of both. For a small table one low central composition is usually desirable. For a long table there may be a central arrangement and others that are subordinate.

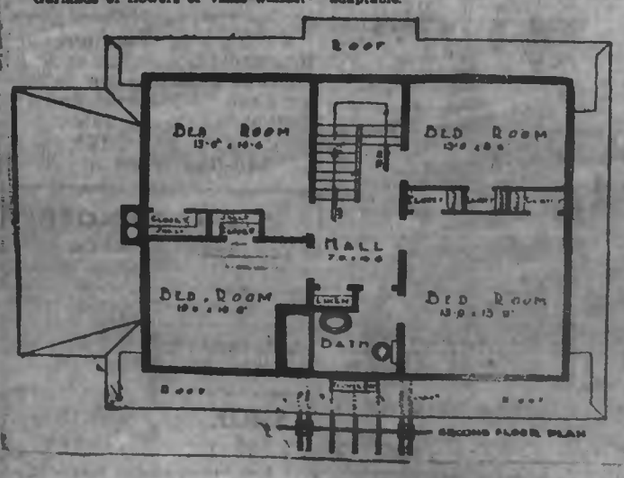
"The decorative elements in plants are line, form and color. Those plants whose chief attraction is in line or form should be used singly or in small groups so that these qualities may be seen to the best advantage. Those whose pre-eminent attraction is color may be massed.

"Line is the dominant attribute of the golden rod. One stem or at most three are more effective than a large mass.

"Color is the dominant attraction in pansies, sweet peas, violets and nasturtiums; therefore the more of these the better. Peonies are difficult to arrange singly and are much more splendid when massed.

"In many plants form and color are both so attractive that the plant may be selected for either characteristic, but in the decorative arrangement one idea should be dominant.

"The rose is one of the best examples of threefold adaptability. One long stemmed rose in a slender vase, which will keep it in position, is a thing of beauty in line which should give joy to a whole household; a group of three at different stages of opening, with their leaves, is an example of beauty of form which would furnish a notable decoration, and a mass of full blown roses would present a glory of color which might well be the special decorative feature at a wedding, a graduation or a church service in June. The chrysanthemum and the poppy are almost equally adaptable."



Some Common Vegetables and How to Grow Them

LETTUCE.—This crop is grown to supply a fresh vegetable which can be used green early in the spring. The seed can be sown in shallow furrows 1-4 of an inch deep, 6 inches apart or broadcast. The plants should be allowed to grow until about 2 inches high and should then be thinned to 3 inches apart. Do not hoe the soil up on the plants. It is not advisable to plant a large area of lettuce; it is better to have small plots coming on every week or so. When the plants are large enough to use they should be pulled out by the roots or cut off at the surface of the soil.

ONIONS the earlier onion seed is planted in the spring the better the crop should be. Make a shallow furrow with the corner of the hoe and plant the seed to a depth of 1-2 inch. The young seedlings should stand about 3 to 12 to the foot. Stir the soil often between the rows and pull out all weeds in the row. Cultivate with hand hoe as long as there is no danger of breaking the tops. In the early fall the tops will die down and the onions should then be pulled up and laid in rows, the tops covering the bulbs. After three or four days they should be taken and spread on the floor where the wind can blow through them, but no sunlight reach them. After a week or ten days of this they may be topped with a knife and stored in bags or boxes for winter use.

PARSNIP.—The ground for growing this crop should not be covered with fresh manure, but should be thoroughly dug over to a depth of 12 inches and the soil made as fine as possible. The seed should be sown in a shallow furrow about 2-4 of an inch in depth. It is advisable to plant a few seeds of radish or lettuce with the parsnip seed as a market, because parsnip seed is very slow in germinating. When the plants are about 1 1-2 or 2 inches high they should be thinned out to 4 inches apart. Cultivate with hoe sufficient to keep down the weeds. In the fall after a light frost the parsnips should be dug and the tops cut off with a knife. They may be kept during the winter in a cellar and it is a good plan to cover the roots with moist sand to keep them from withering. Parsnips may be kept in the ground all winter if desired and dug out as required. They should all be dug in the spring before growth starts, however.

PEA.—Peas may be planted very early in the season and should be sown in a furrow 1 1-2 inches deep. For the early crop the seed should be sown quite close, preferably one inch apart. Apple tree limbs or small stakes should be driven into the soil close to the row to form a trellis or support for the vines. Draw some of the soil up around the small vines. Pick when the pods seem full and are a dark green color. Do not allow to stay on the vine too long or they soon will become dry. Cultivate with hand hoe to keep down the weeds.

POTATOES.— Secure potatoes of about medium size. Cut these potatoes so there are at least two eyes in each piece or set. Do not dig very much fresh manure into the soil where these are to be planted and do not let any come into contact with the set. With the hoe make furrows 4 feet apart and about 6 inches deep. Place the sets 12 inches apart in the bottom of this furrow and cover with 3 inches of soil. The soil should be cultivated thoroughly to destroy the weeds and as the tops grow the soil should be gradually drawn up to the tops in sufficient quantities so that the growing tubers will not be exposed to the sunlight and turn green.

RADISH.—Radish seed may be sown very early in the spring. It may be planted in rows 4 inches apart and sown thinly at a depth of 1-2 an inch. In rows it can be covered with a lath or straight edge, and if sown broadcast it may be planted on top of the soil and raked in. Radishes require no thinning. Keep the soil loose between the rows with the hoe. Pull the radishes when of an edible size.

SALSIFY.—Sow the seed rather thinly and at a depth of 1-2 an inch. When the plants are 2 inches high they should be thinned out to stand 8 inches apart. Salsify roots are dug to the fall and stored as parsnips.

SPINACH.—Spinach may be planted in rows 6 to 8 inches apart at a depth of 1 inch or broadcast, raking the seed in as for radish. Sow the seed as early in the spring as possible. The leaves are pulled or cut off or the whole plant is cut off at the root and used as greens.

SWISS CHARD.—This vegetable is practically unknown in this Province. It can be grown easily from seed in rows 12 inches apart, the young plants being thinned out to 6 or 8 inches. The leaves are cut back to the root, which is left growing in the ground. The leaves are used for greens and the stem or rib of leaf as asparagus. A few plants should be sufficient for a small family.

THE INCUBATOR

IF you are going to start an incubator this year be sure that it is well cleaned if it has been used before, and follow instructions carefully about heating and testing it before using if it is a new one.

The beginner may have trouble to decide what kind of chickens it is best to raise, there are so many varieties with much to recommend them. Shall it be such old, reliable breeds as Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Leghorns, Rhode Island Reds, or shall it be of the fancy and beautiful new breeds? Shall an effort be made to raise hens for egg producers or shall the quality and quantity of meat be the first consideration?

It is well to remember that certain breeds will produce most of the eggs in the spring and few if any in the winter, when they are most desired. Hardiness and docility should be considered also. The wild, nervous birds are very hard and expensive to keep within bounds, and some birds otherwise desirable will not stand the changes of our climate.

Some kinds of chickens grow more rapidly than others, and that is worth thinking about because if you are going to raise them chiefly for broilers you will save much money if you can give a few weeks in getting them to weigh a pound and a half.

For the average person a general purpose fowl will be found the most satisfactory. Some persons think that the White Orpington comes the nearest to bring an easily handled productive bird a good layer and a splendid meat bird.

Spraying the Fruit Trees

APPLE trees should be sprayed for scale, scab and aphis, when the buds are about to burst, with a mixture made up of five gallons of lime sulphur, ½ pint black leaf 40, and 45 gallons of water. This will make 50 gallons.

When the buds are about to burst into blossom spray for aphis and scab with a similar mixture, only substituting 1¼ gallons of lime sulphur for the five gallons used in the first spray. As soon as the petals fall use the same mixture, adding 3 pounds of lead arsenate. This spraying is for aphis, scab, tent caterpillar and codding moth. Two weeks later use a spray the same as the last, with the exception of the black leaf 40.

Pears are subject not only to the same enemies that attack the apples but to the psylla, which is their own individual pest. They should be sprayed at the same time as the apple trees for this and for scale, with 5 gallons of lime sulphur to 45 of water; the second time for the scab, when the apple trees receive their second spraying, with a weaker solution of the lime sulphur; the third time for coddling moth, scab and psylla with one gallon of lime sulphur, ½ pint of black leaf 40, 3 pounds of lead arsenate and 50 gallons of water. This same spray can be used two weeks later.

Plums should be sprayed a few weeks before blooming time with the same mixture used for the pear trees. This is for scale. For brown rot use the lime [illegible] second time for the second spraying of the pear trees just before the blossom buds open, and for the brown rot and curculio use 1 gallon lime sulphur, 2 pounds lead arsenate and 50 gallons of water. The final spraying for brown rot of 1 gallon lime sulphur to 50 gallons of water should take place ten days later.

The first spraying of the cherry trees for black aphis and scale should be made with ½ pint black leaf 40, 5 gallons lime sulphur and 45 gallons water. For brown rot and curculio use just before the blossom buds open 2 pounds arsenate of lead, 1 gallon lime sulphur and 50 gallons of water; after the petals fall, 2 pounds of lead arsenate, 1 gallon lime sulphur and 50 gallons of water. The final spraying should consist of a spray of 2 pounds lead arsenate, 1 gallon lime sulphur and 50 gallons water.

Peaches may be sprayed for scale, curl leaf and brown rot any time before the buds swell with 5 gallons lime sulphur and 45 gallons of water. After the blossoms have fallen the peach trees should be sprayed with 1 gallon lime sulphur, 1½ pounds of lead arsenate and 50 gallons of water. This should be applied again three weeks later.

These formulas are for arsenate in the paste form; in the powdered form only half as much is required.

Whale oil soap makes an excellent wash for trees and shrubs where insects and eggs affect the bark and for smearing on the trunks of trees to prevent the worms from crawling up.

New Flowers

EVERY one wants the roses, pansies, poppies, asters and phlox—the flowers that we all know about—but there are so many things that every one does not have—why not try a few of these?

This is not to advocate the discarding of any of the old favorites which are deservedly so, nor is it intended to urge adventure too strongly on the gardener who is just beginning. It is a suggestion for the one who has so well established herself with her tried and true friends that she can afford to let in a few newcomers.

I wonder how many readers have ever tried the polyanthus or little hardy yellow primroses so common in England. I set out a few one year under an old apple tree in a New Jersey garden, giving them bluebells for company, and they had a charm that one would hate to miss if she had ever seen it. They need a light winter protection, but given that they will do well year after year.

Statice, or sea lavender, has cloudlike masses of branching flowers with individuality and graceful beauty which should win for them a place in every garden.

Artemisia, a recent introduction from China, is one of the best late blooming plants. It grows from four to five feet tall and has branching spikes of creamy white flowers with a sweet odor.

If you like blue flowers, by all means have the veronicas, speedwells. They are of varying shades. The Longifolia subsessilis has flowers of a beautiful amethyst hue, grows two feet high and blooms from August to October. The Gentianoides, pale blue, with azure, does not grow quite so tall and blooms in May and June. The Incana, with amethyst blue flowers and silvery foliage, blooms in July and August, and the Maritima July to September, so that one may have some of these blue flowers throughout the summer. There are also the Veronica virginica, with tall white spikes, in August and September, and the Veronica spicata var. rosea, with purplish pink flowers, in July.

The Hypericum moserianum, St. John's wort, is a plant with handsome foliage verging toward bronze, which blooms freely throughout the summer. The flowers are rich golden yellow with yellow stamens and crimson anthers. It grows about two feet tall and is fine for a border in certain situations.

Try some of the tufted pansies or bedding violas, which are quite distinct from pansies in habit and coloring. They are used in England among roses and other plants and are popular for table decorations.

Broccoli is a little known but valuable vegetable. It resembles cauliflower, but is much hardier. For an early crop sow seed in the hotbed during March and April, transplant in May or June to rows three to four feet apart, the plants about two feet apart in the row. For a late crop the seed may be planted in June in hills or beds, covering it to a depth of half an inch. One-eighth of an ounce of seed will plant enough for a small family.

Gardening a Duty

"PATRIOTIC words are empty air; patriotic acts alone will help," says Mr. Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the National Emergency Food Garden Commission. "Plant a garden and do your part toward the economic victory.

"You are anxious to do something patriotic because you feel that way. You want to help your country. You can plant a vegetable food garden. Are you doing so?"

Some persons have thought that this matter of extra gardening and farming might be overdone, that there would be a greater production of vegetables than we could use, but there is small danger of that. It is hoped that there will be a large enough supply to reduce prices materially. That will be a good thing for thousands of persons who are struggling with the present costs. If we have any surplus there are millions in other countries who will be glad to get it. After such a lean year as the world has known a fat one would be very welcome.

The warning, however, should be repeated that gardens do not grow with good intentions. Putting seeds in the ground will not ensure a crop. One must learn how to make a garden and how to cultivate it, otherwise time, money and will have been wasted and hopes will be blasted.

Those who have never gardened will be surprised to learn how many sides there are to gardening that they have never suspected. For the novice let it be stated that it is of no use to plant a garden unless you have a mellow, fertile piece of land with full exposure to the sun. Most back yards and waste spaces are not mellow and fertile. How can they be made so? If you know nothing of soils you had better get the advice of some one who does know. Many back yards have pieces of brick, stone and coal in them. Take these out before undertaking anything else. Then find out whether your soil is sand or clay, whether it is sweet or sour. Whatever its condition, lime and fertilizer probably will help it. Put on the lime first and let it get incorporated with the soil before putting on your fertilizer. Barnyard manure, not too fresh, is one of the best of fertilizers if you can get it. If you have to depend on commercial fertilizer you will need humus, especially with the stiff clayey soils. If there is a turf to be turned under or even a good growth of weeds it will help the character of the soil. If you have any wood ashes put them on your soil for the potash they will yield. This is valuable for potatoes, sweet corn and many other crops.

The Gay Florets

"EVEN the Japanese seem to be falling in line with Spanish ideas," writes a correspondent from Palm Beach. "To a kind of basket for cut flowers, which is made to perform many duties, the name of 'Florets' has been given. It is as useful and decorative a holder as it is ingenious.

"It consists of a wooden box about four inches square and fourteen inches high. The florets vary in detail, but all are black, with hand carved Japanese figures painted in gold, with a dash of red here and there.

"At the top there is a square handle by which it may be carried as an ordinary flower basket, and it is often hung on the wall, sometimes indoors and sometimes outside on the porch. As a table centrepiece it is striking, although a little too high, unless the flowers are tall enough to extend above the eyes.

"Inside the florets there is a metal vase holding water. Yellow or red flowers with a dash of green are especially effective in these holders. They are seen in many of the Palm Beach cottages."

There is a Japanese climbing cucumber which covers poles or trellises as rapidly as lima bean vines.

New vegetables are constantly coming to us from the Japanese. They eat little meat and pay much attention to the raising of vegetables. The Department of Agriculture has tested many of their seeds and recommended them for cultivation in different parts of this country.

The Japanese egg plant is small, and has a more delicate flavor than the larger and coarser varieties generally grown in the United States. Various kinds of beans have been introduced from Japan, but probably the most successful is the runner bean, which has stringless pods often nearly three feet in length, quite and crisp. The foliage is so light and delicate that the beans get plenty of sun and do not rot as easily as those that are shaded by denser foliage.

One thinks of the pumpkin as being distinctively American, but the Japanese have one called chirimen that has few seeds and is so tender that it makes better pies than the native vegetable.

SPEED IS NOT NOTICED IN MAKING THE FIRST FLIGHT

To be equally proficient with the birds in the air in the art of flying has been the ambition of man for many centuries, but not until the last century has his ambition been realized. Very few would have attempted to try twenty years ago. Now, however, private enterprise has opened schools whereby anyone fortunate enough to be able to pay the cost of tuition may learn to fly, provided, of course, that he has sufficiently healthy nerves.

Suppose, however, that circumstances provide an opportunity that enables you to taste of the delights of flying. A bright day, a little breeze, and an obliging pilot, who first equips you with a combination suit of overalls that button closely around the neck, a helmet that covers the head, neck and ears, and a pair of goggles to prevent the air pressure from forcing your eyes shut.

Ready for Start.

The mechanic in charge of the machine has by this time looked over the machine, made sure that everything is all right, and is busy cranking the engine by turning the huge propeller. The engine started, speech is useless. Your pilot will sit in the rear seat just behind the planes, so that he may have a perfect view, and his passenger will be seated just in front, between the planes. If you make your flight in a student's machine you will have ample opportunity to watch the operating of the controls as both seats are fitted with a complete system of operating, which is so constructed that both operate under the one hand.

Once satisfied that his engine is operating properly the pilot will show you how to strap yourself into the machine. You secure yourself by a strap which is fastened inside the seat and buckles closely to your waist. When ready, you nod to the pilot who motions to the mechanic, the blocks which are placed beneath the two front wheels, for the purpose of holding the aeroplane in place, are removed, and your pilot turns the engine on full. Immediately you are in motion and before fifty yards have been covered you begin to soar. It takes several seconds to gather your wits out of the confusion of starting, and by that time you will have attained a height of 2,000 feet, perhaps.

At first you will be satisfied to sit still and observe the sky, not venturing to look down, and enjoying to the full what might be described as the very poetry of motion, so delightful is it. But on looking down you are disappointed to find that your head does not swim and that you are not tempted to jump out of the machine; on the contrary, the first thing that strikes you is the wondrous beauty of the panorama lying beneath. The country roads mark the earth into what appears to be perfect squares, continuing thus until lost in a town or village. From above the Long Branch Aerodrome can be seen the Toronto-Hamilton Highway, those parts that have been constructed, and those parts that have yet to be completed, standing out in detail. It is impossible to describe the sensation caused by the view of a wonderful colour scheme, composed of earth, lake and sky, all comprised in one scene. Combine with this a sensation of travelling at the rate of 65 to 75 miles an hour in a machine so delicately poised that there is absolutely no sense of rapid motion realized, no bumps, hardly a roll.

At 3,000 Feet.

During your trip your pilot will have been navigating in such a way that just before he decides to come down he will have attained a height of between 2,500 and 3,000 feet. The difference is hardly perceptible at first.

A little experience with aviators would lead you to believe that they go up for the pleasure of coming down.

But, when he is ready to descend, he will turn off the power from the engine and warn you by gestures that he is about to descend. Perhaps he will do this in a series of 'volplanes'; if so, there will be very little 'thrill' experienced by the passenger. If, however, he descends in a series of spirals the thrills will be marked by the number of spirals. If you like the sensation produced by a ride on the roller-boller coaster at the Beach or the chute the chutes, just try spiralling in an aeroplane—you will be pleased.

Dipping Down.

When making the top part of the circle, the plane is tipped at an abrupt angle and the noise suddenly raised, causing a sensation of being forced into your seat. The sideleng angle becomes more acute until suddenly without warning the nose of the machine drops down until you are almost in a perpendicular position, at the same time you shoot earthward a distance of about 200 feet and realize that you are, for the time, under the full influence of gravitation. You would probably be very much frightened if your pilot did not warn you, but this is your initiation and by sitting close into the machine instead of allowing your body to become tense, you give with the machine, the following spirals will be enjoyed. After diving 200 feet your pilot brings his machine back to a horizontal position, circles again, and so on, until he has reached within five or six hundred feet from the ground, when he brings his machine into position for making a landing. When you finally approach solid ground, you realize for the first time the terrific speed at which you have been travelling, a fact that makes no impression upon you while flying high.

The landing is made uneventfully, the rear end of the machine being the first part to touch the ground. There is a total absence of shock. You simply wait until she slows down before getting out.

After such an experience your feelings of admiration for a man who can think and act under such ambition to develop the ability to fly yourself. The trip lasted only fifteen minutes and comprised more real pleasure than could be had in a life time in any other way.

CURIOUS STORY TOLD ABOUT THE PIED PIPER

Robert Browning, father of the poet whose collection of caricatures is to be sold for the benefit of the Red Cross Fund, was a man of many parts from whom his famous son would seem to have inherited not a few of his characteristics. A clever artist with a turn for the grotesque, and a versifier with a taste for eccentric rhymes he might, but for his more brilliant son, he remembered to-day as the author of the "Pied Piper of Hamelin," for it was he who told Robert that story and, some years before the poet produced his version, turned it into lively verse for the entertainment of a sick child—little Willie Macready, son of the famous actor. The poet does not seem to have known of his father's version until after he had produced his 'own.—London Chronicle.

THE PERFECT WOMAN

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

A conference of girl school teachers at Liverpool has undertaken to define in detail "the perfect woman, nobly planned, to warn, to counsel and command." As might have been anticipated their ideal is far from the "bread and butter miss" of Byron. She must be forty years old—Balzac put a long experience into the life of his "Femme de Trente Ans." She must be the mother of five children and she must be a home body with modern qualifications.

Now, whoever wrote the Proverbs, the Temple-Builder who had seven hundred wives, and to whom the whole Book is popularly credited, may well have been the author of the perfect woman chapter. Between the old Jerusalem and the new Liverpool ideals there are points of likeness and points of contrast.

"Liverpool's idea is "the centre of a good home in which there is a high standard of cleanliness and comfort, and where good taste is everywhere apparent in furniture, carpets, curtains, wallpaper, ornaments and clothes." Jerusalem's idea is a fine housewife, too: "She is not afraid of the snow for her household, for all her household are clothed with scarlet. She maketh herself coverings of tapestry, her clothing is silk and purple."

The English teachers say "the ideal woman is sensible and businesslike and her home is a place of peace. She is patriotic and interested in politics, and does all she can to remove the causes of suffering among the poor." Solomon says: "She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy"—not a word about politics, and no suggestion of organized charity research as to the causes of poverty.

The lady pedagogues declare: "She is a delightful companion and has a gift for friendship." The Temple-Builder puts it thus: "She openeth her mouth with wisdom and in her tongue is the law of kindness" — a rather more comprehensive phrasing.

The Liverpool formula makes the perfect woman one who "is religious and tries to fulfill her duty toward God and other people." The Proverbs chapter exclaims: "Favour is deceitful and beauty is vain, but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised."

Liverpool thinks the perfect woman of forty should swim, skate, dance, row, ride a horse, drive a motorcar, read everyday books of seriousness, novels, newspapers, and speak three languages besides her own, which the Wise Man of Old found negligible. But getting up before daylight to give out household supplies, "laying hands to the spindle and distaff" and "eating not the bread of idleness" belong to the more venerable conception.

The instructors thus describe their type: "She can do anything and everything about the house. She has some knowledge of the law, knows how to invest money, can use a typewriter." Solomon is more concrete: "She seeketh wool and flax and worketh willingly with her hands . . . She considereth a field and buyeth it; with the fruit of her hands she planteth a vineyard."

A QUAKER'S PREJUDICE.

A Quaker had gotten himself into trouble with the authorities, and the sheriff called to escort him to the lock-up.

"Is your husband in?" he inquired of the good wife who came to the door.

"My husband will see thee," she replied. "Come in."

The sheriff entered, was bidden to make himself at home, and was hospitably entertained for half an hour, but no husband appeared. At last the sheriff grew impatient.

"Look here," said he, "I thought you said your husband would see me."

"He has seen thee," was the calm reply, "but he did not like thy looks and has gone another way."—Harper's Magazine.

RAILROAD MEN MUST KEEP FIT

There is a splendid fraternal spirit among the men who earn their living on the railroad. Good news is passed along from man to man, and it was in this way Mr. Frank Ide, a well-known Buffalo Pullman car conductor, learned how he could free himself of terrible pains in the groin and back and painful urination from gravel, the result of his kidneys being out of order.

He treated for two months, when one of his railway friends whose life had been despaired of, but who had made a very quick recovery through using Gin Pills, strongly recommended Mr. Ide to try them, and as he says, "The pain left me entirely. I feel as well as I ever did in my life. I recommend Gin Pills to everybody in any way troubled with kidneys or bladder".

Not only do Gin Pills assist nature to cleanse the system through the kidneys, but they stimulate the bowels, quickly relieving constipation.

All good dealers sell Gin Pills at 50c. a box or 6 boxes for $2.50. Free sample upon request to the National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 95

HELPFUL HINT FOR PEOPLE DROWNING

Several women's magazines ask their readers to send in original household hints or other "discoveries." The following helpful hint for those who find themselves in deep water was recently received, but not printed. The information is now for the first time passed on for the benefit of those who are thinking of summering by the shore.

"Preventive of Drounding: If you should fall into deep water don't loose yourself. But keep cool, creep on the bottom. Don't let the water rise you. Just keep down. By using judgment one can reach the shore or some rock before they let themselves rise. One can creep or walk and hands and feet as long as they can hold their breath. But by letting the water rise you, you only sink again. I have seen this tried with success."—New York Evening Post.

REJECTS AFTER TRAINING

Huge Number of Men Accepted and Drilled and Never Taken Overseas.

OTTAWA, May 8.—According to a return tabled in the Commons yesterday, seven per cent. of the men who enlisted in Canada, and who were accepted and trained were afterwards discharged before going overseas at all as being medically unfit.

Out of 467,221 reported as having enlisted up to March 31 last, 29,658 were discharged in Canada as medically unfit, and the number including those who were discharged after being wounded overseas is given as 63,053. The number of men who returned from overseas and were then discharged in Canada as medically unfit, including those whose disability was due to or aggravated by military service, is 1,478.

During 1916 the total number of those offering for enlistment was 295,051, and of these, 198,342 recruits were accepted. The percentage accepted for all of Canada was 70 per cent and the percentage of rejections 34 per cent.

WOMAN; THE "HANDYMAN"

An Englishwoman writes:—The entrance of women into the world of work and mechanism has torn aside the veil of mystery which once shrouded the fixing of a fuse wire or the mending of a window sash. The dearth of plumbers, carpenters, and glaziers, who in the past, in the absence of a man about the house, were called upon for "odd jobs," presented a difficulty which has served to reveal the versatility of woman. Familiarity with tools in the various workshops has enabled her to put a new washer on a tap, to repair the grandfather's clock, or to put a lock on teh garden gate, as the case might be.

At one time I was dining with a sister in the country when a small son of the village baker called at the house with the message, "Muvver says would the young lady come and see to our gas, because it's jumping?" Her reputation as a handywoman is an enviable one. The children bring her their toys for repair, the women look for advice as to how to do the thousand and one little jobs about the home that the absent men used to do.

My own efforts in the electrical line began quite brilliantly with the successful wiring of two table lamps, but my pride in the achievement suffered a severe fall over an attempt to fix up an electric fire. Total ignorance of the appreciable difference of flex, twin-flex, and cable led me into a trap, from which I was extricated by an electrician, to the accompaniment of scathing remarks apropos the evil of "folks interfering with things what they know nothing about." But we are all learning from experience, and on that glad day when the men come home again the peace of their Saturday afternoons will be undisturbed.

CLEAN CANADIANS

Major's Testimony on Habits of Our Soldiers

Major Gerald Birks writes: "You ask me what I think of the Canadian soldiers. The question is easily answered. In the first place the Canadian soldier impresses everyone by the fact that he is clean. He is clean in his person, his rifle, his uniform. I have seen him come out of the trenches so be-spattered that he was almost beyond recognition but in the space of half an hour or so by a vigorous application of soap and water the mud has all disappeared, and he is once more fresh and smiling. The good French folks consider that he is far too extravagant with these valuable commodities. All the same, they frankly concede that of all the soldiers he pleases the eye most. Another feature that impresses one is his unfailing good humor. The Canadian soldier impresses by his intelligence. You may speak to a stretcher bearer and inquire what he does in civil life, and be told that he is a chartered accountant. In an officers' mess you may find waiting at a table a banker and a solicitor. Thus it is that I feel that the word 'Tommy' does not describe our lads at the front. Without a doubt it is the flower of Canada's manhood that is serving over there."

CIRCUS HORSE SAVES WOUNDED SOLDIER

A French soldier, Private Ambrose Perrichon, owes his life to a German circus horse, which picked him up when he was lying on the field of battle and carried him into the French lines, says a correspondent in the Horseshoer's Journal. Both the soldier's legs were shattered by a German quick-firer. When night came on he heard near him the heavy breathing of a great white horse, which munched the short grass. The animal was riderless, and he whistled to it and began to clap it kindly. The horse whinned with pleasure. Perrichon was powerless to make the slightest effort on his own behalf. The animal seemed to understand, for it fell on its knees beside him held its head over his breast and remained motionless. Then it got up and walked around the soldier At last it stopped, sniffed the wounded man all over and then, seizing his leather waistbelt in its teeth, it lifted him from the ground and galloped off. When the horse stopped in the advance French lines at daybreak its human burden was little more than a wreck. But tender care has since brought him round and he is now convalescent. Perrichon's sergeant, who knows a lot about horses, says the animal which saved his life was before the war in a German circus, where it performed in the pantomime known as "The Arab and His Faithful Steed."

WEAK AND TIRED WOMAN

Tells How Vinol Made Her Strong.

Peterborough women who are weak, run-down and suffer from the consequent effects of such a condition, will be interested in Mrs. Odell's letter. She says:

"I am a farmer's wife and was all run-down, weak, tired, and suffered from indigestion, and sometimes it seemed as though I could not keep around and do my housework. I had taken many medicines without benefit. One day I saw Vinol advertised, and made up my mind to try it. I have taken four bottles and have gained seven pounds in weight, am much stronger, and feel many years younger than before." Sarah Odell, Lockport, N.Y.

The reason Vinol builds up weak, run-down women so quickly is because it contains a delicious combination of most successful tonics, beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates, in a mild tonic wine.

We want to say to every weak, run-down, overworked woman in Peterborough that we will return your money if Vinol fails to help you as it did Mrs. Odell.

CANADIAN BAND THE FIRST OVER TO THE FRONT IN FRANCE

Not many people know that the first band that ever went to France since the war began was a Canadian band. It was the old band of the 10th Winnipeg Battalion, afterwards to become the Second Canadian Infantry Brigade Band. Its history in France is a very checkered one, not untouched with romance and adventure.

The bandmaster of this historic band was Lieut. T. W. James, who is now in Ottawa, and in an interview told of some of the vissicitudes through which the organization went through. Although it got to France by stealth and without the sanction of the British army authorities, it afterwards became an institution, did glorious work among the men, and was the object of the highest praise from the heads of Canadian and British armies.

In the first place, Lieut. James, who now resides on Metcalfe street, was a clarinet soloist in the famous Scots Guard band, is a musician by instinct and by descent, when the Scots Guards visited Canada a few years ago, he determined to come here when he got back to England and could arrange for his release from the Imperial army, then in the good old days of peace. He came to Canada, settled in Winnipeg, and was there when the war broke out. On the first call he volunteered. He went to Valcartier and then went to England and finally France with the old "First Contingent." He kept his comrades of the band together until the front was reached, but not without an effort.

Smuggled Instruments Over.

It is common knowledge that the British authorities forbade bands going to France in the early months of the war. Since then, happily, the rule has been made less rigid. How was the 10th Batt. to get its band over? The men simply went as rankers, and smuggled their instruments over as officers' kits' Lieut. James was determined that music should accompany the dull round of trench life.

Once at the front, the instruments were brought out and good work performed. But the men went into the trenches like common infantrymen. They did noble work there, were wounded, and some killed. When in rest billets the band, what was left of it, would give concerts and play at church services. But the inroads of the casualty list made sad havoc among the band. One day Lieut. James was asked to get a band for one occasion. He tried to get his men together, but alas, only four remained. The remainder were either in hospital or beneath the sod of Flanders. But a British soldier is never at a loss. Lieut. James scoured the army and got a cornettist from one battalion, and trombone player from another, and a horn player from another. By this means quite a good band was again organized, and it became the 2nd Brigade band.

War Worn Welcomed Music

From that time it became part of the Canadian army in France. It played the men going into the trenches, and it played them coming out, muddy and wet and weary, but always ready to listen to the band. The band played a lot at "Plug street." Every night as the battalions came out they were welcomed with stirring airs and choruses, and the men would go to their billets, scrape the mud from their boots and clothes, and then come to the tent where the band played, to listen instead of going to sleep.

"I cannot speak too highly of the men who went with the band," said Lieut. James, "nor can I exaggerate the splendid spirit of the men of the battalions." He told of one man, who had just had his leg amputated. The band was playing outside a casualty clearing station. It was a fine day and the men were brought outside.

Spirit of the Canadians.

Lieut. James saw the man with his leg off, the end exposed, and he asked him if the band would not make too much noise. "Good old band," said the man, dismissing such a thought, "can you play us some rag time?" Some ragtime was played, and the bandmaster observed how the wounded Canadian beat time to the tune with his good leg. There were scores of incidents similar to that which showed the spirit of the Canadians.

Lieut. James was asked what tunes the men preferred. Their taste is wide, but the most popular were the latest music hall and musical comedy songs. The men would get leave, go to London and see a new musical piece. Then they would come back and ask that it be played. The band always got the latest music. Among the popular songs were "Pack up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag," and 'Keep the Home Fires Burning," and others, which have been sung in England and Canada.

PIMPLES and BOILS

ALL OVER FACE AND BODY

When the blood becomes impure you will find that pimples and boils will break out all over the body, and although they are not dangerous trouble, they make you appear unsightly both to your friends and yourself.

Burdock Blood Bitters will cleanse the blood of all the impurities and poisons which cause the skin to break out in these eruptions.

Miss Sylvia Swanson, Theodore, Sask., writes: "I am letting you know what great value your B.B.B. has been to me. A year ago I started to grow pale and weak, the cause being bad blood. I got so many pimples and boils all over my face and body that I would not let strangers see me, and I used to avoid company. I tried many remedies but all seemed a failure. I read about how good your B.B.B. had been to thousands of people so I got a bottle and after I had finished the second one my pimples and boils had all disappeared. People thought it a miracle how well I looked.

"Your grand old remedy sure has been as good as gold and better, to me".

Burdock Blood bitters has been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Company, Limited, Toronto, Ont. See that our name appears on the wrapper.

GIRL COULD NOT WORK

How She Was Relieved from Pain by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I had pains in both sides and when my periods came I had to stay at home from work and suffer a long time. One day a woman came to our house and asked my mother why I was suffering. Mother told her that I suffered every month and she said, 'Why don't you buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My mother bought it and the next month I was so well that I worked all the month without staying at home a day. I am in good health now and have told lots of girls about it."—Miss CLARICE MORIN, 22 Russell Street, Taunton, Mass.

Thousands of girls suffer in silence every month rather than consult a physician. If girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a safe and pure remedy made from roots and herbs, much suffering might be avoided.

Japan Corners Pearl Shell

Monopolizes Supplies From Fiji, Controlling the Button Market.

SYDNEY, Australia, — Apropos of the charges made by the Republican Publicity Bureau during the recent Presidential campaign in the United States that the pearl button industry had been killed by the Democratic tariff policy, and that the business was fast falling into the hands of the Japanese, word comes to Sydney from the Fiji Islands that the Japanese have not only monopolized the trochas shell supply of that group but are encouraging the 'skinning" of the reefs, and are thus indirectly threatening the destruction of the shell output of Fiji. Not only so, but advices lately received from Brisbane are to the effect that the Japanese are seeking to exploit the shell supply of Thursday Island and elsewhere on the northern side of the Australian continent.

"The shell industry is in a curious position," writes the Suva (Fiji) correspondent of The Sydney Daily Telegraph. "Buttons are made out of trochas shell, or, as it is termed in the Fiji Islands, sici, (pronounced seethee.) The industry was started in a novel manner. Over fifteen years ago a Frenchman named Gaspard sent some of the shells home as curios, and they came under the notice of a man in the line who opened negotiations with Gaspard, and regular supplies were from then on sent to France to be turned into buttons. He paid the untutored Fijians $1 or $1.25 per ton in those days, but the present price in Suva is for No. 1 shell, $200 per ton; No. 2, $147.50; No. 3, $97.50. The gradation is according to size.

"France and Austria practically monopolized this industry, but the war caused a change, and it is doubtful if any buttons are made nowadays in France or Austria. The trade is now a Japanese monopoly. All the local shell finds its way to Japan, whence it is exported as a manufactured product. The price varies considerably for reasons not known here. The shells are found in plentiful numbers on the coral reefs surrounding the (Fiji) islands, and merely have to be picked up. Enormous quantities are shipped to Japan by every steamer.

"The high prices obtained for the product have caused the natives to bring in large quantities of 'chicken' shell, which is of no commercial value; and if this conduct is permitted to continue the reefs will soon be stripped of the valuable shell.

"Mr. J. M. Hedstrom, an elected member of the Fiji Legislative Council, who interested himself in the matter, brought it up at the last meeting of the Council, and received the promise that if the Suva and Levuka Chambers of Commerce were of the same opinion action would be taken by the Government.

"That gentleman showed your correspondent some samples of the shell. The first package contained shell from 1 inch to 1 3-4 inches in diameter, weighing about forty-five to the pound, which is of no commercial value. No. 1 shell, from 2 inches to 3 1-2 inches in diameter, weighs about five to the pound, and fetches $200 per ton. If the valueless 'chicken' shell, he said, were allowed to remain on the reefs for two years, it would grow to No. 1 shell, one ton of it would weigh nine tons and it would be worth probably $1,750 instead of nothing.

"'Chicken' shell from one and one half to two inches in diameter is worth about $65 or $70 per ton locally. One firm shipped last month, (November) ten tons of this shell to Japan, and it was valued at about $750, free on board. If the shell had been allowed to remain on the reefs for about two years it would have weighed about fifty tons and been worth over $10,000.

A market having been found in Japan for Thursday Island trochas shell, the scarcity of labour for the industry will be met by engaging Australian natives for the work.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Letters of the Courting Period

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Why it is that a pair of lovers will change their opinion of each other so often, dropping from an infinite height to an infinite depth and rising from a profaned depth to a heavenly height, is one of the many mysteries of love. Ovid wrote of the art of love. He had better have written of the chaos of love. Here are some letters written by one of my grandfathers and one of my grandmothers when they were courting. The first is from grandpa. Just listen to it:

Dearest, Sweetest Matilda—I have but just come to my room from hearing you say that you would be mine, but I cannot refrain from writing you how happy you have made me. I have met many girls, but you are the only angel among them I am awestruck when I think of my having secured such a prize. I only fear that when you find out how unworthy I am you will cast me off.

My grandfather was in such a flutter that ten minutes after he had left my grandmother to continue on paper the twaddle he had lavished on her in speech he was in his room writing the above effusion. It would seem that these young lovers never can break the steady flow of love that pours from their hearts, and if they succeed in doing so they must needs repair the break in some other form as quickly as they can get an opportunity.

And what possessed the man possessed the woman. Scarcely had grandfather left his mate than she rushed to her escritoire and, sitting down, took pen and paper and continued her own heart outpouring in the following note:

Dearest—I know that I am foolish, but I cannot—though you have not been gone ten minutes—refrain from telling you how infinitely happy you have made me by the honor you have done me. To be loved by such a man is simply ecstacy. How honorable you have been in refraining from telling me you loved me before speaking to papa!

Of course I can't give what must have taken hours to write. Besides, what would be the use? It is all on the same high C key. If he was writing to an angel she was writing to a god. 'Let us see how the mercury dropped after the first spat:

Dear Miss Marshall—I must say I was surprised at your action this evening. I supposed you were above treating even a coachman, to say nothing of a gentleman, as you treated me. Do you consider what you did ladylike? I confess that if my father had a kitchen maid who would act toward me as you have done I should insist on her discharge.

Note the rapid fall from angel to kitchen maid. And the old duffer—I forgot; my grandfather was then young—considered himself a gentleman. A gentleman to compare his best girl to a kitchen maid! But his act is nothing to compare with hers. It takes a woman to express her opinion of a man when she's mad:

Mr. Winchell—I thought you were a gentleman. That illusion is gone forever. You will always hereafter be classed with those young men who, having been brought up in the backwoods, have not learned how to treat a lady. Since I don't consider you worthy to enter my house I beg that you will never again do so. Should you persecute me with your attentions hereafter I shall inform my brother. In the evening after dinner I will let Watch loose. His teeth are very sharp.

Noting the date of this letter, I find that a reconciliation was expected the day it was written. At any rate, here are two letters, the first from grandpa, bearing the same date as the last quoted:

Dearest—Thank heaven it's all explained! I will call at half past 8 to take the noblest woman in the world in my arms and give her a million kisses!

The dog that was to have been let loose seems to have lost his terror. This is her reply:

Oh, my darling, now immeasurably happy I am that this horrid nightmare is OVER! And to think that it should have been about so trifling a matter as your criticising the buckles on my shoes! Do come earlier than half past 8. We shall be through dinner by half past 7, and how can I wait a whole hour for you?

For a fortnight after this the waters were untroubled; then came a flash of lightning out of a clear sky. Its violence marks it for the lady's:

Sir—I return with this, by our negro boy Sam, your ring. Considering who gave it to me, he is more than a worthy messenger. I would express a hope that you would be happy with another girl if I did not feel sure you would lead any woman a horrible life. Return my letters at once by bearer.

His reply:

I will return your letters when you have returned mine. Respectfully yours, etc.

This doesn't sound so bad as comparing his angel to a housemaid, but it is really worse. He intimates that he can't trust her to return his letters, she having recovered her own, and that she is liable to use them to his discredit. There's no further record about this return of letters. Quite a gap ensues, during which they were doubtless so much together that they had no use for pens. The next correspondence is but a few days before their marriage. This is from grandpa:

My Angel—I can hardly realise that on Thursday next I shall call you wife. What a lovely, holy situation—no separation till the death of one of us! The word death in this connection frightens me. What can I ever do without you? But away with gloom when heaven is so near!

Here is grandma writing:

Light of My Life—Isn't it lovely to think that after next Thursday we shall be together continuously? My wedding dress fits beautifully. I tried it on today and was charmed with it. I am sure you will be charmed with it too. Everything is ready. The time passes slowly.

A letter written six months later is very different. Indeed, only the most commonplace topics are mentioned.

Slipper Day in Holland.

There is a curious festival called slipper day celebrated in Holland. Slipper day in the Netherlands is the one day in the year in which the Dutchwoman claims superiority over her husband. On that day she rules him to her heart's content, and he generally obeys good humoredly enough—that is, unless she is one of those ladies not unknown in Holland or in any other country who aspire to complete rule over their unhappy partners throughout the year.

Impertinence.

Mr. Todgers—Why have you sent Maria, the servant girl, away so suddenly? You told me yesterday that she was the best girl you ever had. Mrs. Todgers—She's an impertinent hussy. I wanted to borrow her rubbers, and she said she was afraid I couldn't get them on.—Exchange.

Family Treasures.

"What's the trouble in the household?"

"Mother gave away all of father's old clothes, and he retaliated."

"As to how?"

"By throwing away all her old meat-loine lattice."

"Seal Brand" means a certain, definite blend of high-grade coffee—uniform in quality and always delicious.

In ¼, 1 and 2 pound tins. Whole—ground—pulverized—also fine ground for Percolators. Never sold in bulk. 144

STING OF THE HONEYBEE.

About the Most Effective Infernal Machine in Existence.

In proportion to its size, the sting of the honeybee is probably the most effective infernal machine in existence.

The stinging apparatus is smaller than that of a rattlesnake, yet a single sting has been known to kill a man. When we realize that it is almost invisible and consider what it can do we cannot fail to be astounded. It seems the very quintessence of devilishness.

The honeybee's sting is complicated—so complicated that many words and much ink have been used in discussing its construction and use.

It is generally conceded that the sting consists of a shaft of three parts, the principal one being a sheath within which move two barbed lancets. Like the barbs of a fishhook, the lancets are not easily extracted from the flesh into which they have been driven. The sheath and the lancets combined form a hollow tube through which the poison flows from the poison sac.

Two hairy, soft projections, evidently very sensitive, inform the bee when she is in contact with a stingable object.—Popular Science Monthly.

Frohman's Little Safe.

When Charles Frohman was treasurer with Haverly's minstrels he conceived a novel stunt of arousing curiosity in small towns. He bought a small iron safe, about three feet high, and on it had painted in big letters, "Treasurer, Haverly's Mastodon Minstrels." Now actually there was little need for this safe, but it was always carried on the first load of baggage that went to a hotel. It would be placed in a conspicuous place, and then Frohman, waiting until the proper moment, would bustle up to it with an air of great importance, open it, put in two or three $100 bills, close it and go away. When the crowd had gone he would slip back and get the money out again. It proved a good advertising stunt.—"Charles Frohman, Manager and Man."

The White House.

A prize of $500 was offered in Washington's administration for the best design for a house to serve as a home for the president in Washington. James Hoban, an Irishman from South Carolina, was the successful competitor. His sketch contained so many wings and colonnades that the public was horrified, and frills and gingerbread decorations were eliminated. The result was the two story White House as we know it now. Washington laid the cornerstone of the building in 1792. It was completed in 1799, the year of Washington's death.

Liberty and Equality.

Liberty is never the fruit of philosophical deductions, but rather of everyday experience and of the simple ideas arising from facts.—Mirabeau.

Liberty—I say it with a sigh, men are perhaps not worthy of thee. Equality—they desire thee, but they cannot attain thee.—Turgot.

John o'Groat's to Land's End.

The distance in English miles between John o'Groat's, at the extreme north of England, to Land's End, in the farthest south, is about 490 miles as the crow flies, though by the ordinary lines of travel, of course, the distance is something more than that.

His Forte.

An old Iowa neighbor, who was visiting at his home, remarked that it must be a source of great pleasure to him. The father made no reply.

"Really," continued the Iowa man, "it is remarkable. Your youngest son is a cornetist, both your daughters are pianists, and your wife is a violinist. Now, what are you?"

"I," replied the old man—"I am a pessimist."—Life.

The Snail and the Screw.

It is no doubt true that nearly all human inventions have been suggested by natural objects. An engineer points out an interesting example in the case of the screw, the fundamental idea of which, he believes, was suggested to primitive man by the spiral shell of the edible snail. It was not the shape of the shell that suggested the screw, but the spiral motion which it is necessary to give to the body of the snail in order to withdraw it from the shell. This at once showed that an object of a screw shape embedded in a solid powerfully resisted attempts to withdraw it by a straight pull. The hint was enough, and the screw became one of the earliest of man's inventions.

Here Is Home Evidence From People You Know

Ask Them to Confirm Their Statements About Dr. Chase's Nerve Food —Then Put It to the Test in Your Own Case

Peterboro, Ont., March 5. — Still more people are coming forward daily with good words for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. These letters are not from far-away, inaccessible post offices but from your friends and neighbors right here in Peterboro.

You can call on these people, and hear from their own lips just what was their condition and how they were benefited by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

When you have been convinced that this is no ordinary medicine but a bona fide restorative of exceptional merit put it to the test in your own case.

Mrs. J. Mealey, 490 George street, Peterboro, Ont., writes:

"Over a year ago I was in a nervous, run down condition—had no ambition, only a sort of languid feeling. My condition no doubt was due to the fact that I go out nursing at different times and after some severe cases I found my system in a run down condition. Some of my friends advised me to take some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I procured a box and commenced to use them. I continued this treatment until I was greatly benefited, and am now much better.

My husband also finds great benefit from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and the Linseed and Turpentine I have advised many of my friends to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and they have received good results, also."

Mrs. William A. Murphy 491 Elm Street, Peterboro, Ont., writes:

"I had been suffering from nervousness, sleeplessness and a run down condition of the system. I went to the hospital for my nerves, and while there the doctor told me he could do nothing for them. A friend persuaded me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I did so, and all I am sorry for now is that I did not commence using them sooner. My head used to ache so at times I could scarcely stand it, and if I had not secured the Nerve Food when I did I don't know what would have happened. I can sleep well now and have none of those terrible headaches. From time to time I take some of the Nerve Food as a tonic—I would not want to be without them if the cost a dollar a box."

Nervous headaches, indigestion sleeplessness and irritability soon disappear when Dr. Chase' Nerve Food is used to restore the system, 50 cents a box; a full treatment of six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT GARDEN HILL

GARDEN HILL, May 9. — The second anniversary services marking Dr. Lee's induction into this congregation were held on Sunday last and which synchronised with the installation of a splendid new pipe organ by Lye and Sons, Toronto, were preeminently successful. Notwithstanding the heavy roads the church was filled to overflowing, many being unable to gain admission in the evening. Miss Olive Walker, Port Hope, presided at the organ in a most acceptable manner, and Mr. Williams, also of Port Hope, delighted the audience with his solos. Dr. Lee preached afternoon and evening, and his eloquent and appropriate sermons were listened to with a great deal of pleasure by the very large congregations. His afternoon subject was "Finishing the Pillars," and his evening subject "From Plowman to Prophet, or "The Call of Elisha."

The excellent choir of the church rendered sweet and appropriate anthems. It is marvellous how this choir is improving, and the new pipe organ accompaniment assists immensely.

The collections amounted to the splendid sum of $240, which defrays practically the whole cost. The improvements made were very much admired, and the organ gave general satisfaction. Altogether the day was a red letter day in the history of the church.

St. Enoch's church is to be congratulated upon their successful anniversary services and we predict further prosperity under the able ministrations of Dr. Lee, assisted by the splendid officials of the church. The ladies also are to be commended for their excellent services.

Was Troubled With Shortness of Breath

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, dizziness, and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

The nerves become unstrung, you dread to be alone, have a horror of society, start at the least noise and are generally fatigued.

On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be taken. They are just what you require at this time. They regulate and stimulate the heart, and strengthen and restore the whole nerve system.

Mrs. C. M. Cormier, Buctouche, N.B., writes: "Since two years ago I was troubled with a shortness of breath, and sometimes I could hardly breathe. I went to see several doctors, and they said it was from my heart and nerves, but they did not seem to do me any good. One day I got one of your B.B.B. Almanacs and read of a case similar to mine.

"I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking it I noticed such a change that I kept on taking them until I had used four more boxes, when I was cured."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box, three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co.,

LANDLORDS MUST GO SAYS LADY WARWICK

Countess Thinks British Hereditary Property Holders Will Be an Anachronism.

ASSAILS BUYERS OF TITLES.

LONDON.—The Countess of Warwick, owner of 28,000 acres, has issued an appeal to the landed aristocracy of Great Britain to follow the example of the Russian Grand Dukes, and turn over all their feudal properties to the State.

"We must go," she says. "The aristocracy of England, in its position of hereditary landowners, must go. The country rings with suggestions for the betterent of the conditions under which land is cultivated, but as I see things the suggestions are in no instance drastic enough.

"The only cure for the present evils seems to me to be State ownership, the abolition of all private property in the earth that was given to all of us in common. There are two classes of large landowners in England, the aristocracy and the plutocracy. As a class, the aristocracy have been good landlords within limits, but the limits are very marked, because they have always been a narrow-minded body. The average chatelaine who plays the part of Lady Bountiful is to me an abomination, because her philanthropy is so closely associated with dogmatic religion, personal pride, and party politics.

"I have known estates where the tenants are expected to belong to the Church of England, and nonconformists are barred or persecuted. Radicalism is likewise suspect. Farmers, labourers and small village tradesmen have been ruined or exiled from the place of their birth because their opinions are contrary to those of their landlords. Men and women on such estates must mold their lives to order, think as they are told to think. If our aristocracy possessed the overwhelming wisdom necessary to their rôle as supreme dictators all would be well, but I cannot reckon in their ranks more than six whose claims would bear momentary consideration.

"As for the plutocrats, the men who have bought lands and titles in the open market—and the one is nearly as readily purchased as the other—they have not the old feudal tradition of the aristocracy. They have been accustomed to make business ventures pay; they demand 6 per cent. on their outlay and employ an agent who will see that they get it. The landlord of this class is a bad landlord.

"For the betterment of social conditions in England a supreme sacrifice is required. It is no more than justice that the men who have offered their lives in this war for Britain should have the freedom of Britain for their reward. It is no justice that calls men to fight for the land and leaves it in the hands of a fraction of those who fought. To me it is impossible that in the future 'his Grace' or 'my Lord' should own square miles of the mother earth for which Tom died and Dick was sore wounded and Harry fought unscathed.

"The country has great needs. If it is to remain solvent the united work of one and all is necessary. The old feudal landlord will be an anachronism, the new money-spun landlord an abomination. Only the State can own the land in trust for those who can make it productive. We who are in the high places in England should retire from them in the real hals of renunciation, and our act of sacrifice would be a better memorial than the best of us could have hoped to gain."

HIS TALE OF WOE.

A Scotsman recently arrived, was chatting with a friend over conditions overseas.

The new arrival told feelingly of the terrible toll of war upon the fair land of Scotia, the sad tale of young men killed and maimed, the sufferings of the families left behind.

"Why, mon, we're jist plum distractit wi' it all," he concluded.

"And, I suppose, the war has caused the price of provisions to go up in Scotland as well as everywhere else?" commented the questioner with sympathy.

"Aye, mon, ye're richt," agreed the visitor. "Provessions has gone up in price, four shillings a bottle the ane sort, and saxpence the quart the ither."

RUSSIA'S FUTURE IS MENACED BY LACK OF HARMONY

Quarrel Between Council and Provisional Govt. Arouses "Serious Fears"

SOCIAL ELEMENTS HAMPER PROGRESS

COALITION MINISTRY IS INVITED TO ENSURE COMPLETE SUCCESS OF REVOLUTION.

Special Cable by William G. Shepherd

PETROGRAD, May 11.—Frank admission that free Russia's future is darkly menaced by the quarrel between the Duma provisional Government and the Soldiers and Workmen's Committee, was made in striking phrases of a proclamation posted yesterday throughout Petrograd invit ing a coalition Government.

"The provisional Government cannot conceal from the people that of late its difficulties have increased to such an extent as to give rise to serious fears for the future of the Government," the proclamation declared.

After listing in detail the various reforms which have been achieved under the new regime, in conformity with pledges to the people, the Duma leaders referred to the latter friction and said: "The provisional Government sought to rely on moral forces. Not a drop of the people's blood has been shed by its fault. No voice has been stifled.

ADMINISTRATION IS DIFFICULT

"Unfortunately the new social elements are too slowly welding—and unsatisfactorily. The welding has been hampered by the process of disintegration provoked by the collapse of the old regime. Isolated groups of certain classes of the population, lacking conscientiousness, seek to realize their aspirations through violence. They threaten to destroy discipline and internal policy and thus create anarchy.

"Therefore the provisional Government believes it a duty to declare frankly this state of things its rendering the administration of the country difficult. It may lead to internal disorders, defeat at the front, phantom anarchy, and civil war—threatening the liberty which arises before Russia."

Continuing, the proclamation appealed to the efforts of all to strengthen the power by safeguarding it.

"The Government," the proclamation concluded, "desires to reinforce its composition by inviting to join with it representatives of the live creative forces of the country who hitherto have not taken an active part in the administration of the State."

The Government's complete frankness in this appeal to the people created favourable response to-day. All newspapers comment at length on it. Those regarded as favouring Foreign Minister Miliukoff joined in declaring "double power in Russia is impossible."

GOVERNMENT IS CHALLENGED.

"Directly challenging the Government," said one of Miliukoff's organs, "the Workmen's and Soldiers' Committee has ordered that no troops leave the barracks without signed permission of the committee. Power over the troops is thus transferred from the commander-in-chief to the president of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Committee. No Government can agree to such a situation."

Maxim Gorki's newspaper to-day proclaims such a state of affairs as revealed in the present crisis is "unendurable."

The appeal of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labour, to Russia workmen to stand by the Government and firm for freedom, was widely published here to-day.

The despatch stating that the Provisional Government in Russia has passed a resolution favouring a coalition Ministry, is explained by Professor James Mayor as a sign of closer relationship between the officials of the new Government and the representatives of the working classes.

"It means that labour Ministers will be chosen from the Council of Workingmen's Deputies, I presume," said the professor. "And this will bring the curious modern body into closer relationship with the Government."

REINFORCEMENTS NEEDED

Recently statements have been appearing in the press from officers at the front with regard to the need of men in the front line trenches, and surprise has been expressed by several that there should be any slowness on the part of those at home now in coming forward to join the forces. These officers remember the large rush on the declaration of war of men to the colours, and they cannot understand why this should be less now that the need is greater than ever.

The war is not finished yet, and though the outlook is hopeful there is still the prospect of the struggle going on for some time. An eminent military authority repeated lately the statement of Lord Kitchener that the side which was able to throw the last 50,000 men into the field was the one which would win the war.

The last 50,000 men in Canada who have enlisted for overseas service are now almost all overseas or on their way. These men have been trained partly here, but their departure was hurried by the great need for them at the front, and they will be brushed up hurriedly in England. At the present time, therefore, in Canada outside a few thousand overseas troops who have not yet gone, there are no soldiers except about 12,000 militia men. The militia forces have been depleted by the continuous call for men for overseas service and at the present time they consist for the most part of men over age or physically unfit for overseas service. On this force alone is Canada depending for security in case of emergency. The cry of emergency is no empty one. In time of war no one can say just what is going to happen from day to day, and the only proper way is to be prepared for any contingency.

THE DEFENCE FORCE.

The Government, therefore, has decided to call out a force of 50,000 men to be known as the Canadian Defence Force, whose duty it will be to take care of any military emergency. The raising of this force will make possible the departure of all the overseas troops and men who join the Canadian Defence Force are therefore relieving others to go overseas.

Terms of enlistment in the C.D.F. are the same as for overseas service, viz. for the duration of the war. Pay, subsistence, clothing and equipment are the same, and separation allowances are granted in the case of married men. For the present men who join this force will drill two evenings and one afternoon a week for which they will be paid 50 cents a parade. Later they will be taken to camp and will be kept there all summer.

Further information regarding this service can be secured from the advertisements which the government is having inserted in the newspapers from time to time, or at the Orderly Room of any militia regiment.

The militia regiments are raising the force and have already made a start. Staffs have been completed and a beginning has been made in enrolling men.

The call to the young men who for family or other reasons cannot go overseas. Here an opportunity is offered to them to serve Canada at home, and to do their share in the great world struggle by releasing others for overseas service.

Dyspeptics Should Avoid Drugs And Medicines

Try a Little Magnesia Instead.

Some people instinctively shut their eyes to danger, and it may be that instinct, or custom or habit causes dyspeptics to take drugs, patent foods and medicines, artificial digestents, etc.

But closing the eyes does not banish the danger, and it is certain that neither drugs nor medicines possess the power to destroy the harmful excessive acid in the stomach, which is the underlying cause of most forms of indigestion and dyspepsia. They may give temporary relief, but ever increasing quantities must be taken, and all the time the acid remains in the stomach as dangerous as ever.

Physicans know this and that is why their advice so often to sufferers from digestive and stomach trouble is "Just get about an ounce of pure bisurated magnesia from your druggist and take a teaspoonful in a little water immediately after every meal. This will instantly neutralize all the harmful acid in the stomach and stop all food fermentation, thus enabling you to enjoy hearty meals without experiencing the least pain or unpleasantness afterward.

THE HOME GARDEN

(Green Peas)

HANDLING THE SPADE

In breaking up a vacant lot where grass has grown for years, the plough and harrow must be brought into service. There will be a little or no occasion for using a spade the first season at least. Backyards present a different problem, since horse-power is not practicable. Dependence must be placed on the time honoured spade that has done such good work in the past, and is ready to do more in the future.

As a matter of fact, spading is better than ploughing, as it crumbles the soil better, and leaves no glazed surfaces. There are two ways of doing the work. One consists in simply lifting the earth with the spade or fork and dropping it again, turned over on the spot from which it was taken. The other, and usually better method, is to move the whole top portion of soil six inches or a foot in one direction at the same time turning it over.

A spade or fork will take up more or less earth according to the angle at which it is thrust into the ground. Compare a boy who drives his spade straight down with one who is pushing his at an angle away from him. The first is digging deeper, yet he does not have to lift any heavier load than the other That depends on the thickness of the slice of earth that he wakes

Be careful in handle the spade so as to use the weight of the body rather than the muscles of the arms. If you must push the spade into the earth you will soon tire, whereas by simply leaning on the spade your strength will last much longer. A little skill saves a great deal of energy.

In spading the rule is to adjust it for the thrust while standing upright. Set it in position, then place the foot on top of the blade of the spade or on the shoulder of the folk. Lean forward slightly, throw the weight of the body of the tool, and thrust it to the desired depth. While still almost upright pry on the upper parts of the handle, and break the earth loose. Slide the lower hand down to the very blade of the tool, still prying on the handle with the other. You are now ready to lift the spadeful of earth with the least exertion. Lift it, turn it over and drop it. If the dropping does not break up the lump, strike it with the blade of the spade or the tines of the fork.

If one is spading in manure, or burying any loose material, it is necessary to follow the method of moving the earth six inches or a foot away, keeping an open trench as one proceeds. The finer earth should as far as possible be kept above the manure.

Wheat Quotations Are Unchanged

Trade in Cash Wheat is Almost at a Standstill – The Cattle Market

Cash quotations are almost purely nominal and unchanged. There is so little cash wheat available that trade is almost at a standstill. In the option markets peace rumors were worked to the limit in efforts to get prices down, and for a time there were some sharp recessions. But the least evidence of buying was sufficient to send prices up again, and yesterday's markets closed higher than Wednesday's, Chicago May closing at $3.15, and Winnipeg October at $2.17.

GERMANS PUT TRAPS OF BOMBS WITHIN PIANOS

Interesting Details of British Discoveries in Captured Towns.

A Lancashire soldier, writing home about the advance, says:

"I have seen some sights out here lately. You people in England cannot imagine what war really means. In a town we captured I was in three days. What a mess! The Germans must be brutes. In the square was a large furniture shop, and they had thrown the furniture into the streets from the windows and everything was broken.

"There were two pianos, one at each end of the square, under arch ways. On a board, printed in black letters in English, were the words 'Dangerous to touch.' Our officers had the notices posted by each piano, for wire, running from the keys, was connected with bombs, etc., all over the place."

In every street, painted on the houses, was "Gott strafe England!" in German characters. The trees were all cut about a foot from the ground and lying in all directions. They had hacked the Town Hall clock, and taken the works out. Not a bit of brass left but plenty of lead. The writer adds: "I was in the dug-outs down about twenty-five or thirty steps, some holding twenty, and some capable of accommodating 250 or 300 men. There were good beds and furniture of all kinds, and they were lighted by electricity. All kinds of things have been left behind, rifles, bayonets, swords, coils of barbed wire, rails, etc. There are thirty in a hut, and there's a devil of a row, but we are all the same, happy."

GERMANS USE LIQUID FIRE IN ATTACK ON BRITISH POSITIONS

Teuton Attempts to Shake Field Marshall Haig's Grip on the Arleux Positions and in the Souchez Salient Are Completely Checked by Artillery and Machine Gun Fire--French Stop German Counter Attacks and Make New Progress.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, May 11.—The Franco-British offensive seemed to halt temporarily to-day. Official reports indicated no major fighting actions, but scores of local advances, counter attacks, repulses, and general skirmishing that may be preliminary to resumption of a general concerted movement. The Germans still maintained their grip on Fresnoy and Bullecourt, although at the latter place their hold was slowly being shaken loose by repeated British thrusts according to battle front despatches.

LONDON, May 11.—With movement on either side at Fresnoy literally clogged by the huge armies which the British and German commanders have concentrated there Field Marshal Haig was apparently varying his blows to-day with a series of thrusts at widely separated points on the British front. Bullecourt and Lens were the two points most menaced by the British offensive to-day. Bullecourt is almost completely surrounded. Lens is more than half encircled, the British gaining every hour yard by yard to the south. The fighting at both places is intense.

"To the east of Ypres," the statement continued, "we carried out a successful raid at night. There was considerable mutual artillerying at a number of points during the night."

PARIS (French Official), May 11.—Another advance by the capture of German position in the region of Crecreux was announced in the French official statement to-day. The gain was held despite violent counter attacks. The War Office said this gain was achieved yesterday evening. There was heavy cannonading in the region of Cerny.

LONDON, May 11.—Vigorous German attempts to shake Field Marshal Haig's grip on the Arleux positions and lines to the south of the Souchez River were all repulsed, the British Commander-in-Chief reported to-day. British artillery and machine gun fire stopped the enemy's assaults. Around the Souchez salient the attack was repeated a second time with liquid fire, employed by the Germans, but it was likewise repulsed.

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, May 11.—Battling in the weird reddish flames of a veritable lake of fire, British troops last night rolled back a German attacking wave south of the Souchez River. The German's liquid fire lighted up the whole battle with an eerie light that gave British gunners the exact range of the attacking troops.

Shells tore great gaps of blackness in the wall of flame that flickered onward as the liquid fire bearers, tanks of the devilish stuff on their backs, worked powerful pumps and squirted the flames a hundred feet in front of them. It was a night full of vigorous fighting at a score of places on the line. The Germans are desperately seeking to regain the initiative in the fighting. Pressed back hard with his back tight against positions, which if lost would be fatal to his plans, Crown Prince Rupprecht at Hindenburg's bidding, is launching attack after attack against the British line. He has had little luck so far. Between Gavrelle and the Souchez River the enemy last night and early to-day repeatedly hurled storming troops against the British. The flashes of the bursting German shells lighted up low-lying dark clouds. Despite the intense darkness and the blindingly white flashes of exploding shells the British machine guns and artillery barrages tore the attackers to pieces.

LONDON, May 11.—Along the entire front in Macedonia, from Monastir to Lake Dokran, a distance of about 100 miles, the Allies have opened a great offensive. On every section of the line General Sarrail's artillery is roaring day and night, but the campaign is in its initial phase, and there is little to indicate as yet where the main attempt at an advance will be made. Bitter fighting is proceeding in the bend of the Cerna River, and the neighbourhood of the Vardar, the two points on the Macedonian front where the wild barbarous country of mountains and sterile deserts is broken by fertile valleys.

LONDON, May 11. — Fierce Teutonic counter attacks succeeded in gaining the Central Powers' troops a foothold on the wings of positions taken by the Allies in their offensive on Wednesday, an official statement from Salonika said to-day. The centre position of the enemy's line was driven back with losses to them.

LONDON, May 11.—Germany's internal crisis is near, according to an exchange telegraph despatch from Amsterdam to-day. The agency reported that Berlin advices indicated Chancellor-Hollweg would survive in the political sweep, but that Foreign Secretary Zimmerman, Food Dictator Batockia, and others would most certainly be ousted.

PARIS, May 11.—Both French British statistics on submarine sinking during the last week show certain improvement in the situation, says Marcel Huptin, a usually well informed writer on the subject. He adds: "I understand that our means of fighting submarines is increasing daily and, without giving details, I can say that the number of submarines put out of action in the last few days has risen in a very satisfactory manner."

PETROGRAD, May 11.—"Only complete defeat of Germany will assure the world's happiness. Peace now would only be an armistice. Russia cannot betray the Allies with whom she has been fighting for three years." In these words to-day President Rodzianko, of the Duma, forcefully pleaded with the Russian governing body for unswerving continuance of Russia's part in the war, and warned against incidious peace moves, inspired by Germany. "The war must be successfully terminated in a manner preserving the country's integrity and national honour," he asserted.

"The German programme is hegemony—in a word, the enslavement of nations. Do not forget that German workers, however socialistic they may be, ardently desire a German victory, and naturally, therefore, support the Government's imperialistic aspirations."

(By W. S. Forrest.)

PARIS, May 11.—Belgium's flag to fly over Constantinople and Belgium to control the Dardanelles, is the Allies' revised plan for its war aims respecting Turkey. On high authority to-day it can be stated that this change in the programme has been thoroughly discussed in high official circles of the Allied governments.

Since New Russia renounced old Russia's dream of dominating the Straits, a change in the Turkish problem has been forced on the Allies.

BERLIN, via London, May 11.—"Sanguinary repulse" of an attempt to storm Bullecourt by an encircling movement of British troops was reported in to-day's official statement.

"At Fresnoy, Royeux, Monchy and Cherisy, local advances were unsuccessful to the enemy," the War Office said.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The State Department to-day officially reiterated and amplified its declaration that the United States "probably would act on any peace proposals only after consulting the Allies." At the same time it is stated that the United States was not bound by any agreement written or unwritten, with the Allies concerning action on peace proposals from Germany.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 11.—The doings of the famous Honourary Colonel John Wesley Allison, especially regarding the sale by Allison to the British Government of five hundred Ross rifles, will be again inquired into. At the Public Accounts Committe this morning a letter read from Sir Charles Ross said that the rifles sold by Allison were made up of rejected parts.

CLASSES FOR MEN BACK FROM FRONT WERE ORGANIZED

A Number Were Present Last Night and More Intend to Begin Next Week—Scope of Work Not Limited

MR. CLARK IS IN CHARGE

The organization of educational classes for returned soldiers was begun last night in the old Collegiate Institute building. Eight men were present and more are expected to turn out on Monday night. The men appeared a bright and eager group, and give promise of making every use of this opportunity to brush up their work of school days and enlarge it. Mr. F. H. Dobbin spoke briefly at the opening of the work, and expressed the opinion that the scope of the classes would doubtless depend upon the desires of the men. It was unlikely that the work would be strictly limited to certain lines but would be made as broad as possible. Mr. N. M. Clark, Principal of the King Edward School, was present to take charge of the class, which should provide valuable assistance to the men.

Clergymen Are Asked To Assist

Ministers Are Asked to Preach Sermons on Greater Production

Mr. Joseph Wearing, secretary of the Peterborough branch of the Organization of Resources committee, has sent a copy of the following letter to every clergyman in Peterborough and in the surrounding district:

Peterborough, Ont., May 8, 1917.

Dear Sir,—I have been instructed to write to every minister in this district urging that a sermon be preached next Sunday, or the Sunday after, embracing the question of increased production. It is vital to the successful prosecution of the war and the welfare of the Empire that every possible acre be sown this year. Labour is scarce and the farmer is handicapped because of this difficulty. The problem can only be solved by a whole-hearted endeavour on the part of every man to do his full duty thought it means long days and hard labour. The situation is so serious that only a wide spread spirit of patriotism among all classes of food producers can relieve it.

You will help by preaching a sermon on this subject next Sunday. I trust that you will see your way clear to do so. Without seeding there can be no harvest. Every acre planted will help to win the war.

Yours very truly,
JOSEPH WEARING,
Sec'y Peterborough Branch,
Organization of Resources Committee.

TO LEAD FOOD ABSTENTION CAMPAIGN

OTTAWA, May 10.—Lady Borden and Lady Laurier have pledged themselves to abstain from the use of meat and potatoes for two days a week and will head a voluntary food saving movement.

MOTHER'S DAY

Next Sunday will be "Mother's Day," and will be commemorated by the wearing of a carnation in memory or in honour of our mothers.

True, they should be honoured every day in the year, but let next Sunday be a special day, and let us create in our fair city an atmosphere of loving remembrance of those mothers who have gone from us, and loving regard for those who are still with us.

The Playgrounds' Association will have for sale plenty of beautiful carnations. Their object is incidentally to help the playgrounds, but primarily to establish "Mother's Day" in Peterborough. The flowers will be sold on Saturday from several centres and on the streets.

Leave orders any time this week at 'Phone 351.

Missing	1
Wounded	94
Totals	144

The Norwood Register says:

Norwood's four recruits for the 73rd Battery—Messrs. R. B. Gardner, Stanley Laing, Percy Engisch, and Ernest Hall, leave to-day (Thursday) for Kingston to join their unit.

The Kingston Whig says:

The trouble over the non-filling up of the Canadian Defence force is due to the fact that the youth of Canada cannot feel the urgency of the call. What are they to defend against? The pro-German in the United States? Surely not, for the United States Government has them well in hand with the development of their secret service. Furthermore, the leading German papers in the United States have been urging their readers to stand by the President in this time of national crisis. Is the defence force to train men to repel a German invasion from over the sea? Again we must trust to the lads who have fought so valiantly at Vimy Ridge and to the sea dogs who are keeping the German fleet bottled up in the Kiel Canal.

The crux of the matter is the desire of the Government that every man should be trained in some branch of military service, so that in case of national danger each citizen of military age would be competent to serve in a disciplined army. If this is the case, why does the Government demand that the men spend several months in a military camp? It is this one obligation which is the cause of the failure of the Canadian Defence Force. There are hundreds of men in this district who have been prevented from going overseas who would gladly sign up to drill at least two nights a week, but who are prevented going all summer into a military camp. Surely in the cool of the evening men would learn their manual arms far better than at Barrefield Camp. The necessity of the situation does not appeal to the average man so that he could or would give up a lucrative position for the amount the Government affords him when he feels that the defence has little to defend against.

The idea of universal miltary service is admirable, and if the plan of having drills, say, on Mondays and Thursdays, or on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for several hours in the evenings, we feel there would be a rush of citizens, both young and old. Before the war the evening parades of the 14th Regiment were very creditable and if the same idea is carried out now there should be no difficulty in singing men up. Officers seem to be plentiful, and there should be no difficulty in having excellent drills without the necessity of camp life, the one drawback to the present scheme. If this plan obtained it would eliminate the necessity of the enforcement of the Militia Act, which would disrupt the industries in this time of national emergency when greater quantities of shells and food supplies are needed for the vast armies of the Allies who are fighting so nobly in all parts of the world.

The Kingston Standard says: Recruiting in the district during the first four months of the year was not as brisk as expected, but very good results were attained. In the competition for the Hughes trophy, 'C' Battery, R.C.H.A., led with 489 recruits, and the other units recruited as follows: 253rd, 402; Depot batteries, 338; Cobourg Heavy Battery, 327; Signal Training Depot, 297; 252nd battalion, 261; 5th D.A.C., 256; 254th Battalion, 244; draft, 156th Battalion, 201; 235th Battalion, 153; 247th Battalion, 111. The noncombatant units eligible for the trophy are the Forestry Draft, Ottawa, and Queen's Field Ambulance. The Forestry Draft recruited 270 while the Field Ambulance received 279. The winner of the cup is "C" Battery, while the winners o fthe shields were as follows: January, 253rd Battalion; February, Queen's Field Ambulance; March "C" Battery R.C.H.A.; April, "C" Battery, R. C. H. A.

DRESS REGULATIONS

Information has been received at headquarters that certain units in Canada are wearing a red shoulder title on the sleeve with the word "Canada" in white letters, and that other units are wearing a similar patch with the word "Cyclist." No authority has been issued to any other units other than the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry to wear a woven title of this description. Instructions have been therefore issued to discontinue the wearing of such decorations.

Administrative Lethargy in Dealing With the High Cost of Living Subject of a Heated Debate in the House.

CROTHERS CRITICIZED

OTTAWA, May 10.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour, who resumed the budget debate in Parliament to-day, made himself the stormy petrel of another surge of stinging criticism for administrative lethargy in dealing with the cost of living. The Minister precipitated a warm scene with Mr. F. E. Pardee, when he refused to answer the direct questions of the Chief Liberal Whip as to an acute situation reported from Hamilton. The Labour Minister contented himself by telling the House he was "keeping hub of things," and declared "that working people have more money than they ever had before, are getting larger wages and putting money in the bank."

Mr. Pardee Reads Hamilton Report.

To-night Mr. Pardee had his turn, and he went at the Minister on the cost of living problem without gloves. He read the House Alderman Lang's report to the City Council of Hamilton as to the excessive prices charged for food and fuel, and quoted the unanimous resolution of the Council asking the Government to take action under its own order in Council. Mr. W. T. O'Connor, representing the Labour Department, had assured the Council of action in two or three days. It waited two or three weeks. Then, on another appeal to Ottawa, Mr. Imlee went forward from the Department, and he was to bring about immediate and effective action. "Has anybody heard a noise like taking Government action yet?" asked Mr. Pardee, amid "Hear, Hears."

Apt Retort to Mr. Meighen.

He quoted Mayor Booker's declaration that the Government did not seem to have the same backbone as the United States, and the same readiness to act on behalf of the people.

"The Solicitor-General knows that President Wilson has declared for taking food under control," replied Mr. Pardee, "and he didn't wait until he had been three years in the war."

Conditions, declared Mr. Pardee, were not unique in Hamilton. They were similar in other places throughout Antario and Canada.

Mr. Pardee maintained it was high time the Government took some definite and effectual action in the direction of control of food and fuel prices. "I hope, while there is no precedent for it," he exclaimed, amid laughter, "the Minister will finally wake up."

Radical Action Needed.

For himself, he thought radical action should be taken, "no matter whether it helps or hurts political friends." The people of Canada were facing a food and fuel price crisis, a crisis a Government of action and leadership could meet and deal with, and effectual handling of this home situation would enable the people to devote their energies to the supreme task of aiding the Empire to win the war.

Mr. Loggie's Powerful Appeal.

Apart from Mr. Pardee's strong declaration in favour of Government control of food and fuel prices, the feature of the day's sitting was the earnest and powerful appeal of Mr. W. B. Loggie, Northumberland, for more effectual war participation. This Scottish Presbyterian Elder, whose two sons have both been wounded at the front, and whose daughter is nursing the wounded soldiers in Britain, appealed to the Government to drop its partisanship and devote itself to leading the country in the war. He advocated the formation of a coalition government for this one purpose and came out in favour of conscription.

"We pray for success," he said, solemnly, "Let us back our prayers with practical effort that right may prevail, and give freely of our bodily strength, our silver bullets, and ev-

MUNITION WORKERS IN RUSSIA PLAN A SEPARATE REPUBLIC

Workmen and Citizens of Schiselberg Have Revolted To-day--Stockholm Conference is Regarded With Suspicion

IS GERMAN INSPIRED

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, May 11.—Schiselberg munitions district revolted to-day. Workmen and citizens of the district announced their intention of organizing a separate republic. Representatives of the Workmen's and Soldiers' committee left here at once to dissuade the revolters from their announced purpose. Apparently there was no violence. The Stockholm Socialist conference is being regarded more and more here as Germany's most carefully planned move for a separate peace with Russia. The extreme wing of the Socialists' party in Russia is flatly on record against the meeting. They believe the conference is German inspired, German aided and will probably be German controlled.

A Railroad Romance at The Empire

A Great Picture and a Well Balanced Programme

Nerves of Steel.

Throughout the world there are thousands of engineers sitting at the throttle side of locomotives. Men, who in the face of duty know no fear. On their nerve, their judgment and their sense of responsibility, we rely as on no other class of men. The man in the engine cab is a praiseworthy citizen of whom everyone is proud.

House Peters as Jim Lewis, who plays the star part in this great railroad story, "The Rail Rider," proves that the man at the throttle is the man of the hour, when he comes face to face with a crisis.

It is a tremendous story, full of love and excitement that thrills, but does not disgust.

Somewhere in this picture you will find a heart throb that means something to your own life—it may prove the turning point for you.

Zena Keefe, whose wonderful smile has won for her the admiration of all film fans, plays the part of the railroad president's daughter—the heroine—she is the kind of a girl you will never want to forget.

ST. PETER'S PATRIOTIC CLUB

The regular monthly meeting of St. Peter's Patriotic Club was held on Saturday evening, May 5th. The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were read and an account given of the work done during the month of April, which was as follows:

11 grey flannel shirts, 8 pairs pyjamas, 37 sheets, 3 pillow cases, 245 Towels, 3 wash cloths.

There is still a demand for supplies for the soldiers and the members and their friends are asked to attend every Thursday afternoon. Those having socks for the club are requested to send them in, as a shipment will be sent as soon as possible.

A COLLEGE LESSON.

The palatial William Booth Memorial College, Toronto, erected by public subscriptions as a tribute to the great life work of the founder of the Salvation Army, is to be diverted from its original purposes and devoted to a use much higher, and one in which the great passed and transferred militant Christian worker would be in full sympathy. The building was intended for a college but it has been handed over by the Salvation Army authorities for a hospital or training schol for wounded soldiers, especially those who have lost limbs. Nearby has been erected a factory for making artificial limbs for the wounded soldiers.

It seems quite the natural and fitting thing for militant Christianity to cooperate with militant humanity in the struggle for the triumphs of the principles of Christianity that found their highest expression and endorsation in the beautiful parable of the Good Samaritan, which shows us that our neighbour whom we are to love as ourselves is of those in suffering and need. The diversion of the Toronto College to war work relief, is on all fours with the work that distinguishes the Salvation Army, for directness, effectiveness and reach of work above all other religious organizations. Without interrupting and lessening its regular work in raising the degraded and fallen, it has added a large range of war relief work, not only in the lands of peace but in the scenes and countries blighted by this war. If man-made "war is hell," the war waged by the Salvation Army in its world-wide work is something blissfully opposite. The lesson of the College the Salvationists have turned over to the wounded and limbless soldiers is the same lesson that the Master taught the tempting doctor of the law—to specially regard as our neighbour the man that falls among thieves—the wounded and suffering.

THRIFT IN FOREST FIRES.

It requires only ordinary patriotic and public spirit to work for something that has immediate visible results. The standard is higher when work is done in pure faith, out of motives of pure philanthropy, unmixed with thoughts of present or personal profit or of seeing immediate results. The Canadian Forestry Association comes within the latter classification. It is not a government body and has no affiliation with any commercial interest. Its total revenue of about $8,000 a year comes from purely voluntary fees. What it is doing will pay dividends, chiefly to the Canada of from ten to a hundred years hence. A man of three score and ten, who plants a tree, either for fruit or comfort or beauty, can expect to get little or no personal gain; his act is an act of pure philanthropy, which is much too rare with the average man. The Forestry Association is both philanthropic and practical. Its membership embraces the most public spirited men in the country, whose names we often see in the press, in connection with other man-bettering, nation-building activities.

If we had more of their spirit in private citizenship, and in municipal and educational bodies we should have improved conditions. A municipal council or a school board that has an eye chiefly to the present—to keeping down the tax rate and carving a hard bargain and neglects things that, like forestry, will confer benefits on posterity, is not taking the big view of its responsibility, such as is taken by the Forestry Association.

In an effort to arouse this spirit in the sportsmen, tourists and campers of the country, the Association has issued an appeal, headed "Thrift in Forest Fires." At the opening of the summer season—according to the calendar—this appeal is so timely and pointed that it is given below:

There are estimated to be 10,000 forest fires in Canada every year of all sizes and descriptions. Nine-tenths are set by human hands, and the damage runs from four to ten millions of dollars, not counting damage to soil, to the value of watershed areas and many other factors.

"Thrift in forest fires" is a new movement which the Canadian Forestry Association has started amongst the guides, and campers and sportsmen of Canada with a view to cutting down the country's timber losses in 1917. As is well known, the present-day causes of forest fires are not the railways as much as the settlers, campers, hunters and fishermen. Thoughtlessness in respect to camp fires, the throwing away of lighted tobacco or matches, etc., has caused some of the worst conflagrations in history. During the months of May and June, before the fire season is well under way this year, thousands of outdoors men are being asked by the cooperation of the newspaper publishers of Canada to make 1917 a year of thrift in the forest. Not only is Canada's exhaustible supply of timber seriously reduced in a time when it should be protected and improved by every possible means, but hundreds of miles of once excellent fishing and camping grounds are turned into blackened ruin.

No camp fire should be left this year until it is "dead out." A few extra pails of water or spades of sand will make this point certain. No fire should be set except among rocks or gravel, never in a bog or in leaves or needles. Throwing lighted tobacco or matches into the forest is conduct that is chargeable only to the amateur.

With the exhaustion of our forests and the high prices of coal and wood fuel, the question of forest preservation takes on new force. Electricity will be, or can be, made the fuel of the future. The supply of electricity depends in volume and constancy of supply upon forest preservation. We can't have electricity (economically) without water power. We can't have that without conserving our water supply by conservation of our great natural reservoirs, the leaf strewn floors of our forests, which, acting as sponges, absorb rainfall and permit it to flow out gradually, contributing to a constant supply of water for our streams. A watershed without forests is practically no watershed at all. Its rainfall rushes away in a flood and streams instead of being constantly fed from the forest reservoirs, are reduced to a trickle. It is hoped that such suggested consideraitons and many others that could be adduced as to the necessity of preserving forests by preventing fires, will appeal to the sporting spirit of sportsmen; to campers, to tourists, to fishermen, to prevent the forest fires that result from the carelessness of some of them. Each of these can practice regard for one of the elements of statesmanship— looking ahead, foreseeing and providing for the future, and perform this duty of thrift, that at this time has a specific appeal to us all.

TO COLLECT OR NOT COLLECT.

The spirit of the great win-the-war convention to be held in Montreal May 23rd, is the spirt we need in Canada. It is the spirit of cooperation unspoilt by discord. In this convention all distinctions of race and creed, political and religious convictions, are absent, and single-minded, serious, determined patriotic men, from all parts of the Dominion meet as Canadians, to consider and devise the best means for Canada taking her best part in winning this war. Race strife, and its companion evil, religious rancour, helped by partisanship, are the curse of Canada, neutralising our best cooperation, breeding discord, and like a surgeon's seton in a sore, exciting constant popular irritation and pulling apart.

We are, with the Greater Peterborough Association as a centre, striving to get together and pull together for a bigger and better future for the city. A civic spirit of harmony is essential to efficient cooperation to this object. We can't get this spirit of harmony without a spirit of fair play, and reasonable regard for each other as citizens. We can't always hew to the line—there must be give and take, as in a score of other things, these uncommon times.

The garbage collection situation, though it involves a very prosaic work seems to give occasion for the play of a larger spirit of consideration and civic sympathy than that behind the shylock demand of the pound of flesh to the letter of the bond. It appears that the contractor has defaulted — refuses to, or cannot, carry out his contract, without loss, if indeed he can find labour or means to pay labour to carry it out at all. He asks more money and the council, or a majority of the council, refuses, rigidly holding him to the letter of his contract. This will mean, as he claims, a kind of ruin to a fellow citizen, a tax-payer, as well as a serious loss to his bondsmen—two bonds in $1,000 each—if the same adherence to the letter of the contract is observed. Here, in the spirit of a wide and free regard of the moral obligations of citizenship, there is room for some of the give-and-take that has to be done so largely in these times of war and difficult conditions. It would, it seems, be a fair and human thing to come to the rescue of the garbage contractor in distress. This might be an undesirable precedent; as was that of the Good Samaritan to the priest and Levite gang, who stood by the letter of the law.

Helping the garbage contractor out might be, strictly regarded, bad and irregular business; but if he should be held to strict accountability, the council has an accountability to its constituents, too, that must be met; and meeting it will cost the city a little, or perhaps as much money, as the garbage collector asks, and much more if we capitalize and add the lost value of doing the decent thing.

The city is under contract with the ratepayers to remove garbage; and if the collector can't, and will not be helped to, do the work, the work must be done some way. The ratepayers are taxed seven-tenths of a mill on the dollar for garbage removal; and if they have to pay the tax without having garbage disposed of, the city is accepting taxes, levied and paid but unused, for specific and unfulfilled purposes, money will have been accepted under false pretences. The city is naturally and morally bound to collect the garbage; and the question might be pertinent, whether it will cost more or less to do it, than to give the collector the help he wants and says he must have if he is to do the work. He has the equipment, and is familiar with the work, and, reasonably can do it here cheaply than the city. Then the welfare and whims of the citizens should be taken a little into account. They are being put to inconvenience and annoyance, and the city streets are disfigured with accumulated heaps of uncollected garbage while the work of removal is at a deadlock. It seems immediate action of some kind should be taken.

A SUMMARY OF SIR SAM HUGHES' CHARGES AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT

In the House, a few days ago, in resuming the budget debate, Mr. D. D. Mackenzie of Cape Breton, dealt with statements in the remarkable speech made by Sir Sam Hughes, ex-Minister of Militia, to his Lindsay constituents on the occasion of his re-nomination, on April 28th. Of course Sir Sam's audience was a good Tory audience, like our good Tory government, which Sir Sam so severely criticised — indeed—castigated. In Sir Sam's position, an ex-Minister, who had a good deal to do with war measures and administration, his statements had, and have, a special interest to the country to which the government is responsible for the conduct of the war. It is well, therefore, that the Government should have the points of Sir Sam's speech impressed upon it, and the country should know the full import of Sir Sam's charges, which, with his well-known courage, he is doubtless willing to stand by and repeat on the floor of the House. Mr. Mackenzie tabulated the charges, which run in the order of the following summary. Sir Sam charged:

(a) That more than a year ago the Government interfered to stop recruiting, particularly the Prime Minister.

(b) That there was Governmental interference in the sending of the First Contingent, the interference being by the now overseas Minister of Militia, Sir George Perley, and Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance.

(c) That there was useless and wasteful expenditure of public moneys, because the advice of the then Minister of Militia was overruled by the Government.

(d) That the High Commissioner and the Minister of Finance have tried to create trouble for the Minister of Militia in England, and as he puts it himself, to create an unwholesome atmosphere for him in that country, and that this was going on from the very commencement of the war.

(e) That those gentlemen bribed or attempted to bribe and purhase the influence of the Canadian press, both in Canada and Great Britain, for the purpose of thwarting and defeating the plans of the Minister of Militia.

(f) That newspapers, friendly to Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, made vicious attacks on the Minister of Militia of that day.

(g) That an envenomed poisonous conspiracy was entered into by the members of the Government to assassinate the Prime Minister —that is, of course, politically— and as a preliminary to slay the Minister of Militia.

(h) That the Prime Minister was informed that his colleagues and subordinates in the Cabinet were conspiring and thirsting for his poltical life.

(i) That the branch of the Finance Department which had to do with the paying of troops and other expenses in England had been rotten, that is plain Anglo-Saxon.

(j) That the medical service and organization in connection therewith was no better.

(k) That attempts were made by enemes of the minister in the Cabinet to "sweeten the press"— "Sweeten the press" are the exact words of the minister—and to influence bankers and brokers of Canada, all of which was done at the cost of the poor people of this country—meaning, of course, that the moneys of the Finance Department were used for bribery and corruption in order to render abortive the efforts of the Minister of Militia to place an efficeient and effective Canadian army in the field.

(l) That the then Minister of Militia advised in 1914 that there should be a general election, and was over-ruled. And this last charge is possibly the most serious of all.

(m) That the Ross Rifle was discarded by the Government and its agencies, not because there was anything wrong with the rifle, but because of the malign influences of "German gold,"—thus insinuating that his colleagues and others in authority accepted bribes from the enemy.

That is an arraignment, Mr. Mackenzie commented, of the Government by a former colleague which we on the otside, until the contrary is shown, must accept as being correct. If correct, it shows the ondition of things in connection with handling of the war to have been absolutely deplorable. According to the minister himself, while he was doing his best to carry out his plans for putting our armies in the field, he was thwarted by a bad element, and an unwholesome atmosphere was created against him at the War Office and in official circles in England by the High Commissioner, a member of this Government. That is a sad condition of affairs, if true. It may not be true, but the minister says that it is and it is up to him and his friends to prove to this country whether it is so or not. Why even gold was used against him. The money of this country was taken to sweeten the press. The press was bribed in order to secure their influence in maligning the minister in order to defeat his purposes. No language that I can use a strong enough to characterize a condition of that kind, and I submit that for that reason I am justified in saying so on this occasion to the Government and to this country that hon. gentlemen opposite have not handled the war well; nor are they entitled to any credit for their conduct of the war, nor is it in the interests of a successful prosecution of our share in the war that its conduct should be left any longer in their hands. If the people of this country, or if we in this House believe that what the ex-Minister of Militia has stated here is correct, then the sooner the carrying forward of military matters in this country is put on a sounder basis, the better it will be for the country and the better for all who are deeply inerested in the war.

CURIOUS LORE OF FINGER RINGS

Whence came the rings that have since time immemorial been considered so important a feature of personal adornment, and about which cling so many, interesting customs and romances?

That is one of the questions that George Frederick Kuns, distinguished authority on precious stones and jewelry, answers in part in his interesting "Rings for the Finger," a thick volume into which is compressed an amazing amount of finger-ring lore that bears the impress of authority, and which has just been published.

"The origin of the ring is somewhat obscure," says the author, "although there is good reason to believe that it is a modification of the cylindrical seal which was first worn attached to the neck or to the arm, and was eventually reduced in size so that it could be worn on the finger.

"Signet rings were used in Egypt from a very remote period, and we read in Genesis xl, 42, that the Pharaoh of Joseph's time bestowed a ring upon the patriarch as a mark of authority.

"From Egypt the custom of wearing rings was transmitted to the Greek world, and also to the Etruscans, from whom the usage was derived by the Romans. The Greek rings were made of various materials, such as gold, silver, iron, ivory and amber.

"In his natural history Pliny relates the Greek fable of the origin of the ring. For his impious daring in stealing fire from heaven for mortal man, Prometheus had been doomed by Jupiter to be chained for 30,000 years to a rock in the Caucasus, while a vulture fed upon his liver. Before long, however, Jupiter relented and liberated Prometheus. Nevertheless, in order to avoid a violation of the original judgment it was ordained that Titan should wear a link of his chain on one of his fingers as a ring, and in this ring was set a fragment of the rock to which he had been chained, so that he might still be regarded as bound to the Caucasian rock."

Another origin ascribed to the ring is the knot. A knotted cord or piece of wire, twisted into a knot, was a favourite charm in primitive times. Frequently this was used to cast a spell over a person, so as to deprive him of the use of one of his limbs or one of his faculties; at other times the power of the charm was directed against the evil spirit which was supposed to cause disease or lameness, and in this case the charm had curative power. It has been conjectured that the magic virtues attributed to rings originated in this way, the ring being regarded as a simplified form of the binding or attaching of the spell to its object, and the same idea is present in the true lovers' knot.

THE WEDDING RING.

Of all the rings to which custom attaches special significance perhaps the wedding ring is the most interesting, because to a greater or lesser extent it figures in almost every life. Touching on this subject, Mr. Kuns says:

"The connection between the wedding ring and the betrothal of earnest money," he says, "is clearly indicated in the marriage service as given in the Prayer Book of Edward VI. Here, after the words, 'With this ring I thee wed,' there is added, 'This gold and silver I give thee;' and at the words the bridegroom usually placed in the bride's hands a purse containing a sum of money. There can, indeed, be little doubt that the espousal ring was rather a type of a valuable consideration offered at the consummation of the marriage contract than a symbol of the bondage and subjection of the spouse as many have maintained.

"That a ring was sometimes given conditionally is shown by a curious old German formula to the following effect: 'I give you this ring as a sign of the marriage which has been promised between us, provided your father gives with you a marrage portion of 1000 riechsthaleds.'"

Whatever the origin of rings, it is evident from recent discoveries that they were in favour more than 4,000 years ago. In 1901 Henri de Morgan found in the valley of Agha Evlar, stretching back from Kerghan, on the Caspian sea, several rings ascribed to the age of bronze, which would carry them back 2,000 years before the Christian era.

In 1893, while excavating was being conducted at Nippur under the auspices of the University of Pennsylvania, workmen came across numerous tablets that conveyed strange bits of information. One of these, bearing directly on the subject of rings was in the form of a guarantee executed by Bel-ah-iddina, Belsumo and Hatin, and which was sufficiently broad in its scope so that it must have inspired the confidence of the man who turned his hard earned shekels over to these dealers in gewgaws. It was drawn up in 429 B.C., and gives to Bel-nadin-shume the following assurance:

"As concerns the gold ring set with an emerald, we guarantee that in twenty years the emerald will not fall out of the gold ring. If the emerald should fall out of the gold ring before the end of twenty years, Bel-ah-iddinan, Belshume and Hatin shall pay unto Bel-nadinshume an indemnity of ten mana of silver."

It was a regular guarantee, too, for it bore the signatures of seven witnesses and that of the scribe. It is evident that they were well satisfied with their workmanship, for the indemnity represented a sum equal to $400 of our money, which would be a pretty good price for a ring even in this day when the high cost of jewelry makes a man debate whether to invest in a pair of links or do without cuffs.

Perhaps more often than any other article of personal adornment has the ring been held to be a mark of distinction. In ancient Rome, at the outset, only senators and other high dignitaries were permitted to wear gold rings, although toward the latter part of the third century all Roman soldiers were allowed to thus bedeck themselves. Every freeborn man was likewise accorded this privilege later, but the freeman was restricted to silver bands, and the slave's station was designated by an iron ring.

Betrothal rings came into use in Rome as far back as the second century B.C. They were not elaborate either in quality or workmanship, being merely plain iron bands. Even after gold rings had become common thrifty lovers continued to give iron tokens to be worn about the house, together, perhaps, with a gold one to be worn in public.

Back in the Middle Ages in England it was a popular pastime when the young folks of both sexes congregated for a social session for some swain to slip a ring on the hand of a maiden while a mock marriage ceremony was undergone. However, the church frowning upon what it regarded as the debasement of a sacred emblem, stepped in and required that whoever placed such a ring on a girl's hand in jest would be constrained to marry her. Thereafter this custom quickly fell into disfavour, for the records show that marriage at that time was about as expensive proportionately as it is now.

Even so good an authority as Mr. Kuns is uncertain as to just how the wedding ring came to be placed on the third finger of the left hand, although various traditions are associated therewith.

This was not always the case. In France, from the eleventh to the fifteenth centuries, we are told, the wedding ring was placed upon the middle finger of the bride's right hand. Even more unusual, was the custom prevailing in England as late as the reign of George I., where it was the custom for the wedding ring to be worn upon the thumb, although it was placed on the fourth finger at the marriage ceremony. The ancient Jews placed the betrothal ring upon the index finger.

Rings are popular in almost every country under the sun, yet there are some striking exceptions. Whereas a Hottentot woman will slip a heavy band ring on her finger and feel that she is properly attired even though that may constitute her entire apparel, the Eskimos will have nothing to do with ornaments of this sort. On one of his Arctic trips Admiral Peary took a lot of rings as gifts for the natives, but they proved no attraction. The only explanation that Admiral Peary was able to advance was that in the intense cold of that country even the slightest pressure on a finger had a tendency to induce freezing, and that the natives were unwilling to take a chance. At all events most of the rings came back to this country.

Although there is no record of their having known what rings were in the early days, the Navajo Indians of New Mexico are counted among the best artisans in this line, some of them being very proficient in turning out the most delicately chased specimens with the most primitive appliances both in designing and execution.

Mr. Kuns's book (concludes a reviewer in the Detroit Free Press) is generously illustrated and forms an entertaining compilaton of information regarding a subject that we are inclined to regard as commonplace, but which is in reality fraught with romance and legend that is as fascinating as it is unusual.

TURKS DRIVE JEWS FROM JERUSALEM AS BRITISH ADVANCE

NEW YORK, May 10.— The same paths that Christ walked, teaching peace on earth and good will to men, are being trod to-day by thousands of terror-stricken, starving Jews, driven from their homes by Turkish bayonets, according to cablegrams received to-day by the Zionist Organization here.

With the British under General Murray pounding at the gates of Gaza in their advance on Jerusalem, the Turks are herding the Jews northward, determined they shall not remain to see the Holy Land taken from the Sultan. The eviction began late in March, the messages said, when 300 Hebrews were expelled from Jerusalem amid scenes of looting and pillage.

Djemal Pasha, military Governor of Palestine, declared he would make them suffer the fate of the Armenians. April 1, Djemal Pasha ordered 8,000 Jews driven from Jaffa. They were given forty-eight hours to leave.

Even Jews owing allegiance to the Central Powers were included.

The cablegram described terrible scenes when the Turkish troops went from house to house, driving the terrorized inhabitants into the streets. Crowds of Arabs and Bedouin women followed the troops, sacking every home. Two Jews from the Yemin resisted. They were hanged at the entrance to Tel-Aviv, and scores of fugitives streamed through the arch as their bodies dangled there.

Crawled to Desert to Die.

Roads leading northward, away from the region where British guns were roaring from the Dead Sea to the Mediterranean, were lined with starving men, women and children. The rich paid 200 francs for transportation nine miles to Petach Tikwah.

Information here said many Jews crawled into the desert and died. Bandits attacked the refugees and stripped them of everything. Small forces of young Jews armed with knives and cudgels organized for defence. The Turks arrested them. No Jews are known to have been killed by the Turkish soldiers, but robbers were given free rein. Arabs on donkeys and camels hung on the flanks of the fleeing population, while the troops coming up behind beat the stragglers on.

THE ERUPTION OF MOUNT PELEE

One of the most appaling disasters that has ever followed the unloosing of the elements before which human beings stand so helpless occurred on May 8, 1902. It was the eruption of Mont Pelee on the island of Martinique and its toll was 30,000 human lives, and it left the city of St. Pierre, once a prosperous town, thriving with industry, a charred, half buried skeleton. Fifteen years have passed since that terrible day but human genius has not been able to dig up from the ruins nor to rebuild the city that once was. A writer in the London Times who visited the island several years after the eruption quotes the Greek maxim, "It is men, not walls, that make a city," and the truth of this is impressed upon us by the fact that until more than eight years after the disaster St. Pierre was a city of the dead. Some of the walls stood, it is true, but they merely formed the barriers of the cemetery in which 40,000 victims lie buried. Even today when one approaches the harbour the scene of desolation is terrifying and the only living beings are a few half clad negroes who offer for sale trinkets which have been dug out of the ruin. If the elements assert themselves in destruction, mother earth, too, asserts herself in healing. And so, to-day, you will find flowers and tall grasses covering what was once this busy human hive.

Perhaps after the war steps will be taken to rebuild St. Pierre.

COUNCIL WILL DEAL WITH GARBAGE DEADLOCK TO-NIGHT

The revival of the city's garbage collection system will be one of the questions the Council will discuss at a special meeting to-night. It may be suggested that the city take over the work and continue it in the future as a civic department provided incidental arrangements in connection with the present contract can be satisfactorily concluded. Mayor Duffus intimated that this idea might be proposed. On the other hand it is understood that Mr. Graham will have an offer to present to the Council, whereby he would be enabled to carry on the work. But against that statement was a rumour that the contractor wa preparing to sell his waggons and teams, indicating that he had finished his deal. In any case the citizens are demanding immediate action that will provide adequate relief from the existing conditions that are daily growing worse.

Geo. McClelland Was Chosen To Attend The Poultry Convention

A meeting of the Poultry Association was held last night in the Labour Hall with President Fred Bgowne in the chair. Mr. George McClelland was the choice of the meeting as representative to the meeting of the Poultry Confederation, which is to be held for two days in June at Guelph. There was a nice showing of birds and three sweepstake prizes were awarded as follows:

Best colored pair—Geo. Buller.

Black Orpingtons, best partly colored pair, J. Kelly, Barred Rocks.

The third prize went to Mr. Tedhope on a young pair of Partridge Rocks two month's old. Birds for the next meeting will be all varieties of leghorns and bantams.

FALL WHEAT LATE.

Lack of Warmth is delaying Growth, Farmers Near City Report.

While reports from farmers are not distinctly unfavourable they are not particularly encouraging. The fall wheat is making progress, but it is behind schedule, largely due to the lack of heat. Most farmers state that there have been no serious losses, no damage apparent, but the crop is backward. Spring seeding is well advanced, but in many places the ground is quite damp. This is believed to be caused by the loosening of the frost which, in that case, must have been deeper that at first reported.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements must to secure insertion be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which thus assumes the responsibility.

Editor, Examiner:

Sir,—I suppose there are many hundreds of people like me in Peterborough that took the coal merchants' advice and only ordered our coal as was wanted, in small quantities, just enough to scrape on with, with the promises that we should be able to get more by and by, and now we are left without wood or coal, while the big pots have got their bins full and the coal merchants still filling them, while the likes of me can not get five bags to go with. It is making a lot of us think deeply and we shall not be able to stand much more of it, if somebody don't soon get a move on. There's going to be something doing if those that are supposed to look after the poor man's rights don't do what is right. Then it is up to us to do it ourselves and put out of action those people that do all the talking and get no further than the Simcoe street building.

THE WEATHER

With the exception of two occasions the thermometer has been down to the neighborhood of the freezing point every night this month. Last night it was 39 degrees. The season is more backward than last year, although the real warm weather did not set in until the week of the 24th.—W. P.

Austria Is Like Powder Magazine

WIFE OF KAISER GOES TO VIENNA TO PLEAD SUPPRESSION OF PEACE TALK.

LONDON, May 8. — Germany's troubles with Austria are increasing. According to Geneva reports, the German Empress went to Vienna to plead with the Emperor Charles to suppress the peace manifestations in Austria, and prevent the discussion of the idea of peace without annexation or indemnity.

Germany is getting fearful lest Austria make peace without taking Russian territory, inducing the allies to compensate Austria by giving her territory in the Balkans.

Jealousy and distrust between Austria and Germany are growing more menacing. The German Empress was joined at Vienna by the Bavarian Prime Minister, who is reinforcing her efforts to induce Charles to stand loyally by Germany. Austria is like a powder magazine and the royal family and the government are fearful of exerting pressure lest a revolution begin. The public feels that Germany is preventing peace in order to save the ambitions of the Hohensollerns, which if gratified would make Germany more powerful at the ultimate expense of Austria.

Russians Repulse Caucasian Advance

PETROGRAD, May 4, via London. —Yesterday afternoon's statement follows: "On Tuesday night every infantry, supported by artillery, attacked the height ten miles southwest of Ocna. The enemy was driven back to his own trenches. On the remainder of the Roumanian front there was artillery firing.

"The usual rifle firing and scouting and aerial operations occurred on the Russo-Galician front.

"On the Black Sea one of our hydroplane squadrons threw 120 bombs on Masmudia, on the Danube. Great destruction was observed. Notwithstanding the enemy's heavy shrapnel fire all our machines returned unharmed.

"On Wednesday we brought down a German aeroplane in East Galicia. The machine and its occupants were captured.

"On the Caucasian front, weak efforts of the Turks to advance in the region south-west of Gumishkhane were defeated easily by us. In the direction of Khanikin our detachments occupied an island in the Diala River, near Djumur, north of Khanikin."

"FOR HONOUR AND FOR HER"

The following poem was written by Capt. H. G. Latimer, chaplain in charge of Canadian soldiers on leave in London. Lady Perley has had thousands of copies of it printed for distribution among the troops:

Somewhere a woman, thrusting fear away,
Faces the future bravely for your sake,
Toils on from dawn till dark; from day to day,
Fights back her tears, nor heeds the bitter ache.
She loves you, trusts you, breathes in prayer your name,
Soil not her faith in you by sin or shame.

Somewhere a woman—mother, sweetheart, wife,
Waits betwixt hopes and fears for your return,
Her kiss, her words, will cheer you in the strife,
When death itself confronts you, grim and stern,
But let her image all your reverence claim,
When base temptations scorch you with their flame.

Somewhere a woman watches—thrilled with pride,
Shrined in her heart, you share a place with none,
She toils she waits, she prays, till side by side,
You stand together when the battle's done.
O keep for her dear sake a stainless name,
Bring back to her a manhood free from shame.

"How did you come out on your bet, old man?"

"What bet?"

"Don't you remember? You said as you were leaving the club last night, 'I bet I'll get the dickens from my wife.'"

"Oh, I won."

An Effective Reminder Of Peterborough

Writes Major J. C. Davidson in Acknowledging a Quilt From the I. O. D. E.

The following letter has been received by the 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E., from Major J. C. Davidson:

No. 3 Canadian Stationary Hospital,
April 18th, 1917.

The Quilt Committee,
57th Chapter, I.O.D.E.

Dear Mrs. Rush and Mrs. Merrill,—I cannot sufficiently express my appreciation of the beautiful quilt which arrived yesterday, following Mrs. Rush's kind letter a few days before. Nothing could more effectively remind me of Peterborough and our fellow citizens than this interesting collection of names so artistically arranged. It is quite a directory of the city. Mrs. Hounsell's skill as an artist shines forth in the centre panel. I did not know what I was expected to do with it, but feeling that I would appreciate it more than anyone else, I put it on my own bed, at least for the present, and it is beside me as I write. I was most interested in going over the names yesterday. The Annex of one of our wards (shell-shock) has its beds covered by Peterborough quilts, and one of the medical officers remarked the other day that they must have a good Publicity Committee in Peterborough, Ontario. Please convey my warm thanks to the officers and members of the Chapter for this speaking reminder of you all, and particularly please accept my thanks yourselves for all the trouble you have taken with such good results.

Sincerely yours,
J. C. DAVIDSON.

Case Tried At Chemong Village

Methodist Missionary and His Wife Were Defendants in an Action

For some time past an attempt has been made to have vacated the premises occupied by Mr. W. J. Haines and his wife at the Chemong village. As a result Mr. Haines and his wife were defendants in an action that was tried yesterday in the Chemong village before Magistrate R. J. McCamus. The plaintiff was Daniel Whetung who claimed that Mr. Haines and his wife had been notified by Indian Agent McCamus to vacate the Mission house by the second of April. Mr. Haines is a Methodist Missionary and his wife is a school teacher. Mr. G. N. Gordon who appeared for Haines asked the Magistrate to dismiss the case.

A STATEMENT.

Mr. Gordon makes the following statement in connection with the case:—

The Methodist Missionary and his wife, who is a teacher, were asked by Chief Daniel Whetung when they intended to leave, and Indian Agent McCamus intimated that he would find this was notice to vacate and he issued warrants for the arrest of the woman and her husband, and sent an Indian from the Reserve to make the arrest. If either of these parties had been arrested off the Reserve the arrest would not have been legal, as the Indian Agent had no power to issue a warrant for an arrest outside the Reserve. At the trial the Indian Agent said no information was laid, but from his own observation and what he had heard he was satisfied as to the guilt of the parties. Although Mr. Haines and his wife were taking steps to move and had part of their stuff packed, proceedings were taken against them by the Indian Agent, as trespassing on the Reserve rather than stand the badgering and annoyance of these proceedings. $10 was paid which the Indian Agent claimed he had paid to two men to watch the premises."

Canadian Shells Praised By The Germans

"Canada" a paper which is published in London, England.

Gunners at the front freely acknowledge that the shells they fire that come from Canadian factories are excelled by none in their good qualities. This fact is extremely gratifying to Canadians, and must indirectly have a valuable effect in raising the prestige of Canadian manufactures, not only in the Mother Country, but also among our Allies. Obviously, a country which can reach such a huge output of shells of supreme quality and excellence must possess equal ability for supplying manufactures which require skilled and accurate workmen.

The difficulties overcome by the Canadian Shell Committee have yet to be recounted. A very fascinating story of competent endeavour will be disclosed when the right time comes. No manufacturers in Canada were anxious to undertake the risky business of making shells which had to be accurate to the thousandth part of an inch and to pass most stringent tests in the quality of the steel. There were only one or two men in Canada at the time competent to undertake the tests required by the British War Office, and they had to improvise everything, from testing ranges to examiners. However, the thing was done, and, although at first many shells were rejected, the standard of quality became so high that Canadian shells have won for themselves recognition, just as our Canadian boys have also won recognition for their initiative and enterprise in trench warfare.—Canada.

GERMANY CUTTING UP TERRITORIAL "MELON"

AMSTERDAM—How some influential interests in Germany, who are represented by the Rheinisch Westfalische Zeitung, look upon future peace is illustrated by a leading article in that paper on the reported Austro-German peace move. It quotes the following conditions, which, it says, appeared in a Moscow paper.

Alsace-Lorraine to remain German.

Belgium to become independent, but without an army of her own.

The southern Slav States to become independent.

Courland to remain German.

Armenia to come under Turkish administration.

The Dardanelles to remain Turkish.

The Zeitung then says:—"Belgium and Alsace-Lorraine can hardly interest Russia, just as any frontier modification on the Russo-Persian or Russo-Chinese frontier would not interest us but the other points are capable of discussion. For example, if we were to take our present territorial position in Galicia and the Balkans as a basis for a Russo-Austro-Hungarian agreement, neither empire would fare badly. Russia would then rule almost entirely over the Ukraine population, while Austria-Hungary would have the entire Serb race in her hands. If by independence is understood self-administration on the Galician model, the independence of the southern Slavs, which is demanded by Russia, could also be realised by this solution. The Polish question is difficult, but as the Russian government repudiates the idea of ruling foreign peoples an agreement can certainly be found."

Plans For Potato Production Are Fast Developing

The C.G.E. employees who intend to plant the thirty acres on Braidwood Avenue, placed at their disposal by Mr. C. M. Pennefather, have practically completed their arrangements and will likely close their list on Saturday night. The information received from several of them is to the effect that they have appointed officers and are willing to receive a few more citizens who desire to enter this co-operative movement in potato production. The land is owned by Mr. Pennefather and two Hamilton men, and is said to be excellent for potato cropping. Each man contributes five dollars, the work will be let to a manager and at the end of the season the shareholders will divide the crop.

LADIES TAKING A HAND.

Four young ladies have secured a lot on Albertus Street, which they intend to plant and sell the products for patriotic purposes. Their intentions are of the best, and it is hoped their results will be of the same order. They will grow lovely crisp lettuce, beautiful carrots, dear little onions, and probably provide a free lunch for potato bugs. It really is great fun when you get into it, but slightly different from anticipations.

PLENTY OF TIME YET.

There should be no signs of relinquishing the production campaign in and around the city for a month or more yet. Licence Inspector Stewart states that he is keeping the bulk of his seed until after the first of July. It will be a late crop, but expects to double cross the bugs, and take advantage of the cool fall weather for the final growth of the crop.

DON'T EXPECT TOO MUCH.

Men who are putting in gardens now should not expect to reap big results unless they are determined to strive for them. This means cultivating, spraying, hilling, weeding and various other operations, all of them important in the final analysis. And in addition to the crop, consider the tonic of work in the open air, almost as good as golfing, maybe, although the man with a hoe on Sunday is frowned at and almost considered a pariah, while the golfer spends the entire Lord's Day on the links, plowing up the teeing places into super-granulated ground. Hence, if you prefer Sunday exercising, select the bag and sticks (if you can) rather than the shovel and the hoe. Some of the neighbours find a line of distinction that is not obvious to most of the others.

To Break The Potato Ring

BRANTFORD, May 1.—A thousand bags of potatoes, half western and half New Brunswick, have been ordered by the city to break the alleged potato ring here, and the Aldermen in charge are confident that besides supplying the immediate needs for food and seed, they will break the local ring, which is holding producers for still higher prices than $3 per bag, asked by one local produce merchant.

Government Scored For Lack of Action

ery other thing at our disposal, to aid our Empire in her noble struggle for liberty and right."

Mr. Loggie, in the course of his address, gave notice that he would move that potatoes and prepared potatoes be placed on the free list.

Attacks Waking Him Up.

Hon. Mr. Crothers opened with an attempt to carry the war into Africa. He launched a bitter broadside at the Opposition for criticism of himself and his department. The times called for action rather than words, yet questions by the hundreds and motions by the scores that had no relation to the war had been placed upon the order paper. These were paralyzing the work of the department at a time when "the destinies of mankind were trembling in the balance."

"Sneering references to and groundless accusations against the department over which I preside have been made in this House," exclaimed the Minister of Labour. Such "vulgar sneers and false accusations" were calculated to "frustrate the efforts so successfully carried on since the war began." The attack and insinuations of men like Messrs. Kyte, Turriff, Knowles and McCoig he did not consider worth noticing.

"They seem to be waking you up," put in Mr. E. M. Mcdonald.

Men like Mr. A. K. Maclean, who "impute dishonesty," could not, Mr. Crothers declared, escape without protest. Mr. Maclean's "guilt lies in wanton and ignoble criticism made in profound ignorance of the facts." He had made "sweeping and insulting statements" as to the conduct of the Labour Department.

Mr. Crothers Strikes a Snag.

Mr. Crothers said he had not been "in the advertising branch in the Labour Department." He had a most difficult task, "probably the most difficult and exacting of any department of the Government." Yet he had been subjected to "insulting imputations." Mr. Crothers proceeded to outline the work of his department, the appointment of representatives in various centres, the comparative number of strikes during his regime and that of his predecessor, the labour laws of Australia, and the Lemieux act. But it was when he reached the question of the high cost of living that Mr. Crothers ran into snags. He declared that, considering all circumstances, exorbitant prices were not being charged.

What of Coal Prices in Hamilton.

Mr. F. F. Pardee rose to direct the attention of the Minister to a report in the Hamilton press of a meeting of the Council regarding alleged excessive prices being demanded for coal. Mr. Pardee was proceeding to read the report when the Minister protested: "I won't give way for that," he stated.

"It is reported that in Hamilton $12 is being asked for coal which cost $9," persisted Mr. Pardee. "Has the Minister looked into that?"

"Yes," retorted Mr. Crothers.

"Well, is it true?" came back the West Lambton member.

"I know the report you're alluding to," exclaimed Mr. Crothers. "There's some reference to coal and criticism of the Labour Department."

"Had a Man in Hamilton."

"Well, what about it?" reiterated Mr. Pardee. "Have you taken any steps to look into it?" "I've had a man in Hamilton."

"How long?" "Several days."

"Has he made any report?"

"I suppose he has," retorted Mr. Crothers. "I'm not familiar with all the reports. We get them by the hundreds." Mr. Crothers added that "something" had been said to him on the matter to-day by "one of the Hamilton members."

"I tell the member for Lambton we are keeping tab of these things," exclaimed Mr. Crothers.

"That's all you're doing," put in Mr. Macdonald.

"The trouble with the member for Pictou (Mr. Macdonald) is that he makes statements without any knowledge of the facts," came back the Labour Minister.

Keeping Up Cost of Living.

"Well, what have you done and what are you doing?" insisted Mr. Macdonald.

"What you want is a grievance," replied Mr. Crothers. "If you take a half hour in the morning at the Labour Department you'll find what we're doing."

"You're keeping up the cost of living," commented Mr. Macdonald. "That's about all."

"This House knows him and the country knows him," exclaimed the Labour Minister, angrily, pointing to the Nova Scotia Scot, "and I don't care what he thinks."

"That's childish talk," observed Mr. Macdonald.

Mr. Crothers said he did not "pretend he had succeeded in reducing prices of things very much." He was, however, a great believer in publicity in getting results and forcing things to a proper level. So far as he knew no dealers were selling at an exorbitant profit.

Cannot Bluff Pardee Down.

"Of course," put in Mr. Pardee, "and you won't listen when efforts are made to bring the specific facts before you."

Mr. Crothers waved his hand angrily towards the Chief Liberal Whip. "That will do for you," he exclaimed. "Sit down!"

Mr. Pardee remained standing. "The Minister of Labour may just as well understand," he said, "that he is not going to bluff me by conduct and threats of that kind. I bring a special case to his attention and want to know what has been done or is being done, if anything."

"You have no business to talk without my consent," retorted the Labour Minister. "I have the floor."

"Then you refuse to answer?" asked Mr. Pardee.

"I don't have to," replied Mr. Crothers. "What I know, I know."

"Nobody else knows," put in Mr. Macdonald, amid laughter.

"And you refuse to allow the evidence to be laid before you," reiterated Mr. Pardee.

Work Out Their Own Salvation.

"The members of the Hamilton Council are no doubt intelligent and they have a solicitor, though I don't know him. They will work out their own salvation," explained Mr. Crothers.

"Without any help from the department or Government," added Mr. Pardee.

Mr. Crothers appealed to the Chair and was accorded a ruling against unpermitted interruption. Mr. Pardee said he would bow to the ruling of the Chair, but that otherwise the Minister would be unsuccessful in any "bluffink efforts" to avoid "a straight answer to a straight question."

Working People Highly Paid.

Mr. Crothers continued that prices were very high, but the working people were all employed. "The working people, I'm told," he said, "have more money than they ever had before. They are better off. They are getting large wages and putting money in the bank." In a time when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was in the Government there were soup kitchens. The Labour Minister concluded by the statement that he was kept too busy and had not time to deal with all the questions and motions the Opposition launched.

Amazed at the Minister.

Mr. W. S. Loggie, who followed, confessed his amazement at the exhibition given by the Minister of Labour. After opening by protesting against the waste of time he had talked for two hours on the Budget debate on matters foreign to it. His conduct in dealing with matters brought properly before him was conduct which "might be tolerated from a back-bencher, but not from a Minister of the Crown." "There was one statement he made that I think was true," observed Mr. Loggie, amid laughter. "He said he had great confidence in publicity. I think the Minister his fairly well published himself this afternoon."

Time for Reconstruction.

Mr. Loggie believed the time had come in the national interests when there must be reconstruction of the Government, and national leadership and action. He expressed regret that up to the present the Government had made no earnest effort to fulfill the promise to send half a million Canadians to the front. The Government was responsible for this failure. Mr. Loggie expressed the personal view that the time had arrived for a coalition Government, which would secure the men "by voluntary enlistment or otherwise."

Double Tax on People.

He estimated that Canadian families during the last fiscal year contributed an average of $40 as war taxes, and $75 to defray the general expenses of the country. These taxes had been raised in part by an increase in the tariff, including increased duties on British goods, for which the Government must take sole responsibility. Mr. Loggie objected to the present tariff on the score that it involved a double tax on the people. To the tax paid the Government for necessary purposes he had no objection, but he disapproved of the tax paid to manufacturers. The trouble with the existing tariff was that it constituted class legislation.

Would Free Food, Reduce Duties.

He would take all the duty off food products, and make considerable reduction in duties on manufactured goods. Mr. Loggie contended that if the trade agreement of 1911 had been in force during the past four years it would have saved the consumers of Canada $12,000,000.

Layfayette Air Squadron Bring Down 32 Hun Planes

Special Cable by Henry Wood.

With the Lafayette Air Squadron French Army, Somewhere in France May 11.—Six German aeroplanes brought down, has been America's "bit" contributed against Germany since April 6. This is the score which up to to-day has been made by the Americans in France's Lafayette escadrille. It is the number of enemy planes actually smashed down within the French lines. The official list does not take into account a dozen other German flyers which have been knocked down behind the German lines.

Here at the headquarters of this squadron, close before the Hindenburg line, on French territory, only recently reconquered from the invaders floats the only official American flag over a fighting force on the French front It is the gift of the Orange ,N.J., Elks to these American flyers.

Since the organization of the escadrille 32 machines have officially been brought down by its American flyers within the French lines. A score of others have been downed where official confirmation was impossible.

Sergeant Stephen Bigelow, of Boston, this week, fired 400 rounds into an adversary before he finally succeeded in bringing him down—behind the German lines.

Sergeant Robert Rockwell, of Cincinnati, Ohio, had a desperate duel just the other day. His plane was literally riddled and one wing was all but shot away. Even his elevating mechanism was smashed. Yet the American succeeded in manoeuvring back to the safety of the ground behind the French line, himself unscathed.

Corp. William Dugan, of Rochester N. Y., turned up to-day after being given up for lost. He disappeared two days ago. The sky simply swallowed him up, apparently. But Dugan told a different story on his resurrection. His machine had been disabled and he barely got it safely to earth just behind the British lines. Between shell fire and ground fighting, it took him two whole days to get out unharmed and back to his camp.

CANADA TO SUPPLY TENTS FOR AMERICAN ARMY USE

Has Big Stock and United States Lacks These Accommodations.

WASHINGTON, May 11.— Canada to-day solved a problem that United States army officers have regarded as very serious, when Thomas Hilliard, secretary of the Canadian Purchasing Commission, informed the war department that the Dominion has an enormous reserve stock of tentage and other quarter masters' supplies, upon which the United States is at liberty to draw. Shortage of tentage had threatened to seriously interfere with the organization of the mobilization camps, for the selective draft army, and Canada's generous offer comes at an opportune time.

ELEVEN DOGS KILLED

Since the First Rabies Outbreak—Will Not Need Them Again.

The emergency dog by-law the Council passed several weeks— or was it years ago?—has accounted for eleven dead dogs that were despatched by the police at the incinerator execution grounds. Had their owners been less precipitate the dogs might have the full freedom of the streets to-day as usual, with the rest of their pals, who regard the "catcher" merely as a "booman," the figment of Aldermanic imagination of a hectic character that soon spent itself. The Council has sounded a mighty lodd "boo" that scared the dogs for a couple of days, until they realized that it was mere sound and fury, a blast that spent itself without an echo.

Famous Pack of Foxhounds Arrive

Duke of Beaufort Presents Twenty-two Couples to the Enniscliare Hunt.

MONTREAL, May 11.—Owing to the economy in foodstuffs in England and the abandonment of fox-hunting for a greater game, the Gloucestershire pack of fox-hounds are now on their way to Oakville to be given a home at the Enniscliare Hunt, which is owned by Mr. Bert Cox, the well-known breeder and owner of horses. Mr. Cox maintains a pack at Oakville under the name of the Enniscliare Hunt and is the master. There are twenty-two couples in the consignment, which arrived from England, and were shipped by the Canadian Express Company to their destination in one of the company's most up-to-date cars.

These hounds were the centre of attraction at the Canadain Express Company's siding at Mountain street, and the man placed in charge by the company took great pains in showing the canines to the numerous visitors.

The pack were formerly the property of the Duke of Beaufort and known as the "Gloucestershire Pack," which has always been looked on as one of the best in England. They have been sent to Enniscliare Hunt as a present from the Duke of Beaufort. Half of the pack are bitches, while there are also a number of well-known stud dogs in the lot.

The expense of sending these dogs to Oakville amounted to forty-two pounds, which amounts to $200 in Canadian money. They are as fine looking lot of fox-hounds as ever shown in America and will no doubt be greatly valued by their new owner.

HUNS DRAFTED BELGIANS.

COPENHAGEN, May 10. —A representative of the German War Department has admitted in the Reichstag that a number of Belgian subjects, resident in Cologne, were drafted into the German army, in spite of their protests that they were veterans of the Belgian army.

GERMAN SEAPLANES NOW FIRE TORPEDOES

These Speed Along Water's Surface and Strike Ship.

LONDON, May 11.—Revelation of a new German scheme of dropping torpedoes without warning from German seaplanes, was made in an affidavit signed at Newcastle by Oscar C. Finley, an American seaman, of Pittsburg, Pa., which read:

"While I was aboard the British Steamer Gena in the Channel May 1, two German seaplanes 300 feet aloft passed nearby. Without any warning whatever, one dropped a torepdo to the water and the missile sped along the surface and struck the Gena. We sank in 35 minutes.

"A Norwegian steamer, which approached us, was also similarly attacked. We fired while sinking and brought down one seaplane. The other fled."

U. S. BUYS AUSTRIAN SHIPS.

Pays About Half the Price Prevailing For Ships.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The Federal Shipping Board announces that it has purchased from American owners seven Austrian merchantmen held in American ports, totalling 54,681 tons, for $6,778,006. The price is about half the prevailing price for ships. The vessels will be repaired within a few months.

COLD IN THE WEST SEEDING IS SLOW

Mr. George Boucher has just returned from the West. He states that on Thursday last when he left Calgary the city looked as if it was in the midst of a mid-winter. Blizzard with inches of snow on the ground. Further East there was no snow, but it was very cold. The northern portion of the provinces have very little seeding done on account of the cold weather, and the Peace River was later in opening up than at any other season in its history. All these are reasons why we should produce what is possible in this district.

BELGIUM MAY GET CONSTANTINOPLE.

LONDON, May 11.—Not one of the Entente Powers will think of the war's conclusion with the Turk still in Europe. To grant the arbitrary control of the most important waterway in Europe to any one of the world's great nations might engender jealousy and endanger the future world peace for which the Allies are fighting.

To hand Constantinople and the Bosphorus over to any of the small Balkan nations would keep the future world's police force busy restoring order. Diplomatists here have long believed that the attitude of Bulgaria and Greece can be traced to Russia's desire to dominate the Black Sea entry, to extend autocratic Russia's despotic control to the west and dominate the Balkans.

When the new Russia, therefore, announced its disapproval of such a plan, the Chancellories of Europe all asked themselves the same question—Who will hold the key to the Bosphorus?

That key, it was learned to-day, is most likely destined to the keeping of King Albert's little nation — a reward for the terrific sacrifice of the kingdom and an acknowledgement by the Allies that Belgium can be trusted to keep the faith.

MARMORA WOMAN WAS ARRESTED

Obtained Registered Letter From Post Office at Norwood by Misrepresentation

Upon a warrant issued by Mr. J. B. Pearce, J. P., Minnie Burns, of Marmora was arrested on Sunday last and brought to Norwood and placed in the village lock-up. The charge against her was that of obtaining by misrepresentation a registered letter from the Norwood Post Office addressed to Mrs. M. Arnold. She represented herself to be Mrs. Arnold and signed the book as Mrs. A. Arnold. It appears she had previously visited Norwood early in April and called at the Post Office and inquired for mail for Mrs. Arnold. Miss Calder, who was in charge, told her there had been three registered letters to that address received but as they had not been called for within the usual period they had been returned to the Militia Department at Ottawa. The woman expressed disappointment and said the reason she had not called was that her child was sick. She said she had told her sister, Miss Burns to call for her mail but that she had forgotten. She then wrote a letter and handed it to Miss Calder to address to the proper department at Ottawa and at the same time requested her to let her know at Marmora if a letter came for her, adding "you can address your letter to Minnie Burns and she will give it to me."

Later an unregistered letter came addressed to Mrs. Arnold which Miss Calder forwarded to Marmora. This was followed soon after by a registered letter and on the 20th of April the woman called at the office here for it and signed as above stated. The letter contained a cheque from the Militia Department and this she took to Mr. George Salome and asked him to cash it. It appears that on her previous visit to Norwood the woman called at Mr. Salome's store and told a pitiful tale and managed to borrow 75c. from him, promising to send it to him when she got home. She told Salome she had been unable to send him the money but that if he would cash this cheque she would pay him. This he did, and the woman after making some purchases, took her departure.

It seems that this same woman called upon a number of Norwood citizens on one of her former visits and through the medium of a story of "hard luck" managed to borrow a few dollars. Among those who took pity on her were the Rev. Mr. Noble, the Anglican clergyman, who loaned her $2.00 and Rev. Irwin, Methodist minister, from whom she secured $1.00.

When arraigned before Magistrates Pearce and Squire on Monday morning she denied that she had ever been in the Norwood Post Office. Unfortunately for "Minnie," however, she was positively identified by Miss Calder, Rev. Mr. Noble, George Salome, and other witnesses, and was remanded for trial before County Police Magistrate Langley on Monday next, the 14th inst.

Enid Bennett in "Princess of the Dark"

Enid Bennett, engaged by Thomas H. Ince during a visit he made to New York and proclaimed by him as a wonderful "find," makes her first appearance as an Ince star on the Triangle programme in "Princess of the Dark," which will be seen at the Royal to-night and to-morrow.

The play tells the story of a blind girl whose wonderful imagination makes of her forlorn surroundings a fairyland of beauty. The eventual restoration of her sight means happiness for her, though it brings tragedy to a crippled boy whom she had believed in her blindness to be her fairy prince.

The play is said to be reminiful of the noted Ince production "Peggy."

Another western drama, and four sprightly comedies make up one of the best continuous performances offered at the Royal this season.

Mr. C. A. G. Spence Was in Toronto

Mr. C. A. G. Spence, local agent for the Children's Aid Society was in Toronto yesterday attending a conference of agents representing a number of Provincial societies. A number of questions of vital importance were discussed. The agents were entertained at a banquet given in the Parliament Buildings. Hon. W. D. McPherson, Provincial Secretary was the host supported by Premier Hearst and Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education. During the course of an address Premier Hearst said that the question of feeble-minded children was becoming a serious one. He intimated that the Provincial Government would have a definite programme to submit at an early date which he thought would deal very satisfactorily with the situation.

The Grocers Win Second Place In League Standing

Last night the Water street bowling alleys was the scene of some excellent bowling, when the Grocers took two out of three games from the West Ends. The Grocers took the first game by a 20 pin margin, but the West Ends came back in the second game and won out by 57 pins. The third game was a great exhibition of bowling when the Grocers rolled a total of 920 pins, which is a league record. Thompson for the West Ends, had a total of 328, which is a record for this league, and he also had a 256 count in the last game. Matthews for the West Ends had a 525 count, and Heard Outram and Fitzpatrick for the Grocers all went over the 500 mark. Hard spares were made by Ross and Fitzpatrick for the Grocers and Heaslip for the West Ends.

To-night the DeLaval and the King Pins clash in the closing game of the league.

The following are the scores:

Grocers—
Heard	176	150	207	535
Outram	158	131	219	508
Gillespie	160	137	173	470
Ross	160	145	163	468

Offers Half Public Houses in Ireland

Irish Interests Would Turn Them Over to Government—Thousands of Houses Would Close.

LONDON, May 10. — The parliamentary correspondent of the Daily News says that Joseph Devlin, Nationalist Member of Parliament from Belfast, on behalf of Irish interests, has offered the Government half the public houses in Ireland for £2,000,000. The offer would mean the closing of between 7,000 and 8,000 establishments and is favourably considered by Chief Secretary Duke, who will consult the Government.

The correspondent says that the state purchase of the liquor interests in Ireland but is undecided in regard to the rest of the kingdom. The parliamentary situation is unfavourable as far as Great Britain is concerned, nearly one hundred members of the House of Commons being pledged to oppose state purchase.

Italian Envoys Arrive Unhearlded In United States

Distinguished War Mission Reached an American Port After an Encounter With a Submarine

MISSION IS UNIQUE

Special to the Examiner:

Unheralded, it was learned Thursday six distinguished members of the Italian War Commission reached an American port on Wednesday night on board an American passenger vessel which had an encounter with a submarine off the coast of Ireland. So unassuming was the entrance of the commission that not even the State Department knew of its arrival, and the only formal greetings extended were from representatives of the Italian Embassy and Consulate General, who escorted the members to the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The commission, which includes some of the most noted men in Italy is headed by Enrico Arlotta, famous as a financier and at present Minister of Maritime and Railway Transportation in the Italian Cabinet. The other members are General Guglielmotti, representing the military; Commander Vannutelli, representing the nevy, Alvise Bragadoni, of the Transportation Department, Cavalier G. Pardo, of the Department of Industry and Commerce, and Cavalier Gaetana Pietra, of the Agricultural Department. Within a few days they will be joined by Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless telegraph, who is now on his way to the United States, and when he arrives the body will go to Washington.

As spokesman of the commission, Mr. Arlotta declared that the deputation sent by his government to this country came mainly to cement the cordial relations which have existed between the two nations, and which have been drawn closer through their becoming allies in war.

MISSION IS UNIQUE.

"This is the first time that a Minister of the Italian government has been sent to the United States," he said: "The purpose of the government in sending the commission was to cement the traditional friendship of the countries. Italy looks on the entrance of the United States into the war as a mattter of the deepest gratification. It is the final proof that we are fighting on the side of justice and liberty. We cannot forget that our country was founded on the basis of justice. For more than sixty years Italy has been a country where everybody has enjoyed freedom and we would never have gone to war if we had not been provoked by German and Austrian military oppression. We could not listen unmoved to the voices of our brothers of the Trentino and Trieste.

"Lack of tonnage and supplies is Italy's most serious problem. The need for transportation facilities is most pressing. It is a problem that confronts Italy and the other Allies. At present I cannot discuss the submarine situation in the Mediterranean, but I can say that Italy and her Allies fully rely on the great industrial power of this nation to develop a means of overcoming the situation which has arisen and to deal effectively with the question of food and other supplies."

The members of the commission were eloquent in their comment on the quickness and accuracy of the naval gunners on board the passenger vessel when the submarine was sighted and driven off while the vessel was passing the Irish coast.

PRAISES MARKSMANSHIP

"I believe that the seamanship of the commander of the vessel," said Mr. Arlotta "and the ability of the gunners saved the ship from the submarine. You will understand that we feel very happy that we chose to come to this great country under the Stars and Stripes."

The members of the commission are noted in many branches of political, military and naval activity in Italy. Mr. Arlotta is a member of the liberal party and has been in the Italian Parliament for twenty years. In the Sonnino Cabinet he was Minister of France ,and when the Department of Maritime and Railway Transportation was created at the outbreak of the war he was chosen to head it.

General Guglienotti was commander of the army of occupation at Vallona in Albania, and afterward he commanded a division of the Italian front in the Corso, where he gave distinguished service.

Commander Vannutelli, of the Italian navy, comes of a famous family, which has supplied two Cardinals to the Papal Consistory, and is a noted explorer and traveller. Since the war he has been in command of a unit of torpedo boats in the Adriatic Sea.

The visitors spent the first day receiving and paying calls, Mr. Scarrara, Italian Consul General, and Giuseppe Brambilla, Counsellor of the Italian Embassy, greeted them on their arrival and will act as their cicerones while they are in New York.

Cattle Market.

With a large run of cattle offering in last Monday's market, trade opened a little slow, and in a few cases the holders of heavy-weight steers made slight concessions in prices. Before the close of the market for the day the general tone had improved, and cattle were moved over the scales freely, while prices on all grades had full recovered to the previous week's best averages. From then on for the rest of the week receipts were comparatively light, and prices tended generally firmer and slightly higher to the closing market. Top prices for the best lots of butchers steers and heifers held steady to firm around $11.75 to $12.00, while individual sales for singles and small lots went as high as $12.50 and $12.60.

There was a good demand throughout the week for handy medium weight butcher steers and heifers of choice quality. The market for good fat cows and heavy bulls was exceptionally strong all through the week, record prices being reached.

Trade in stockers and feaders was steady and fairly active, the demand for good grass cows being again a feature of this market.

Choice millers and springers in strong, active market all through the week.

Receipts of calves were again moderately heavy, but not large as the week before. Prices held good, with a gradually firmer feeling toward the close of the week.

Receipts of hogs were moderately heavy, but about 4,000 head below the total for the previous week. The result was that attempts to lower prices were discouraging to the packers, and quotations at the end of the week were firm at the $17 notch for fed and watered hogs.

Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards — Total receipts for the week—407 cars, with 4,584 cattle, 1,185 calves, 10,350 hogs, 176 sheep and lambs, and 1,050 horses.

City Cattle Market — 55 cars, with 825 cattle, 112 sheep and lambs, 535 hogs, 405 calves, and 4 horses.

THANKFUL MOTHERS

Mothers who have once used Baby's Own Tablets for their little ones are always strong in their praise of this medicine. Among them is Mrs. Marcelle Boudreau, Mizonette, N.B., who writes: "Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine I know of for little ones. I am very thankful for what they have done for my children." The Tablets regulate the bowels and stomach; cure constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers; in fact they cure all the minor ills of little ones. Flour Has Advanced 60c.

Heavy Prices in Many Lines of Groceries Also Announced During the Week

The folowing comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs, will appear in the Canadian Grocer this week:

Flour has been the centre of interest during the week, a further advance of 60c per barrel having been recorded.

Sugar held in steady market, with favorable reports comin from Cuba, as to the number of centrals that are now grinding. There are 35 more centrals grinding than at the same time last year. Production up to date, however, is behind last year owing to the lateness of the grinding season and interference through the revolution. Tea is in a continued firm position with the prospects that higher prices will prevail.

Cooked meats have been on the upward trend quite generally and compound lard has again reached higher levels, owing to the advance in cotton seed oil in the United States.

Eggs are firm with higher prices recorded during the week, due to storage that is now going on, and also to the fact that production has not been as heavy as ordinarily would have been the case with more favorable weather. Commission men are uncertain over the course the cheese market is likely to take, the belief being prevalent in some quarters that the new purchasing commission is likely to fix lower prices than those now prevailing.

Advances in grocery lines have been numerous and include soups, cereals, jams, marmalade, jelly powders, maple products, evaporated milk, castile soap, laundry soap, Epsom salts, baking powder, molasses, dried peaches, chicory, peanuts, rice, beans. Declines have been recorded in whitefish and trout, and pineapples, with the prospect that the latter fruit will be lower in the near future.

Business in grocery lines has been very good.

Futile Effort To Dislodge The Canadians

Every Weapon Known to Military Science is Being Used by the Germans—Enemy Losses Are Heavy

A VAIN EFFORT

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, May 12.— Crown Prince Rupprecht was to-day trying with almost every sort of weapon known to military science of this or former days, to dislodge the Canadians' grip on German positions around Fresnoy, and the Australians' near the Bullecourt front. Dispatches told of hand grenades, trench mortars, liquid fire, boiling oil, machine guns and rifle fire. All concentrated in the fury of attack. It is not only at Fresnoy and Bullecourt that the Germans are striving to-day to stop all movements of the British. Official reports detailed massed offensive assaults at Arleux and other points around Lens. The British grip on the coal city has been increasingly strong of late, and Hindenburg, with every reserve force at his command, is endeavouring vainly so far, and with extraordinary losses, to weaken the circle of British trenches around this town.

FAT AND FERTILIZERS OUT OF HUMAN BODIES

Germans Wire the Dead Bodies Together and Ship Them to Factories Where They Are Boiled Down—The Business Aspect of the Business

Among the stories told by men who have come from the front is the following, which affords unexpected confirmation of the account of the Corpse Utilization Company's enterprise, says the London Times. The soldier who tells the story is Sergeant B——, of the Kent's. Describing the prisoners taken in the recent fighting, he said:

"One of them who spoke English told me—mind, I don't know that it's true, but he told me—that even when they're dead their work isn't done. They are wired together in batches then, and boiled down in factories as a business, to make fat for munition making and to feed pigs and poultry, and God knows what besides. Then other folk eat the pigs and poultry, so you may say it's cannabilism, isn't it? This fellow told me 'Frits' calls his margarine 'corpse fat' because they suspect that's what it comes from."

Herr Karl Rosner's message to the Berlin Lokal Anzeigner, of April 10, mentioning the existence of the Corpse Utilization Factor—, translates as follows:

HUMAN BODIES FOR OIL.

"We pass through Evergnicourt. There is a sickly smell in the air, as if glue were being boiled. We are passing the great Corpse Utilization Establishment (Kadaververwertungsanstalt) of this Army Group. The fat that is won here is turned into lubricating oils, and everything else is ground down in the bone mill into a powder which is used for mixing with pigs' food and as manure. Nothing can be permitted to go to waste."

A number of letters questioning the translation of the German word "Kadaver" and suggesting that it is not used of human bodies, have been received by the Times, which, however, points out that the best authorities are agreed that it is so used, though it is also used of the bodies of animals. Many other witnesses have stated before, that it has long been known in Belgium and Holland that the Germans do in fact dispose of their dead in the horrible manner indicated in Herr Karl Rosner's message.

FAT AND FERTILIZERS

The business aspect of the industry is dealt with in the Lancet, which says:

"There appear to be good reasons for believing that the Germans are utilising the bodies of their dead by committing them to a chemical treatment, which, for one thing, yields fat, and, for another, a nitrogenous powder which serves, so it is stated, to enrich pig feed, and yet for another, the mineral phosphate of the bone to be used as a fertiliser in the field.

"The recovery of fat by what may appear to be a gruesome policy means, of course, a source of material for the making of glycerine and its nitro derivative. The total amount of fat in the human body varies immensely, but it may be said to range from 2-5 to 5 per cent. of the body weight.

GLYCERINE BY-PRODUCT.

"It is easy to see that in a period of heavy casualties this method for the disposal of the dead will yield a very material amount of glycerine. Thus, a thousand bodies at an average weight of 10st. (140 lbs) would yield, on an average of 3 per cent. basis of fat per body weight, about two tons of fat capable of being turned into a tenth of its weight of glycerine—i. e., 4 cwt. As the published number of killed far exceeds this, the output of glycerine may have been increased proportionately, not to mention the soap incidentally produced. The dividends of the enterprising company known as the Kadaververwertungsanstalt (Corpse Utilisation Establishment) may, according to this calculation, be quite satisfactory to the directors and shareholders, enabling them to face criticism with complacency."

ARMY MOTTOES AND THEIR MEANING

Famous Regiments and Their Crests—Two of Britain's Finest Cavalry Regiments Bear German Mottoes

The adoption of the splendid motto, "Everywhere and always faithful," by Major-General Hickie, for the use of the Sixteenth Irish Division, should please our French Allies almost as much as his own men, says a London paper, for it was bestowed by Louis XV. upon the Irish Brigade after the Battle of Fontenoy, when it was on the French side against the British. Perhaps it is not strange, although it seems a little incongruous in the lurid light of this war, that two of our finest cavalry regiments, the 10th and 11th Hussars, should bear German mottoes. Probably they do not like it at present, but the meaning is good if the language is bad.

Welsh Motto for Welshmen

One of these is also the motto of the Prince of Wales and was first assumed by the Black Prince. It was the motto of the blind King John of Bohemia, who was slain at Crecy, and the Black Prince assumed both his crest (three ostrich feathers) and his motto, "Ich Dien" (I serve), which is also the motto of the 10th Hussars, whilst that of the 11th is as appropriate in German as in English, "Treu und Fest." The Welsh Regiment is the only one which bears a Welsh motto, and for those who understand it it is a fine one, but you must be a Welshman before it conveys any sense! Here it is: "Gwell Angau na Chywilydd," and its meaning is simply "Death rather than dishonour," a sentiment that every Welshman is ready to endorse.

The present-day Devonshires used to be the 11th Foot, who answered the roll call after Salamanca in such an indescribable state that they earned for themselves the honourable sobriquet of the Bloody Eleventh, a title of which they are still proud. After that great victory in the Peninsula they were granted the privilege of enclosing the simple XI, their distinctive regimental mark, in an eight-pointed star surmounted by a crown which had hitherto been the sole possession of the Brigade of Guards.

When territorial names were substituted for numbers in 1882 the XI was replaced by a castle and the words "Semper Fidelis" (Always faithful), these being the arms and motto of Exeter, their depot.

The shortest and one of the best-known mottoes in the British Army is that of the Royal Horse Artillery. Kipling expresses it in plain English instead of Latin when he says, speaking of a gun: "There's a wheel on the Horns o' the Mornin,' an' a wheel on the edge o' the Pit," and, although he wrote years before the present war, he seemed to foresee the dug-outs of Thiepval and Beaumont Hamel when he wrote, "You may hide in the caves, they'll be only your graves, but you can't get away from the guns!" The motto of the R.H.A. is "Ubique," which means Everywhere.

ARMY AND DISCIPLINE

How An English General Taught Discipline to Recruit

An amusing story is told of how an English General taught discipline painlessly to one of the millions of new soldiers England has made. He passed one day while on his daily canter a private soldier walking in the opposite direction. The soldier did not salute. The General stared a moment, puzzled whether or not to reprimand the man. Then a slow grin passed over his face. He turned to his aid. "We'll dismount, Mr. A.," he said, and then turning to his orderly and pointing to the soldier, "Trooper B, arrest that man and bring him here. He's a spy." The General then proceeded to order and supervise a search of the man.

A thorough search revealed nothing more incriminating than a few picture postcards, his pay book and an envelope with two five franc notes.

The General then cleared his throat and scowling darkly, said: "Well, my man, I want you to understand this—a British soldier who does not salute a British officer is either a spy or a fool. You, apparently, are just a plain fool."

Thereupon, turning on his heel, he jumped into the saddle and started to ride off. But reined in for a moment and turning in his saddle, grinned down upon the soldier who stood at attention, half dressed, his belongings scattered about. "All right, you can dress now!" said the General. The story spread and there are fewer complaints now of inattention to the rules of the service of the British army.

CAMPBELL & BEST

LIMIT HOURS OF LABOR.

Railwaymen Want the Regulation put in Revised Act.

OTTAWA, May 9. — Representatives of the railway brotherhoods, Messrs. Lawrence, Pelletier and Best, made a plea before the Special Railway Committee to-day to limit in the Railway Act now being revised, the hours of labour. The engineers and firemen were alluded to particularly. The new act gives the Railway Commission power to fix the hours but the railwaymen's representatives preferred specific legislation. Mr. Lawrence alluded to the United States law where a man working sixteen hours could not again go on duty for ten hours.

In Canada last winter many engineers and firemen worked 18 to 24 hours continuously, and there was danger to the public.

The paramount weakness of Federal laws, W. F. Maclean argued, was that the enforcement is left to the Provincial Attorneys-General. The clause finally was allowed to stand.

A semi-monthly system of pay for railway employees was next advocated by the brotherhoods. This not only would be of great advantage to the employees but would increase their purchasing power. The discussion was deferred after Mr. Chrysler, K. C., for the companies voiced general objection, and stated that they would later give their reasons in detail.

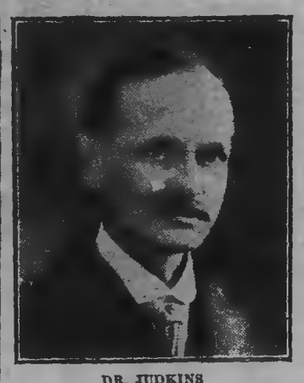
Dr. Beck, The Well Known Eye Specialist and Doctor Judkins, The Medical Author, Publish Astonishing Report on Wonderful Remedy To Strengthen Eyesight

Say it Strengthens Eyesight 50% in One Week's Time in Many Instances

DR. BECK



DR. JUDKINS

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

New York.—Dr. Beck, a New York state eye specialist, and Dr. Judkins, a Massachusetts physician, were asked to make a thorough test of the popular eye remedy, Bon Opto. Their reports were most interesting. Here they are:

Dr. Beck reports, "When my attention was first called to the wonderful eye remedy, Bon Opto, I was inclined to be skeptical. I make it a rule to test every new treatment which is brought to my attention. Having specialized in eye work for the past twenty years, I believe I am qualified to express an intelligent opinion on remedies applicable to the eyes. Since Bon Opto has created such a sensation throughout the United States and Canada, I welcomed the opportunity to test it. I began to use it in my practice a little over a year ago and I am frank to say that the results obtained are such that I hesitate to tell of my experience for fear it will sound incredible. Some of the results I have accomplished with Bon Opto not only astonished myself but also other physicians with whom I have talked about it. I have had many individuals who had worn glasses for years for far-sightedness, near-sightedness, astigmatism and other eye weaknesses, tell me they have dispensed with them through the adoption of the Bon Opto principal. Many eye troubles can be traced directly to muscular contraction and relaxation and since Bon Opto method tells how to exercise and develop the eye muscles, it reaches conditions not possible through other means. I advise every thoughtful physician to study Bon Opto principal, give it the same careful trial I have and there is no doubt in my mind they will come to the conclusion I have, namely, that the Bon Opto method opens the door for the cure of many eye troubles which have heretofore been impossible to cope with. The treatment is so simple in its application that it can be used at home by anyone of average intelligence. In my own practice I have seen it strengthen the eyesight more than 50 per cent in one week's time. I have also used it with surprising effect in cases of work strained eyes, pink eye, inflammed lids, catarrhal conjunctivites, smarting, painful, aching, itching eyes, eyes weakened from colds, smoke, sun, dust and wind, watery eyes, blurred vision, and in fact many other conditions too numerous to describe in this report. A new and startling case has just come under my observation, which yielded to Bon Opto, is that of a young girl, 12 years old. Two prominent eye specialists, after a thorough examination of the young girl, decided in order to save the sight of her right eye, the left eye must be removed. Before permitting her to be operated on, the young girl's father decided to use Bon Opto. In less than three days a marked improvement was noticed. At the end of a week the inflammation had almost disappeared, and at the end of six weeks the eye was saved. Just think what the saving of that eye means to this little girl. Another case is that of a lady ninety-three years old. She came to me with dull vision and extreme inflammation of the lids and the conjunctiva was almost raw. After two weeks' use of Bon Opto the lids were absolutely normal and her eyes are as bright as many a girl of sixteen."

Dr. Judkins, Massachusetts physician, formerly Chief of Clinics in the Union General Hospital, Boston, Mass., and formerly House Surgeon at the New England Eye and Ear Infirmary of Portland, Maine, and medical author for many years, reports:

"I have found oculists too prone to operate and opticians too willing to prescribe glasses while neglecting the simple formulas which form the basis of that wonderful home treatment for eye troubles, Bon Opto. This, in my opinion, is a remarkable remedy for the cure and prevention of many eye disorders. Its success in developing and strengthening the eyesight will soon make eye glasses old fashioned and the form of eye baths which the Bon Opto method provides, will make its use as common as that of the tooth brush. I am thoroughly convinced from my experience with Bon Opto that it will strengthen the eyesight at least 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances. Dr. W. H. Devine, director of medical inspection in the Boston schools, in his report published February 20, 1917, states that only 14,016 out of 89,175 examined, need to wear glasses now, a marked decrease over the previous report. Bon Opto is hastening the eyeglassless age in bespectacled Boston."

Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses and those who wear glasses will be glad to know that according to Dr. Beck and Dr. Judkins, there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away." One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and close work and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription at home. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon Opto tablets. Drop one Bon Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little, it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE—Another prominent physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon Opto referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It is dispensed by all good druggists in this city, including

The Warne Drug Company.

WOMEN WORKERS SMOKE IN GOVERNMENT OFFICES

Attention has been directed to the growth of the smoking habit among women by the report of the official physician of a large English munitions factory that he has found fourteen young women employees suffering from "smokers' heart." Some of them are quite young girls. "All of these," he says, "are women to be regarded naturally as potential mothers. There never was a time when babies were of such vital importance as to-day, yet at the very time we want strong and sturdy babies, children are likely to come into this world in a weak, weedy and rickety condition, paying the price for their mothers' devotion to tobacco.

Smoking after lunch is now permitted among the women workers in several of the most conservative government offices in London, and, in other departments where official permission is lacking, systematic smoking among the women employees is winked at. In the offices of private firms and factories of all kinds, the same condition exists.

A London newspaper says that many women workers admit smoking an average of a hundred cigarettes weekly. An army surgeons, who, in the last days of 1914, declared that excessive smoking among boys was the cause of so many men proving unfit for general military service, has just stated that "one of the greatest evils produced by the war is the growth of the smoking habit in women."

SUNDAY SERMON

For Those Who Do Not Go to Church

(By Jas. Sutherland)

CHRIST'S SERMON ON THE MOUNT.

This is the longest public discourse of Christ that is written for our instruction, and every part of it is connected with the great doctrine of salvation, which is in other places more plainly stated.

The true gospel of Christ is more practical than any other doctrine, and none will be as happy in this world or in the next who do not seek it from Christ by the rule of his word. Christ preached this sermon upon a mountain; the law was given upon a mountain, and this was also a promulgation of the Christian law. But observe the difference: When the law was given the Lord spake in thunder and lightning, now in a still small voice; then the people were ordered to keep at a distance; now they are invited to draw near—a blessed change. If God's grace and goodness are (as certainly they are) his glory then the glory of the gospel is the glory that excels, for grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.

He had before, as often afterwards, preached in the synagogues, but probably no building could contain the multitudes now around him; and a mountain or a field will be consecrated ground, or any day holy time, if the Lord vouchsafes his presence and blessing. He opened his mouth: This expression marks the gravity with which the Divine Teacher taught, and the importance of what he was going to deliver. He pronounced benedictions as being invested with supreme authority. He interpreted the divine law, not as a common expounder, but as the supreme Lawgiver, representing the decisions of eternal judgment as depending on himself.

One of the ancients remarks upon it: Christ taught much without opening his mouth, that is by his holy and exemplary life; nay, he taught when being led as a lamb to the slaughter, he opened not his mouth; but now he opened his mouth, and taught that the Scriptures might be fulfilled. Proverbs 8, 1, 2, 6. Doth not wisdom cry, cry on the top of high places? and the opening of her lips shall be right things. He taught them according to the promise. Isa. 54, 13. All thy children shall be taught of the Lord. For this purpose he had the tongue of the learned. Isa. 50, 4, and the spirit of the Lord, Isa. 61, 1. He taught them what was the evil they should abhor, and what the good they should abide and abound in. Christianity is not a matter of speculation but is designed to regulate the temper of our minds and the tenour of our conversations.

A hill called the Mount of the Beatitudes to the north of Mount Tabor, is generally considered to have been the place where our Lord delivered this discourse; it is an elevation of from two to three hundred feet. Blessedness is what all men pursue, but most mistake the end and form a wrong idea of happiness. Then no wonder that they miss the way; they choose their own way. The general opinion is: Blessed and happy are the rich, and the great and honorable in the world; that spend their days in mirth and their years in pleasure.

Now our Lord Jesus comes to give us another view of Blessedness and blessed people. All men seek happiness but none excepting those who are taught by the Spirit of God, according to his written word, know wherein it consists or how it may be obtained. It is designed to remove the discouragements of the poor and the weak, by assuring them that his gospel did not make them only happy who are eminent in gifts, graces, comforts and usefulness, but even the least in the kingdom of heaven. It is designed to invite men to Christ and to make way for his law into their hearts. Christ's pronouncing these blessings may remind us of Mount Gerezim and Mount Ebal. Deut. 27, 12. There the curses are expressed, , and the curses implied, in both life and death, are set before us, but the law appeared more as a ministration of death, to deter us from sin. The gospel is a dispensation of life to draw us to Christ, in whom alone all good is to be had. It is designed to let us know what God expects from us. Nowhere is this more fully set forth in a few words than here, nor with more exact reference to each other, and this coming from the mouth of Jesus Christ intimates that from him, and by him, we are to receive both the seed and the fruit, both the grace required and the glory promised. Nothing passes between God and fallen man but through his hand.

Our Saviour gives us here eight characters of blessed people which represent to us the principal graces of a Christian. Each is variously expressed as to suit the nature of the grace or duty recommended. These do not refer to such natural dispositions, as may bear some resemblance, but to holy dispositions, produced by divine grace, and none who have not faith and experience will be persuaded that the poor in spirit, the meek, the mourners, those who long earnestly for righteousness, the merciful, the pure in heart, the peacemakers, and the persecuted, are the only happy persons in the world. Do we ask, then, who are happy? The poor in spirit are happy. Poverty of spirit is a gracious disposition of soul by which we are emptied of self in order to be filled with Jesus Christ. To be poor in spirit is to be contentedly poor if God orders that to be our lot; to bring our mind to our condition, when it is a low condition. Many are poor in the world, but proud, murmuring and complaining and blaming their lot, but acknowledging the wisdom of God in appointing us to poverty, we shall be easy in it, be thankful for what we have, and make the best of it. We shall sit loose to all worldly wealth and not set our hearts upon it, but cheerfully bear losses and disappointments. It is also to be humble and lowly in our own eyes. It is to value others and undervalue ourselves in comparison of them. It is to be willing to make ourselves little, that we may do good to others. It is to acknowledge that God is great and holy, and that we are weak and sinful. It is to have no confidence in our own strength or righteousness; that we may depend only upon Christ for our justification, and the spirit and the grace of Christ for our sanctification. We must always call ourselves poor, because we are ever in need of the grace of God. The foundation of all other graces is laid in humility. It is those who see their want and feel their need and are hungering and thirsting after a better life, and are seeking pardon and peace through the atoning sacrifice of Christ. They are blessed, for God looks graciously upon them. Theirs is the kingdom of heaven. The kingdom of grace is composed of such, the kingdom of glory is prepared for them. Those who humble themselves God will life them up and they shall stand. The same happiness is promised to the contentedly poor, as to the usefully rich. We have a good Master, who accepts our humblest services; even a cup of cold water given to a disciple in his name will not go without his reward.

Blessed are they that mourn. There is a natural mourning that may prove a friend to blessedness by the grace of God working with it, and sanctifying afflictions to us; as the Psalmist said: It was good for me that I was afflicted. There is a gracious mourning a godly sorrow for sin, which worketh true repentance. Zach. 12: 10. These mourners are like to the Lord Jesus who was a Man of Sorrows. In heaven the blessed are eternally comforted, and there all tears are wiped from their eyes. It is the joy of our Lord, to which our way lies through a valo of tears. See Isa. 66:10. Such mourners shall be comforted with a sense of God pardoning mercy and with peace, hope and joy in the Holy Ghost. The meek are happy. The meek are those who submit cheerfully to the divine will, who bear the trials of this life meekly and when provoked are either silent or return a soft answer, who in their patience possess their own souls. They are happy even in this world; they shall inherit the earth. Not that they shall always have much of the earth, but they have the promise of the life that now is—all the blessings of heaven above, and all the blessings of the earth beneath are the portion of the meek.

They that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for this includes all spiritual blessings. To have Christ made of God to us righteousness, to bear his image, and to have an interest in his promises and in him—this is righteousness. The merciful are happy and always willing to help and pity those who are in trouble and suffering. They not only bear out all their own troubles, but are ever ready to help the helpless; it is an evidence of their love to God. The merciful shall find with God sparing mercy. Chap. 6:14; supplying mercy, Prov. 19:17; Sustaining mercy, Psalm 41:2.

Here is the most comprehensive comfort of the blessed. They shall see God. True Christianity lies in the purity of the heart; none but the pure are capable of seeing God. The peacemakers are happy. It is their desire and delight to promote, and make peace and reconcile the brethren. When Jesus was born the angelic host proclaimed, Peace on earth and goodwill to men.

Christ in closing this sermon refers to the saints who are persecuted for his sake; they shall be recompensed; hers is the kingdom of Heaven. It is a comfort and a joy to follow in the path of the servants of God. The grace that carried them through their sufferings will also encourage us to reach our heavenly home.

Yours sincerely.

Cut stale bread into thick slices, trimming off the crusts. For six slices take one egg, a cupful of milk and a pinch of salt. Beat together. Lay the slices of bread on a large platter, and baste each piece with the custard, adding more from time to time until all has been absorbed. Put a little butter in a frying pan, and when it is hot, carefully lay in the bread slices, using a cake turned to prevent breaking. Fry over a slow fire till golden brown, then turn, and brown the other side. Serve at once, with butter and a bowl of powdered suger, into which has been stirred a teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon.

JUST LIKE A HOUSECLEANING

Every room needs an occasional "cleaning up", no matter how carefully the regular sweeping and dusting is done. Especially is this true after any unusual event, a party, a wedding or a quilting bee.

So it is with your body. No matter how regular your habits or well cooked your food, there comes a time when you don't feel just right. You may recall an unusually hearty meal or two, irregular hours, or eating something that "didn't agree with you", or it may be just the "dust-gathering".

In any case a few doses of a really good carthartic is all you need to put you right. For this purpose nothing is quite so suitable as

Chamberlain's Tablets

Two or three after supper the first night, and one each night for two or three days, and your digestive apparatus is just like the well-cleaned room. Every part of your body is more vigorous, you go about your work with a new feeling and begin again to enjoy life. Are these benefits not worth getting? You know they are.

And you need have no hesitation about beginning them for fear you must "keep it up". The effect is just the opposite.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

WHY IS IT?

As we passed along the street on a recent Sunday we counted twenty-seven young men, most of them in their teens, just budding into manhood, loitering their time away. As we looked into their faces, many of them lighted up by the beacon rays of a poor cigar or the pernicious cigarette, we recognized them as young men blessed with comfortable homes, indulgent parents and loving sisters. We ask ourselves, why is it? Why do these young men prefer the unclean resorts, comfortless streets and mixed society, to the upholstered chair, the pleasant and comfortable surroundings of the family circle at home? Who can answer? Dare we charge the parents in a degree responsible for this state of affairs? Are these things as they would have them? Do you shut up your homes lest the sun should fade the carpets, and your heart lest a laugh should shake down a few of the musty old cobwebs that are hanging there? If you want to ruin your sons let them think that all social enjoyment must be left at the threshold when they come home. When once a home is regarded as only a suitable place to eat, drink and sleep in, the work is begun that ends in gambling houses and reckless degredation. Better let the fire burn brightly in the winter, the doors be thrown open in summer and make the homestead delightful with all those little arts that parents so well understand. Half an hour of merriment within door, and merriment of a home blots out the remembrance of many a care and annoyance during the day, and the best safeguard that can be taken with them into the world is the unseen influence of a bright little home sanctum. Let parents ponder over these few suggestions.

• • • •

We often wonder why it is so many young men can be seen loafing upon our streets until a late hour of night. Many of them are from our best homes. The fathers of these young men, many of them at least, are numbered among our best citizens. If their cow or their horse or even their favorite dog was away from home after dark they would be out on a search for it, but their own children can roam the town all night with apparently no effort being made to find them.

LIFE'S JOURNEY.

For every life there is a summit. Happy are they who gain it and sad the lot of those who faint and fail in the struggle. Short or long to the top, it can only be scaled by persistent climbing. There must be ambition to do and dare, or the prize will not be secured.

Have you in the vigor of youth begun the journey? Already are you tired and weary? Are you resting by the way in slothful indulgence, hoping for wings or sails to bear you aloft without effort? Long before manhood's prime you will miss the top and go down hill. Arouse for another effort. At the base is the thorn, at the summit the crown. There is no escape from the one or the other in the life journey. Which will you have, wealth or poverty, comfort or squallor? Decide in the dew of the morning.

That the churches in any community exercise a most potent influence for good is conceded by all except the most rabid or blatant infidel whose egotism and self-conceit blind his mind to the inestimable value of Christianity. But to what extent are the churches valuable in this community The Galilean teacher said of His disciples: "Ye are the light of the world." "Ye are the salt of the earth." Hence, if all His disciples are the light of the world and the salt of the earth, the logical as well as the scriptural conclusion is that they are the light of the community in which they live. These declarations, however, do not preclude the possibility of the light going out—being hid under a bushel—or the salt losing its saltiness. But certainly no reasonable or fair-minded persons would accuse the churches of being wholly composed of united bands of hypocrites for it matters not to what extent sin, in its many forms, may pervade the ranks of any church, you will find within its membership consecrated men and women. And it should be borne in mind that it only requires a few of the above-mentioned class to become the light of the community.

It doesn't pay to gossip about one's neighbours. Let us have only kind thoughts and good words for every one, and be sure to lend a helping hand whenever occasion calls for it. In trying to lighten another's burden we forget our own; and the kind thoughts we send out come back to us like echoes.

Young man, remember this: All the friends who can gather about you can never make your life a success; neither can your enemies make it a failure. It rests with you to determine whether you shall succeed or fail. Just put this thought on your memorands, and study it carefully.

MOTHER TO DAUGHTER.

"Not that my arm grows weaker,
Not that my faith shows vain,
Not that the blaze burns dimmer,
Not with the lust of gain—
'Tis for the bond of service
That holds us both in thrall,
The mother greets the daughter
Where the fateful issues call.

"Cursed with a dull King's madness,
Each other's blood we drained—
The charter of English freedom
Was trampled and torn and stained.
But out of that lowering darkness
The hope of morning grew,
And the faith we pledged each other
The fruitful years renew.

"If I have wronged, I have righted—
If oppressed, I have set free;
I have stood for truth, and striven
'Gainst the gates of Tyranny.
I have tumbled the Midian chariot,
I have snapped the Philistine's cord
I have trod the dark-red vintage
Of the winepress of the Lord.

"For you, for all, my daughter,
I have stood through the storm and night;
For both I have belted harness—
Gone forth to the stress of fight.
The edge and the flame I have suffered,
I have made our kinship true;
I have asked no aid of your sword arm,
But that you yield my due.

"If, now, your honor calls you—
Nor shall that call prove vain!—
Shrink not, O favored daughter,
From the path of blood and pain.
In the name of that fair freedom
For which we plighted, stand,
Strike, for the cause is holy—
Strike with the mailed right hand!"

Adequate Diet: Continuing our studies in practical every-day useful diet, we find in the Department Bulletin two more articles which every family should carefully study in connection with the two previously given in these columns.

"It is very hard for a housekeeper to know exactly how much of each of the food substances or nutrients her family needs or exactly how much of each she is giving them. The exact amount which each person needs depends upon age, sex size, and amount of work done with the muscles. An elderly person, or one of quiet habits, needs less food than a vigorous one; a large person more than a small one; a man more than a woman; grown persons more than children; and a farmer working in the hayfield, a mechanic or a football player more than a man who sits at his desk all day.

In order to calculate exactly how much starch, sugar, fat, protein, etc., (or, what is equivalent to this, how much protein and energy) the family needs, one would have to know exactly how much muscular work each member was performing and also exactly how much of the different nutrients each food contained and exactly how much each person would eat. This, of course, would mean a great deal of figuring. Fortunately, such exactness is not necessary in ordinary life. If a little too much or too little of one nutrient is provided at a single meal or on a single day, a healthy body does not suffer, because it has ways of storing such a surplus and of using its stored material in an emergency. The danger would come if the diet taken week in and week out always provided too much or too little of some one nutrient. Against this danger the housekeeper can more easily protect her family.

Habit and custom help greatly because they usually are based on what the experience of generations has proved is wise and healthful, though, of course, there are bad habits and outgrown customs in food as in every thing else. Good food habits, it must be remembered, include more than cleanliness and order in everything that has to do with food and meals and leisurely ways of eating. Equally important are a liking for all kinds of wholesome foods, even if they have not always been used in ones' home or neighborhood, and eatin reasonable amounts, without being either greedy of over-dainty. Every effort should be made to train children in such good food habits. If older people have not learned them, they too should try to do so, for such things are very important not only to health but also to economy. To refuse to eat some wholesome dish simply because one is not accustomed to it may prevent the use of some very desirable and economical food. To feel that there is any virtue in providing more food than is needed shows poor taste as well as poor economy.

The health and appearance of the family are a good test of the wholesomeness of their diet. If they are strong, well developed for their ages, free from ailments, and full of energy and ambition, one may safely say their food agrees with them. But if they are listless, and ailing or not as well developed either physically or mentally as they should be, and if a competent physician finds that there is no special disease to account for these bad symptoms, a mother may well ask herself if the food is right and if not, how she can make it so.

Do you wear hosiery that fits loosely and wrinkles at the ankles and toes?—unsightly and uncomfortable.

Choice Recipes

Pour a cup of boiling water over a heaping tablespoon of pulverized coffee in a bag of cloth over a strainer. Cook in this three rounding teaspoons of granulated tapioca until it dissolves, stirring often; then pouring the whole over two well beaten eggs, and cooking to the boiling point. Add a pinch of salt and a teaspoon of vanilla, then pour into the moulds. A little cream may be cooked in it to soften the flavour. Serve with plain or whipped cream, either of which multiplies its daintiness by two.

CASSEROLE OYSTER PIE.

Brown minced onion in two tablespoons of flour, stir till blended, then add half a pint of water; cook until thickened; add one pint of oysters with their liquor and season with paprika, salt, and one teaspoon of kitchen bouquet, remove at once from the fire; line individual casseroles with plain pastry and bake; cool slightly; fill with oyster filling, and cover with a lattice cover of the paste; brown in a quick even and serve hot.

SCOTCH POTATOES.

One quart of medium sized potatoes, one quart of medium sized onions, one cup milk, one fourth cup of bread crumbs, one teaspoon of butter, one teaspoon salt, one eighth teaspoon paprika. Wash and pare potatoes and onions; put both in saucepan and cover with boiling water, and one teaspoonful salt; boil for fifteen minutes, drain, put into bakedish, alternating an onion, then a potato, pour over the milk, sprinkle with breadcrumbs; add the butter and a dash of paprika; put in oven and bake twenty to twenty-five minutes. Serve in the dish in which they are baked.

Bean Loaf.

Many people are using beans these days to reduce the meat bill. Here is a method of adding nourishment and taste to a bean dish without much extra expense. Take two cupfuls of cooked beans and press them through a sieve. Season this bean pulp with one-quarter teaspoon of salt and one-eighth teaspoon of pepper. Then add one-half cupful of grated cheese and mix well together. Cook one tablespoonful of chopped onion and the same of chopped green pepper in one tablespoon of butter for several minutes, but not until they are brown. Add to the bean pulp and the cheese. Knead the mixture well for several minutes, then shape it into a roll, place it in a greased pan and bake. Baste occasionally with butter melted in boiling water. Serve the bean loaf with a well seasoned tomato sauce.

Flank Steak With Tomatoes.—One steak skinned and scored, three or four onions, four slices bacon and quart jar tomatoes cooked and seasoned as for table. Line earthen crock with bacon, lay in half of steak covered with sliced onions, salt and pepper, fold over other half, repeat onions and seasoning and pour over all the quart of tomatoes. Cover and bake one and one-half hours.

PRUNE PUDDING.

One-half pound prunes, two cupfuls cold water, one cupful sugar, one tablespoonful lemon juice, one-quarter lemon rind, one inch of stick cinnamon, one-third cupful cornstarch, one and a half cupfuls of boiling water. Wash the prunes, then soak them in cold water, over night if possible. Cook until tender, then remove the stones and add the sugar, lemon rind, stick cinnamon and boiling water. Cook slowly for ten minutes. Mix the corn starch with just enough cold water to make a smooth paste which will pour easily. Add the prune mixture and cook for five minutes. Remove the stick cinnamon, add the lemon juice and blend well, then pour into moulds which have first been rised out of cold water. Set aside in a cool place to stiffen. Serve with either plain of whipped cream.

SALMON CHOPS.

One tablespoonful butter; two table spoonfuls flour, one cupful milk, one teaspoonful salt, a speck of pepper, one cupful bread crumbs, dried, and one can of salmon. Melt the butter in a saucepan, add the flour and stir until smooth. Next add the milk and cook until the mixture thickens and is smooth. Add the seasonings and blend well. Remove the salmon from the can and drain it from the oil in which it was canned; then remove any bits of skin or bones that may be in it Add the crumbs and sauce to the salmon and blend all well together When well mixed, shape into chops, roll in flour; then place a small stick of macaroni (cooked) in the end of the chop to represent the bone, and cook in deep hot fat until delicately browned. Serve as a meat dish with the vegetable dishes.

FLASH BY BIG GUNS

Fortune Awaits the Man Who Invents Flashless Guns

Both the French and the German armies have been trying for years to discover how to make a gun that shall be not merely noiseless, but shall emit no flash. After dark two observers, by watching the time, can, with accurate chronometers having luminous dials, discover precisely the position of an enemy battery, or three observers, regardless of time, can do the same by grouping their observations. And this merely by the flash of the guns. German inventors succeeded by adding a minute quantity of alkaline salts to their powder in diminishing the flash, but they found that in proportion as they suppressed the flash they increased the smoke. Other substances added to the powder for this purpose have been vaseline, alkaline soaps, barium, and aluminum. None was successful. The French tackled the problem as a mechanical rather than a chemical one. A gun is really only an explosion motor, and it seemed that there ought to be a way of muffling its sounds and its flash as those of other such motors are muffled. It was not until 1909, when Maxim invented his silencer, that the problem seemed on the way to solution. Many other silencers, most of which suppress much of the light as well as the sound, have been invented since then, but none is believed to be a practical success in warfare.

Strenuous Work Soon Tells On You

Business Men and Breadwinners the Victims of Nervous Exhaustion

When worry is added to overwork, men soo nbecome the victims of nervous exhaustion — neurasthenia — the doctor calls it. Some have no reserve strength in their systems to bear the strain; others overtax what strength they have. If you find that you are nervous and not sure of yourself, that you sleep badly and wake up tired and aching, your nerves are out of order. Other signs are inability to take proper interest in your work; your appetite is fickle; your back feels weak, and you are greatly depressed in spirits. One or more of these signs mean that you should take prompt steps to stop mischief by nourishing the nerves with the food they thrive on, namely, the rich, red blood made by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills have cured thousands of cases of nervous disorders, including nervous prostration, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance and partial paralysis. Here is an example. Mr. P. H. Callan, a well known business man in Coleman, P.E. I., says: "I owe my present health, if not life itself, to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had always been an active man, and when I began to run down in health paid little attention to it as I thought it only a temporary weakness. As time passed, however, I found myself growing worse and consulted a doctor, who said that I was not only badly run down, but that my nervous system was badly shattered. I lost flesh, my appetite was poor, I slept badly and notwithstanding the doctor's treatment grew so weak that I had to leave my business and was confined to the house. Time went on and I was steadily growing weaker and my friends were all greatly alarmed for my condition. In this condition I was strongly recommended to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as the doctor's medicine was not helping me I decided to do so. By the time that I had used three boxes I could tell that they were helping me. When I had taken eight boxes of the pills I felt able to attend to my business again, and people were surprised to see me out. I continued the use of the pills until I had taken twelve boxes, by which time I was feeling as well as ever I did, and was being congratulated by all my friends on my full restoration to health. I feel now that if I had used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at the outset I would not only have saved much money spent in doctor's bills, but would have had renewed health sooner. I cannot speak to highly of this medicine, and would recommend it to every man who feels weak, nervous or run down."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cts a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., of from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EVERLASTING REMINDER

France Makes Monumental Record of Wrecked Art

The French Beaux-Arts has made photographic records of the wrecked cathedrals, blown up churches, castles, chateaux, public buildings and old architectural relics which the Kultur hated to leave standing. They are a magnificent set of albums of the most expensive large-sized carbon-prints, prepared by the Beaux-Arts itself! It is made, they say, for an American millionaire and university patron, who has been a friend to France and desires to own a monumental record of these irreparable losses to the cultured world. Beside Coucy and the Cathedral of Laon in their beauty, will be seen what German hate has left them.

"Conscientious" Objectors

A correspondent writing to a London paper says:—Is it not about time that the protection afforded to the so-called "conscientious" objector should be withdrawn. Men are returned to the fighting line with as many as four and five wound stripes, and even the discharged men who bore the brunt of the fighting at Mons and elsewhere are re-examined, while these "C.O." skulkers are kept under a glass case.

The enemy states that the number of civilians killed at Bucharest by Zeppelin bombs exceed 2,000.

IRELAND WANTS NO GERMAN SALVATION

Misdeeds in Belgium Sent Religious Race into British Regiments—An Officer's Opinion

An Irish officer's letter from Dublin to friends in the United States has been published as follows:—At the beginning of the war many of us said, "It is not our war." Yet at any time had Casement landed in Ireland at the head of German troops, his bitterest opponents in the field would have been those who now sympathize sentimentally with what they call "a martyred people." They would have resented the outsiders. But now the sight of a Prussian soldier would send the wildest Irish "rebel" instantly at his throat. Not even the most rabid Sinn Feiner would range himself, if he were really given the chance, under the banner of the army that ravaged Belgium and France, that murdered babies and outraged women. In those crimes lies the secret of the change of Irish hearts.

Filled the Regiments

To no nation in the world does its religion appeal more than to Catholic Ireland. To no man on God's earth does the purity of woman mean more than to the Irishman. And the tales of desecrated churches and slaughtered priests, the horrible revelations of the violation of nuns, sent out to fight for the British empire tens of thousands of Irishmen who in peace were "rebels." The "rebel" forgot his sentimental grievances against England, and, indeed, he began to wonder what they were, after all. Of the Germans hitherto he had scarcely ever heard. But now he knew them, knew them as a nation of brutal men, of desecrators. Then he and his fellows filled the Munsters, the Dublins, the Connaught Rangers. He went into battle singing the rebel song, "God Save Ireland." But he sang it by the side of English troops and bared his bayonet against German breasts.

Only One Course Open

Who could doubt us? How could it be otherwise? To us Irish Catholics there could be only one possible attitude towards the known destroyer of Catholic treasures, the murderer of priests, the profaner of Catholic churches. We could not be false to our history, to our faith.

Our Irish sisters had brought us from Flanders the cherished flag of the Irish Brigade. Long years ago it had flown in battle beside the Lilies of France, of that France that had sheltered our exiles and now called to us to save. Could we refuse her? Catholic Belgium law bleeding under the feet of German butchers. Could we do aught but spring to her aid? And all but a few of Ireland are with us to-day. A handful of misguided fanatics beguiled a couple of thousand ignorant peasants and poverty-stricken working men from the slums of Dublin into a mad revolt. Yet the Germans quote it as proof of Ireland's sympathy with their cause!

SOLDIER'S PAY-BOOK

"Army Book 64" is Tommy's Most Valued Possession

One of Tommy's most valued possessions on active service is his pay-book. Covered in brown linen, four inches wide by six deep, it is—in official language—Army Book 64. Entered inside are his name, number, regiment, religion, date of enlistment, age on enlistment, particulars of any inoculations or vaccinations, and, most important of all from his point of view, his rate of pay. The last is naturally liable to fluctuation; he may be promoted or reduced in rank, and his pay thereby affected. Two pages of the book are therefore reserved to record any such happening. The bulk of the volume's sixteen pages is devoted to the entry of payments he receives. First comes the date—he sometimes draws no cash for a month—then the place, usually described as "In the field." The amount is next entered, followed by the signature of the officer who hands over the money.

BISMARCK LOST FAITH

Decided Absolution was Only Way to Govern Germans

Bismarck, the Iron Chancellor, who above all men is the incarnation of the autocratic and Prussianizing tendency of modern Germany, began life a republican at heart and prophesied that Germany would eventually become a republic. In the floodtide of the success that welded the German States into an empire under a Prussian monarch, he said that he still believed a republic the ideal form of government. But Prussian blood and upbringing, together with a conviction that only under a monarchy could Germany become a great power in the world, stifled such beliefs and swerved him steadily toward absolutism. Eventually he put himself on record as imbued with the conviction that there could be no free Germany, that Germans could be made to think and fight together only if they had dynasties to revere.

India's Loyalty Firmly Based

The Maharaja of Bikanir, speaking in London while on leave from active service, said:—"Those who say that India is held by the sword do a grave injustice both to Great Britain and to India. British rule in India rests on firmer foundations. It is based on the principles of justice, equity and fair play. In the process of a constructive, healthy evolution it is inevitable that differences should arise; but these are not more than a family quarrel, to be settled between the parent country and the younger members of the Imperial household."

Best-Known Regimental Motto

Probably the most famous of regimental mottoes is that of the Black Watch, the ever famous 42nd Highlanders, who have upheld the fame of the Empire in every quarter of the globe. It is "Nemo me impune lacessit" (Nobody attacks me with impunity), a boast the regiment has made good against the Huns.

Kisses and rumors go from month to month.

Economy

Many women think they are saving money by buying cheap tea, forgetting that it is not the cost per pound but the cost per cup that determines a tea's economy.

You may pay 5 or 10 cents more per pound for Red Rose Tea than for common tea. But because Red Rose Tea is a blend of Indian-Assam teas with Ceylons, consisting of the choice tender shoots and buds—the parts of the tea plant that yield the largest amount of liquor and the finest flavor—one-third less is required in the pot to make the same number of cups.

The cost per cup between Red Rose Tea and common tea is then practically the same. But the flavor—what a difference!

And this distinctive and delightful flavor and rich strength is protected by the Red Rose sealed package. No air, odors or dust can get in to injure Red Rose Tea's splendid quality and economy.

Rules of Health Worth Heeding

There are four things which have a great deal to do with health, and which should be borne in mind at all times:

First, fresh air. We are built to breathe air. The air supplies the blood with oxygen, without which the blood dies. Pure air is hard to obtain in shops and factories. Usually at best it is usually loaded with dust. At home a workman can usually get fresh air by keeping his windows open. The average man needs about eight hours sleep. If a man sleeps with pure air blowing over his face he gets fresh oxygen without dust or gas for eight hours, or one third of the day at least.

REST IMPORTANT.

Second, sufficient rest. Eight hours' sleep, except on exceptional occassions, will do more to keep a man well, than all the drugs known. Try it, combined with fresh air, but keep well covered up. Keep your head cold but your feet warm.

GOOD FOOD.

Third, good food. Not pies, cakes and doughnuts, but—(a) Meat, fish and potatoes. (b) Plenty of bread and butter. (c) Plenty of rice, spaghetti—especially when combined with cheese—and the cereal breakfast foods, and (d) green vegetables, and fruit. A little sugar is good, more than a little is bad.

Fourth, cleanliness. Wash your body once a day. A cold bath or sponge in the morning followed by a quick, brisk rub with a coarse towel will make you feel better all day. It will keep you clean, too, although a hot soak in the tub with plenty of soap followed by a cold shower should be added at least once a week. If you follow these very simple rules you will feel better and work better and have little sickness.

KEEP HAPPY.

Look out upon the world, if you can, with serene countenance. Keep the tiny frown away if you value a pleasing expression. Smile if you will, but don't overdo it, for crow's feet" is the price you will pay for the privilege.

PROHIBITION FOR B. C.

Premier Would Bring in a Bill, But Cabinet is Divided.

VICTORIA, May 10.—Headed by Sir Charles Tupper, who was their chief spokesman, a deputation of returned soldiers met the provincial executive and presented their views on the prohibition issue. They urged that no action be taken by the Government until specific charges were made and an investigation was carried out. Premier Brewster told them that the Government was now waiting enquiry advices from London. It is reported that the prohibition question was before caucus Tuesday evening.. The Premier and Hon. John Oliver are in favour of bringing down a bill, but otherwise there is strong feeling in the Cabinet and among the private members that there should be compromise legislation allowing light beers, wines, etc., with the bar abolished and no treating.

WHO KNOWS?—FATHER.

Nobody knows where the money goes,
Nobody knows, nobody knows!
Frills and frocks,
Silks and smocks,
A bit of a feather,
A new dab of leather,
A ravishing hat,
A sporty cravat,
Some powder, some cream,
A gown that's a dream—
But nobody knows where the money goes.
Nobody knows that it goes for clothes,
Nobody knows, oh, nobody knows—
But—father!

Wounded Prisoner Accuses Germans

CITES DOCTOR'S TORTURES

Jumped on Weight Attached to Shattered Leg—Flatly Obliged to Amputate the Limb.

From L. D. Cardy of Port Arthur, Ontario, a private in the Canadian overseas forces, now crippled through the loss of a leg, has been received a statement of his experiences as a wounded prisoner of war in Germany, as follows:

On Sunday, April 25, 1915, the Germans had surrounded us, and about 6 p.m. I was hit in the leg by what I believe was a "dumdum." It split when it hit the bone and shattered the whole thigh. I managed to crawl to a ditch, where I must have slept about twenty-four hours.

On Tuesday about noon two Germans picked me up and laid me on the side of the ditch, so you can guess I was stiff with the cold. Toward dusk I was laid on a canvas slung on a pole, and carried back of the lines to a dressing station. Here a splint was fixed to my leg and strapped to a tretcher. Then the British started to shell and one shell hit the side of the building.

I was then carried over two or three lines of trenches and wire entanglements (there appeared to be no paths through) to a distributing centre, where, after a long wait till the morning, I was put on a train and sent to Ledgehem in Belgium, arriving there about midnight Wednesday, the 28th.

During all this time I had nothing to eat, that is from Sunday until Thursday. The next morning the doctor and a student set the bone and put on a proper splint, but did not clean and dress the wound except to put a piece of cotton wool on to absorb the drainage. On the following day two officers visited me and questioned me as to the strength and positions of the Canadians. I guess Sam Hughes wished in his dreams for an army as big as I told those Germans he had.

It was about three or four days after that before I had a new dressing on my leg, then it was merely to change the cotton. A change of cotton every few days was all the doctoring I had for six weeks.

Grudged Him One Good Meal.

Just a little incident to show the difference in nature of the Saxons and Prussians. At one noon meal the Sister was going to give me meat to eat. Two Prussians who were in that ward thought I should not have it. A Saxon who had been a waiter in hotels in England, was in the next bed to me. He sided with me, and talked down those Prussians; so I got one good meal. But two days after I was shifted to another hospital.

A young doctor was in charge of this hospital, and he tried to heal my wound, though he wasn't very gentle when he had me on the table. Three pieces of bullet were taken out of my leg. While in this hospital I saw some of the gentlemanly acts the Germans keep specially for Belgium women.

After two weeks in this hospital I was taken back to the hospital I was in before, cased in plaster of paris from the waist down, and taken in an ambulance to Isegham for shipment to Germany. This was on June 21. I thought my troubles were over then. It was a false hope, though.

In the hopital where I was taken were about twenty English soldiers. It seemed almost homelike to get with a bunch I could talk with. But with every sweet there is sure to be a bitter, and it was so here. In charge of this ward was a German half-caste doctor. Cruelty was an art with him; five or six fellows died under his treatment. We envied those fellows their luck at that time which will show you the unhappy state we lived in.

A little of what life was like under that fellow: The plaster was taken off me soon after I got to this place. That is not a pleasant sensation when a smashed leg is inside it. Then the 'beast' got a pair of wire cutters (that is what they looked like,) jabbed them into my leg and cut great lumps of bone out; not only once but several times a week. I was not the only fellow who suffered this; I watched this half-caste while he cut six pieces out of one fellow at one operation, and one of the pieces was as big as two of my fingers. The fellow brought it back with him for a souvenir.

Having so much bone taken from the leg caused it to shrink, so a weight was suspended from the leg, over a pulley on the bottom of the bed. Three or four of us were fixed this way, and several times I was pulled over the foot of the bed by this "being" jumping on the weight. I have had as many as five bricks soaked with water hanging to my leg at one time. One morning when the orderlies carried me to the stretcher the half-caste was smiling so I thought I'd never seen him look so happy.

"Have you pains?" he asked; I said, "No."

"Then I will not give you pains," he answered.

A needle-pointed syringle was the first instrument he used, trying to get matter from my leg. Things could not have been right, I guess, for one fellow masked me and others held my arms and legs while he slit my leg with a knife. The cut was six or eight inches long and down to the bone. No pretence was made to put me to sleep. In fact, I can I only recollect two occasions when he drugged a man before operating.

About a week after this the hospital was visited by an officer who must have held a high rank, to judge by the gold braid he wore. One of the sisters in the ward spoke to him about us. The bandages were taken off a few "cases" for him to see; and the half-caste got fired out. I got in wrong for laughing at him.

Four of us were sent away to be "X-rayed," and a few days afterward I was carried into the operating room, where the big officer showed me the photoplate of my leg. He said, "Your leg must come off or you will die." Can you imagine what your thoughts would be if you were told to take your choice?

My leg was taken off next day, July 10, and for about a week I did not want to live, but I was looked after very well and began to pull around. It was three weeks or so after the operation that the nursing staff of the hospital was changed. The sister who looked after the row of beds I was in cellent English. She was exceedingly was a young girl who could speak exgood to the three of us who were still in hospital, (the others had been sent to the prison camp in Germany). I asked this sister one day why she treated us so well. She said she had two brothers (officers) fighting, and perhaps they might get wounded and captured as we were; then she would like to think that they were being treated as she tried to treat us. That girl certainly treated us the best way possible for any one to have done.

On Oct 1 I was sent to Germany to the prison hospital at Limburg, (Lahn,) near Frankfort. It was an awful journey, and finished up with a ride from the station to the camp in furniture removal vans, we lying on straw on the floor.

Where Casement Operated.

This camp was the one where Roger Casement tried to form his "Irish Brigade." There were about 3,000 Irish soldiers interned there, but they had not much love for him. I was not there at the time he was there, but I was told of him and what he did, or rather tried to do. During the winter of 1914 (these fellows were captured during the retreat from Mons) these soldiers were kept in fields, with no shelter from rain and without blankets. The food given them was barely sufficient to keep them alive.

In the spring Casement visited the camp, (huts had been built then), but, not getting the attention he expected, starvation was tried again. Then the fellows tried to handle him, but the guards intervened. Altogether he got fifty-two recruits, if I remember right, and these were fellows of the kind who are generally classed "no good." Still, it must be remembered that starvation is a hard thing to fight against.

During the two months I was at Limburg there was never a day that I can say my hunger was satisfied. The Canadian Red Cross used to send two loaves of bread to our fellows in Germany every two weeks. Sometimes this bread would be a long time on its journey; eight weeks I've known it to be; the usual time for it was three weeks. Just what it was like by this time you can imagine. Believe me, I've laid in bed in the middle of the night and eaten as much as half a loaf and then put the rest away for fear I would be more hungry still next day.

A parcel of clothing came to me, too, from the Red Cross, but I was to be exchanged at that time and I gave it to the other fellows. There were six or eight Canadian soldiers at Limburg, and they fed me all they could. I surely needed feeding; I was not strong enough to sit up in bed.

Prisoners in Germany need all the sympathy and every comfort it is possible to send them. They live about the most miserable life a man can live. The only news of the outside world and the way the war is progressing reaches them through fresh prisoners, and the man who is fighting knows less about the general run of the war than the man who can read the paper.

I shall never forget the reception we all got at Rosendale, the first Dutch town we arrived at one the exchange route. It was like a glimpse of heaven after such treatment as we were used to. Seventy-odd of us were exchanged. We were about the sorriest looking bunch that ever gathered together. We all had either legs arms or eyes missing, or else were paralyzed or consumptives.

On Dec. 1 I left Lamburg and arrived in London Dec. 7, 1915, to end some of the worst troubles that ever a fellow passed through.

If any ladies of the Red Cross read this, I would like them to know that the fellows in Germany greatly appreciate all that the ladies do to help them. I offer my gratitude for the many kindnesses they showed me.

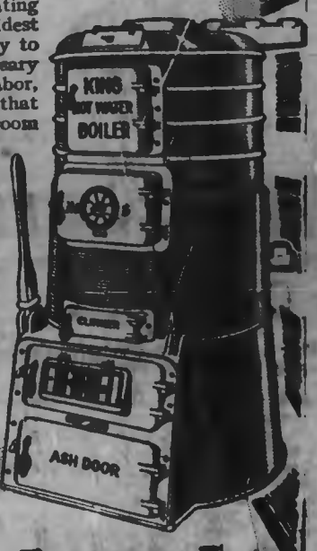
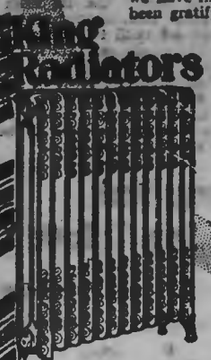
KING Hot Water Boiler

You know it is false economy to continue to use a Heating system that does not keep your house warm on the coldest day. The extravagant cost of excessive fuel necessary to keep a poor heating system up to its work is an unnecessary expense and such a heating system is a cause of needless labor, inconvenience and worry. Your health, too, demands that your house be given a steady warmth from room to room throughout the winter season. Zero weather is the test of any heating system. In thousands of homes where we have installed the King Boiler and Radiators, there has been gratifying, cosy comfort, morning, noon and night, in severest blizzards. It is all due to the quick heating, fuel-saving devices of the King Boiler and to the radiating power of the King Radiators.





What They Cost

Write us for our literature, and we will arrange to give you free of charge, an estimate of cost of a right size King boiler, radiators, etc. The King Boiler can be purchased through the trade anywhere in Canada and quick service is assured our patrons.

"I SPY STRANGERS."

Formula by Which Commons Was Cleared for Sekret Session.

LONDON, May 10.—The secret session of the Commons was begun after the questions had been asked, the galleries being cleared.

There is a simple rule under which the House may be cleared of strangers. A member of the Government rises in his place and utters the formula, "I spy strangers," whereupon officials clear the galleries and seal the doors. Strangers also are asked to leave the lobbies and precincts of the House.

Members do not take any oath of secrecy, but could be proceeded against under the Defence of the Realm Act should they disclose secrets. The attendance of members at to-day's session was very large.

This Irishman on Sunday heard a clergyman preach on the judgment-day. The priest told of the hour when the trumpet shall blow and all peoples of all climes and all ages shall be gathered before the seat of God to be judged according to the deeds done in the flesh. After the sermon he sought out the pastor and he said,—"Father, I want to ask you a few questions touching on what you preached about to-day. Do you really think that on the judgment day everybody will be there?"

The priest said: "That is my understanding."

"Will Cain and Abel be there?"

"Undoubtedly."

"And David and Goliath—will they both be there?"

"That is my information and belief."

"And Brian Boru and Oliver Cromwell will be there?"

"Assuredly they will be present."

"And the A.O.H.'s and A.P.A.'s?"

"I am quite positive they will all be there together."

"Father," said the parishioner, "there'll be little judgin' done the first day!"—Boston News Bureau.

Would Lie Awake For Hours Unable to Sleep—Cure Came With the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Peterborough, Ont., March 7.—These are trying times on people who are naturally nervous and easily worried and excited. On every hand you hear of nervous prostration and nervous collapse. Sometimes the result of overwork and the worry of business cares and again on account of the depressing influence of war news and the anxiety for those who are in danger.

Never has there been so great demand for treatment to restore the exhausted nerves and never has Dr. Chase's Nerve Food so thoroughly proven its efficiency in this regard.

Mrs. C. French, 104 Lansdowne street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness, frequent headaches, and indigestion. For many years I was troubled with a twitching or fidgety feeling about my limbs after retiring, causing me much loss of sleep. If wakened up out of my first five minutes, I would lie awake for sleep, even had I been asleep only hours and could not get to sleep again. Any sudden noise or a door slamming would set my nerves going and I would fear that something dreadful was going to happen. I had tried different remedies for this trouble, but without success. A friend asked me one day why I didn't try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I thought I could at least give it a trial. I secured some and commenced using them, and found they benefited me so much that I have taken fully a dosen boxes. My nervousness or fidgety feeling in the limbs is entirely cured. I can now eat and sleep well. I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food strongly, and would advise any one suffering from nervous trouble of any kind to use them according to directions."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

LUCY'S BRAVERY.

An Awakening of Love and a Race Through a Storm.

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS.

Lucy Hamilton, with Arthur Shaw standing by her side, watched John Strong as he waved his hand and shot out into the lake in his swift motor-boat. When Strong was well out in the lake he stood up in the boat and threw a kiss to Lucy.

The girl turned to Shaw with a little laugh. There was heightened color in her cheeks.

"He's always doing something foolish like that," she exclaimed.

Shaw scowled a little as he looked after the retreating boat. He turned to Lucy suddenly.

"I believe you're in love with Strong," he declared.

Lucy exclaimed indignantly at this.

"How many times have I told you," she cried, "that I'm not in love with any man? I think both you and Mr. Strong are fine, splendid young fellows, and I like you both immensely, but as for being in love—pshaw, that's another matter entirely!"

"I'm infernally jealous," Shaw replied, with relief in his tone, "and I know that I haven't any right to be. But I'm head over heels in love with you, Lucy, and I hate to think of any other man winning you."

They had turned and were walking toward the hotel, which stood a short distance back on the bluff overlooking the lake. Surely, Lucy thought, nothing could be franker than Shaw's avowal, and yet the avowal did not particularly thrill her. Instinctively she felt that she would have been more thrilled if Strong had talked to her in this manner.

From this point Lucy firmly guided Shaw's conversation into other channels. They reached the hotel veranda. Almost immediately Shaw was called by business into the hotel, and Lucy was left alone. Half abstractedly she watched the clouds forming in the west for a storm. Her thoughts were on the two men. She did not realize how long she had been sitting there until, with a start, she was brought to a sense of the situation by the sudden spasmodic falling of rain.

Lucy jumped to her feet. It became pitch dark with surprising suddenness. As she prepared to race for the hotel entrance the sound of some one talking in the hotel near the open window by which she was standing caught her attention.

"You're sure there's no one out there—hadn't we better put down the window?" came a voice—that of Shaw.

"No," said another man; "the storm has driven every one in, and it's stifling here as it is."

"All right then," said the other. "My man on the other side of the lake will see to it that no boats are in condition to cross the lake tonight, and telephonic communication is cut. Consequently Strong can't return—he can't vote his proxies at the directors' meeting tonight, and we have everything our own way. Gad, but I'll be glad to crush him!"

Lucy, shivering in the rain that dashed in upon her, caught the conversation before the resounding thunder peals made it impossible for her to hear everything above the storm. In a flash she understood that Shaw, the man whom she had thought she might love, was planning—had planned—to injure Strong. Evidently it was imperative for Strong to attend a directors' meeting in that hotel that night if he wished to save himself, and Shaw had seemingly made it impossible for him to be there.

In a moment Lucy's mind was made up as to her course of action. Heedless of her unprotected condition, she ran, guided by lightning flashes, down the wooden steps from the hotel to the landing pier. Here her own launch was moored. She cranked it quickly. The sound of some one tearing down the steps toward her made her work the faster. As she cast off she saw by a flash that the person was Shaw. He cried to her frantically:

"Don't go! Don't go!"

But Lucy merely smiled. In a few minutes she was out in the wave tossed lake. She did not fear pursuit. No other launch on that side of the lake was as big as hers, and none, she knew, could possibly overtake her. She revolved the situation in her mind. Evidently Shaw had glanced out of the hotel window at a time when the landscape was illumined by lightning, had seen her making for the boat-house, had surmised that she had overheard the conversation and then attempted to stop her.

Lucy turned on the electric searchlight. Powerful as it was, it pierced only a short distance through the gloom. By a little pocket compass she guided her course for the opposite landing. The waves buffeted her frightfully, the wind and rain tore her and lashed her cheeks, but still she kept on.

When about halfway across she began to ring the submarine signaling bell attached to the boat. Almost instantly she received an answer from the landing for which she was making. A few signals showed her that it was Strong and that he understood the situation. Then monotonously he began repeating three words—"I love you; I love you."

Even in the frightful gloom in the heart of the storm Lucy felt the blood course into her cheeks. Never before had Strong said these words to her.

"Stop! You must not say it," Lucy signaled.

"I will say it," came the answer. "I love you; I love you."

In a few moments Strong's signal changed.

"I can see your searchlight," he signaled. "Go slow."

Soon Lucy was able to make out the lights on the landing. A few moments more and she was almost up to the boathouse. She saw Strong standing on the extreme edge of the pier. Three husky men were standing idly near him in attitudes which presaged action. Frantically Strong waved at her. Lucy understood him and, instead of making for the landing, threw the steering wheel swiftly over. It was evident that should she make a landing the three men would not allow the boat to leave.

When the boat presented a broadside to the landing Strong suddenly leaped into the water. The men ran for him, but they were too late. He swam sturdily to Lucy and in a moment climbed over the side. Lucy set the nose of the boat for the home shore, and the little vessel forged into the darkness.

Strong held out his arms to Lucy.

"Dear heart!" he said.

"Don't; there's no time!" cried Lucy. "We must work if we are to get back. The wind's changed. It's dead against us. The waves are higher."

Even as she spoke the gasoline engine missed fire several times. Strong devoted his attention to it, while Lucy was kept busy at the wheel. For an eternity, it seemed to Lucy, they battled with the elements. Then dimly she saw the lights of the hotel.

"Put out your searchlight," said Strong, "and make a landing down there on the beach about 300 yards from the hotel. They'll be waiting for us at the dock."

Lucy obeyed him. At length they came near enough to the shore to drop anchor. Strong climbed over the side of the boat and, carrying Lucy, waded to the shore. In silence they toiled up the hill to the hotel and made their entrance unobserved through a side door.

Lucy ran to her room to secure warm, dry clothes, while Strong, wet and dishevelled as he was, went straight to the room where the directors were meeting.

An hour or so later, after the storm had subsided and the meeting was over, Strong and Lucy met on the veranda. No one was near them.

"You brought me back just in time," said Strong. Then he stretched out his arms. "I love you," he said.

"And I love you," replied Lucy as she resigned herself to his embrace.

Toole's Tears.

Sallies of almost childlike high spirits endeared the late J. L. Toole, the lifelong friend of Henry Irving, to all who knew him. On one occasion when the author of "Some Eminent Victorians" was spending a day in the innocent adventures which Toole was a genius in originating they went to the Tower, where they found themselves among a party of eager sightseers in the chamber where the crown jewels are disposed.

It was a woman who was explaining to the eager throng the history of the articles displayed. At the end of a long catalogue she said:

"And this is Anne Boleyn's crown."

Toole, apparently suddenly overcome, burst into a flood of tears and leaned against the wall in seemingly uncontrollable grief.

"Oh, sir," inquired the poor woman, in distress, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing! Nothing!" replied Toole in broken accents. "Don't mind me, but the fact is I have known the family so long."

DREAM OF SAVING RUDELY SHATTERED

ENTRY OF UNITED STATES INTO WAR ALTERS FINANCIAL CONDITIONS MAKING DEAL POSSIBLE.

MONTREAL, May 12. — When the Board of Control met on Wednesday, a communication was submitted by City Treasurer Arnoldi informing the members that the project authorized by the board for the redemption of $30,000,000 of city debentures, held in England, had fallen through. The city authorities had counted on reducing the city debt by about $5,000,000 by buying in the debentures in England at about 12 per cent. under their ordinary value and re-selling them in New York at the higher figure, a transaction made possible by war conditions. Because of the entry of the United States into the war the financial conditions have changed and the whole deal falls through.

In his communication to the board City Treasurer Arnoldi stated that it was with regret that he was obliged to inform them that the project for the conversion of a part of the civic debt in England had to be abandoned. All the details had been completed to the satisfaction of both sides interested, but at the last moment the Chancellor of the Exchequer of England had informed the City of Montreal, through the Morgan firm of New York, that he was unable for divers reasons, to get possession of the securities, delivery of which had been promised. The city treasurer added that the complete record of the negotiations was voluminous, and for the moment he thought it inopportune to enter into details. It would be the subject later of a more detailed report. City Treasurer Arnoldi concluded by assuring the board that he had with the aid of the Bank of Montreal, left nothing undone to bring the transaction to a successful issue, as it was one which had promised advantageous results to the City of Montreal.

NEW BRUNSWICK SPUDS BETTER THAN WESTERN

Local Growers Should Inquire For the Best Seed to Use.

BRANTFORD, May 10.— Writing to civic officials here, Prof. C. A. Zavitz of the Ontario Agricultural College urges the local men not to sell western potatoes for seed, but to sell New Brunswick Delawares, which have been found to succeed under Ontario conditions, where the western tubers failed.

The same advice should be heeded by local people who may not know from experience which is the better potato to plant. A gentleman called up the Examiner to-day and stated he knew of people who had brought western potatoes home with them for seed and the result was all small potatoes.

Ways and Means of Preparing the Soil For Production of Garden Produce. Irrigation is a Valuable Asset

The Quantity of Seed Required for Various Crops. Number of Plants Required Per Acre at Various Distances.

While it is somewhat expensive for one who has no greenhouse heated with steam those who have this advantage can handle their soil very easily. Some build a concrete pit close to the hotbed yard and have several one-inch pipes on the sides and from one side to another. These have small holes drilled in them six to eight inches apart on the under side of the pipe. The earth to be steamed is dumped into this pit and the steam turned on. Usually some sort of a covering is constructed to cover this pit. Live steam at from ten to twenty pounds pressure should be allowed to thoroughly heat the soil for an hour. The soil is then placed in the hotbeds or cold frames and used as soon as it has cooled sufficiently. Twenty-four hours will usually cool the soil if left in the open.

Another method used or treating the soil is to use an inverted galvanized pan. This can be set over the soil in the greenhouse, cold frame or in the open ground. For the frames a pan six feet by three feet can be used. This pan is driven down into the soil which has been dug over and when well down into the soil can be weighted. The steam can then be turned on. If the steam can be used at a pressure of twenty pounds, twenty minutes to half an hour will be sufficient time to obtain excellent results.

While many growers do not follow any of these methods of treating the soil, previous to planting the seed, those who do make it one of their spring operations and claim the cost of the operation is more than returned by the results. The claim for sterilized soil is that the seed will germinate sooner, the plants will grow stronger and more vigorously, and many of the diseases so common in young plant are overcome.

IRRIGATION.

To be in a position to command a sufficient supply of soil moisture at any time during the season for growing vegetables out of doors would make the vegetable grower practically independent of rainfall. Such a condition is most nearly secured by some form of watering by artificial methods. Water is necessary in the soil at all times during the growing season and many a gardener has had the misfortune to have his crops ruined by severe dry spells during July and August. Such crops as lettuce, celery, spinach suffer such a check during a dry spell that they never recover in many cases.

There are several methods of watering these crops artificially and they have proven themselves a boon to vegetable growers who have installed them. The most popular method is known as the Skinner System of Irrigation. There are several other systems patterned after this one and are practically the same. This method, in a few words, is applying water by means of elevated pipes placed at regular distances in the field, through which the water is forced. A nozzle set in the pipe helps to throw the water in a fine mist.

This form of irrigation has proven itself valuable to the vegetable grower in Ontario. Particularly in the vicinity of London, Ontario, several growers depend largely on irrigation for their early crops of fresh, crisp, well-grown vegetables.

Water Supply—It is imperative that a large supply of water is available before irrigation by any method should be attempted. A running stream or a pond of water is best, for they insure an unlimited supply. When these are not available a driven well can be used. In some cases water has been pumped one-half a mile to the garden to supply the necessary irrigation. As the water must be driven through the pipes at considerable pressure the water is usually pumped direct into the system by means of a gasoline engine or by the use of electric power where available. If so desired the water can be pumped into a reservoir and then carried from this into the system. Only in rare cases is it advisable to pump the water into an elevated tank depending on the elevation of the water for the pressure. It is much better to pump direct into the system.

Arrangement of Pipe—Pipes of ganvanized iron are supported on posts of various heights from three feet to eight feet in parallel rows over the field, fifty feet apart. Every three to four feet on the pipe is a patented brass nozzle which breaks the water into a fine spray. On the feeding end of the line is a patent turning device which permits the turning of the whole line of pipe at any angle desired. This allows for watering a space twenty-five feet wide on either side of the pipe line. In this turning device there is also a metal strainer which prevents any refuse becoming lodged in the nozzles.

Advantages of Watering—By irrigation the vegetable growers become free of drought conditions. The plants never receive a check and are grown to the best advantage. Watering can be carried on at any time of day or night, although Ontario growers prefer to water in late afternoon. The system can be started and only frequent turnings of the line are necessary. Plants can be matured more quickly by watering. Early outdoor crops can be ready for market a week or ten days earlier than those without water. This increases the return from the acreage planted because of higher prices for early crops. This form of irrigation has been used also for frost prevention. In the case of a crop of late tomatoes the crop was saved from ruin by an early fall frost by continually running the water over the vines and fruit throughout the night.

Cost—This system can be installed by any grower. The ordinary galvanized pipe can be cut and erected according to certain rules to overcome friction, etc. Holes for the brass nozzles can be drilled by hand with a small drill made for this purpose and the whole system placed on supports for an average cost of $120 per acre, exclusive of engine and pump. This may seem rather a high cost, but many growers claim to have paid for their system in two dry seasons by being able to sell first-class crops when the market was strong.

General Advice—Any vegetable grower installing this irrigation system should purchase an engine and pump adequate to handle a considerable acreage at the outset. Even though only one acre is covered with pipe a large engine and pump should be used. Many growers have had to throw away a small outfit with very little use when they increased their pipe lines.

Some growers prefer their pipe lines on short stakes three feet high and others advocate a cedar post or an inch and a quarter pipe eight feet high. The latter seems to be the more popular, because it allows for convenient cultivation close to the posts. High poles with cables for supporting the pipes are rarely used, because of the cost of erection and the danger of wind pressure swaying the pipe sufficient to break connection, etc.

In a liberated French town, General Mitvelle, at Noyon, receiving a bouquet from a little girl. The deliverance of Noyon from the Germans, who had occupied it since the first month of the war, was the beginning of the liberation of her invaded territory. Noyon is only about sixty miles from Paris, and the phrase, "The Germans are still at Noyon," had been a constant reminder to Parisians that the danger was not over Italy is strenuously adding to her navy all classes of ships, especially submarines and chasers. Photo shows a few under-sea boats on the stocks at one of the Government ship yards.

The victor in Palestine, General Sir Archibald Murray. On hearing of Sir Archibald Murray's recent victory near Gaza, the King sent him the following message: "The good news of the latest success of the troops under your command has been received by us at home with the greatest satisfaction. We are proud of the achievements of your force and of the assistance given to the Allied Armies. Convey to all ranks my hearty congratulations and confidence in their further efforts." Sir Archibald Murray is General Officer Commanding in Egypt.

Scientific listening with special drums and microphones. A French officer of engineers in a mine-gallery, detecting the sounds of German mining operations. Listening is a very delicate operation. It consists of detecting the direction, height and distance of the sounds heard. As a rule, listening is done by sappers trained specially. To obtain greater clearness, drums are used as well as special microphones. As soon as a prolonged silence on the part of the enemy is noticed after a period of rather hard work, the conclusion is that a chamber is being loaded and at once you charge your own mine.

The voice of the Dominions in the Empire's Councils. Members of the Imperial War Cabinet at Downing Street. A historic gathering assembled in Downing Street on March 20, for the first meeting of the Imperial War Cabinet. In the above group those seated in front are, from left to right: Sir Joseph Ward (New Zealand); Sir George Perley (Canada); General Smuts, (S. Africa); Sir Robert Borden (Canada); Mr. Walter Long (Colonial Secretary); Mr. W. F. Massey (New Zealand); Sir Edward Morris (Newfoundland); and Mr. J. D. Hazen (Canada). Among those behind are, on the extreme left, Sir S. P. Sinha (India); fifth from left: Mr. Austen Chamberlain (Secretary for India); and next to him, in uniform, the Maharajah of Bikanir (representing the Ruling Princes of India).

The inhabitants of the numerous French villages evacuated by the Germans on their retreat were naturally delighted to see the British troops and gave them the heartiest of welcomes. Scenes like those shown above have occurred in many places.

Italian motor-craft for hunting U-boats. A squadron of submarine chasers with guns mounted forward. Nets for the capture of submarines have been used, but their efficiency is not as great as in the more shallow waters, and the Italian navy operates in the Mediterranean. This defect has been made up by other measures such as chasers, aeroplanes, etc., which police the waters in search of their prey.

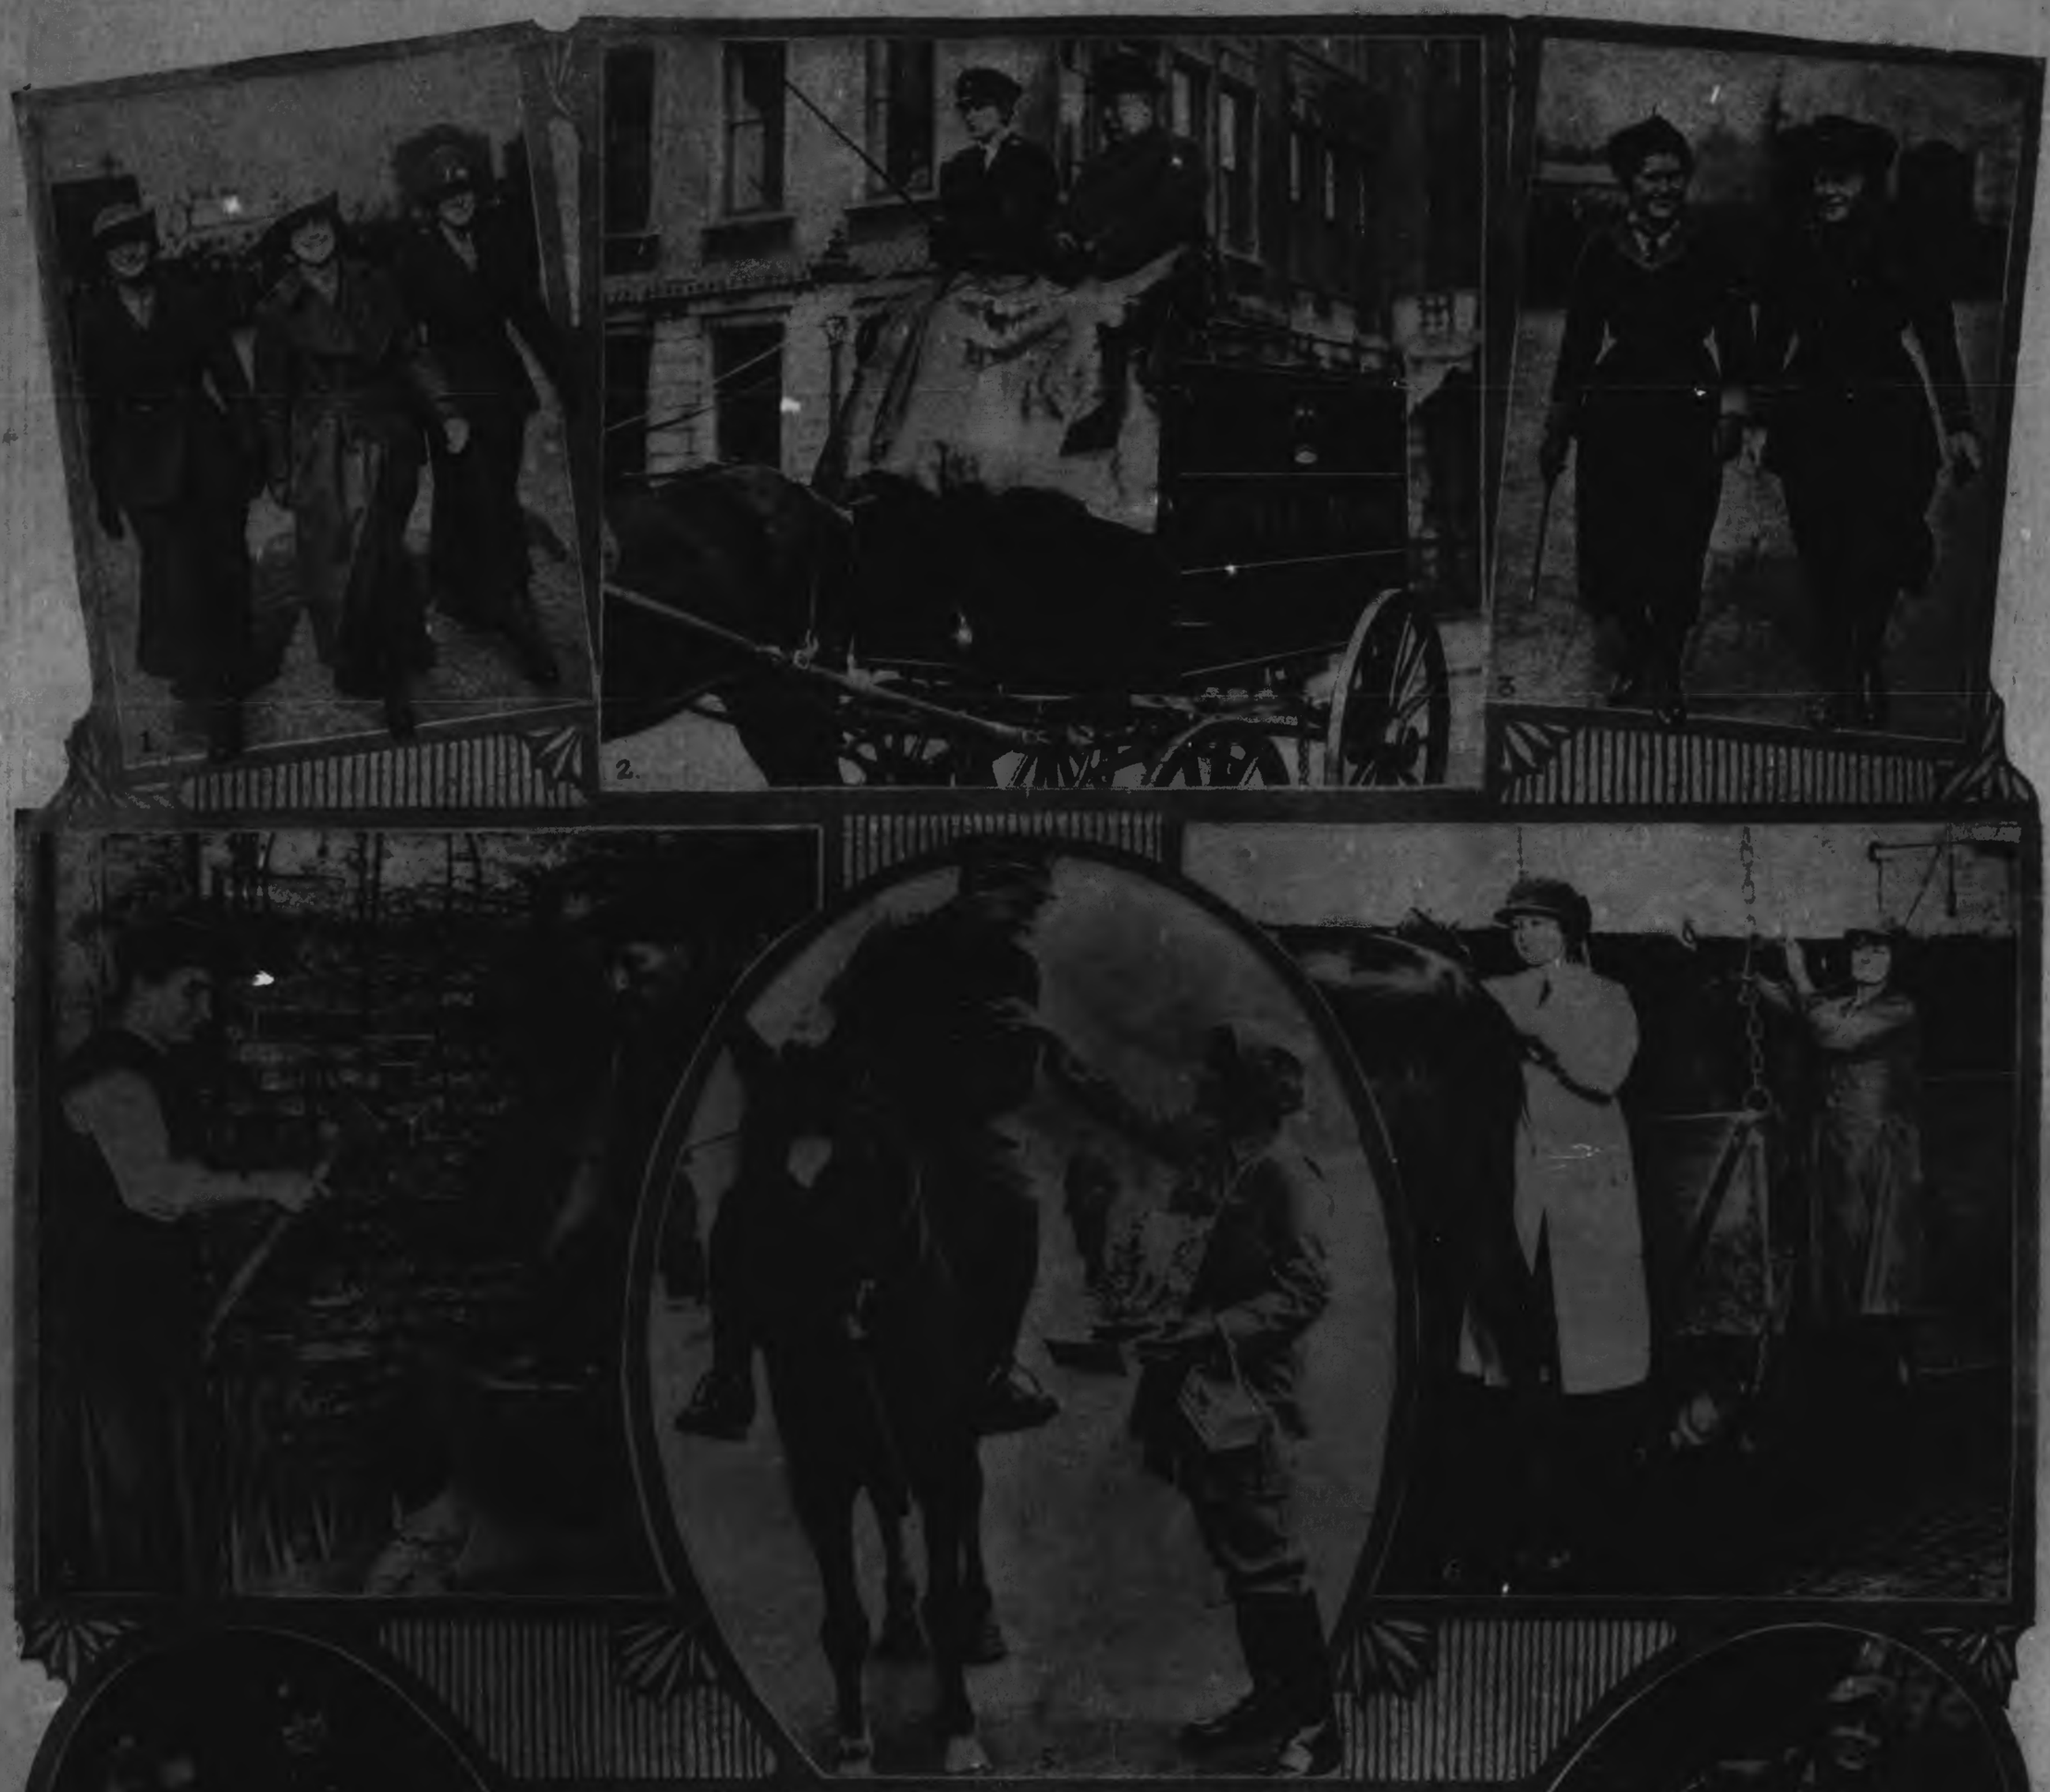
British Women Eager to Take the Place of British Tommies



1—Miss "Robert" goes on her beat.—Birkenhead's new women police have just begun their duties, acting as court doorkeepers and traffic managers at the crossings. It is unsettled whether a member of this force will be known as "P.C. Mary Smith," or "Policewoman Smith." A sergeant and constable going on duty.

3—Great Women's Service Rally.—The immense gathering at Albert Hall meeting of women workers was attended by the Queen. Here are two Auxiliary Force girls.

5—"Tommy" and the "Munitionette."—One of the many piquant incidents on "Women's Day," when pansies were sold by girl munition workers.

7—Ambulance Girls.—An eager interest marked the Women's Meeting which the Queen attended at Albert Hall. Members of the Women's Reserve Ambulance.

8—National Service for Women.—First photographs of women on the land. A willing girl pupil in breeches and rubber boots, bringing in the goat kids for the night.

- Sights in Redeemed France - European War Conditions in New York -

America experiencing European conditions. Women are now running elevators at the Park Avenue and Martha Washington Hotels in New York. Manager Brown says he is going to profit by the mistakes of British hotelkeepers in war time, and this is a beginning.

Much discussion has arisen over the maimed soldier problem. That it is rapidly losing all its difficulties is apparent from the reports of those in charge. France has done exceedingly well in this line, and the photograph shows a French soldier learning the carpenter's trade.

Here is another view typifying women workers. They are employed along with their elevator sisters as mentioned in a previous picture. Their duties consist of everything the male porter used to do, and for a while travellers had hopes that their luggage would receive kinder treatment, but no such luck. (Upper right.)

War news consists principally these days of incidents relating to the re-occupation of French territory, and of wonderful tales of peasants who have stuck to their homes even if it now boasts of no roof or else minus walls. Here is a view of a British entry into Peronne, where no Germans were found, except a couple of dummies. (To the left.)

The Cathedral in Bombarded Soissons.—This building has suffered like that of Rheims from the enemy guns, with its statues broken and windows destroyed. On March 22rd, the train service from the Gare du Nord, Paris to Soissons, was resumed, a sign that the French armies were reclaiming their land.

"Engage the Enemy." Uncle Sam's hat is now in the ring, and, "by jingo, look out for me." His merchant marine, in the shape of the S.S. Mongolia, has drawn first blood by striking a German U-boat. Now his fleet is going to relieve the British ships in patrol work, and one of them is here seen giving vent to her feelings.

One of the principal streets in Peronne after the evacuation of the town by the Germans. The placard left behind by the departing enemy reads, "Nicht angsten, nur wundern," meaning, "Do not grow angry—only wonder." This amazing sign greeted the entering forces of the British.

NEW ATTACKS BY BRITISH AND FRENCH OBJECTIVE GAINED EVERYWHERE SAYS HAIG

Hundreds Of Prisoners Taken By British In A New Drive

Attacks on Hindenburg Line in Neighbourhood of Bullecourt and Astride the Arras-Cambrai Road Are Successful Announces General Haig--French Penetrate German Lines At Several Points--New British Offensive in Mesopotamia.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official), May 12.—Fight all the way from south of Laon down to Alsace Lorraine was detailed in to-day's French official statement. Gains were achieved by General Nivelle's forces in penetrating the German lines north of Bezonvaux as well as at several points in the Ammertswiller sector of Alsace, the War Office said.

Around Chemin des Dames the artillery combat showed a slight slackening, the statement said. The French blew up a munitions depot in this section. At Juviancourt there was patrol fighting. In the regions south of Parguy and in the Champagne, west of the Cornillet Woods, the same style of fighting prevailed.

Around Verdun there was an artillery battle in the region of Avocourt, but without infantry actions.

"French detachments penetrated the German lines north of Bezonvaux," the statement concluded, "as well as at several points in Alsace, in the sector of Ammertzwiller, imprisoning many."

British Are Still Driving the Turks

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, May 12.—General Maude has opened an offensive in Mesopotamia. His British troops are still pushing back the Turks. An official statement to-day put the newly advanced British line at a point from sixty to eighty miles north of Bagdad.

"Since the second instant," the report says, "our mobile columns in the basins of the Shatt-El-Adhaim and Diala rivers have pressed the enemy back into the Jeb-El-Hamerin range."

PETROGRAD, May 12.—In the Duma meeting to-day Deputy Roditchoff referred to internal friction in pledging for domestic peace. "All honest Russians' hearts are with you," he declared in an impassioned address to the Duma officials. "Even your opponents, even those who speak against you. Don't weaken. Your names will be blessed as long as the Russian language is spoken."

NEW YORK, May 12.—Ten thousand American regulars under General John J. Pershing will be the first of United States fighting forces to go to France, according to plans which it was learned to-day are now practically complete.

LONDON (Bulletin), May 12.—Hundreds of prisoners were taken by British forces in a further advance to-day around Bullecourt, on the Arras-Cambrai Road and north of the Scarpe River, Field Marshal Haig reported.

At night and early this morning, he said, we made attacks on the Hindenburg line in the neighbourhood of Bullecourt and also astride the Arras-Cambrai road, and to the north of the Scarpe. We gained our objective at all points and took hundreds of prisoners.

Local fighting resulting in our favour, also took place during the night east of Lempire. Successful raids, in which we captured several prisoners, were made by us last night east of Ypres.

LONDON, May 12.—A German official statement received to-day declared that a British destroyer was sunk in Thursday's destroyer and cruiser engagement in the Channel. The British Admiralty said its statement of Thursday, detailing no losses, still stood.

NEW YORK, May 12.—America's serialists sent word to their colleagues of Germany to-day that the Kaiser and Kaiserism must go, that the war against Germany must be continued by the democratic peoples of the world until this result is achieved.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—By a majority of one vote the Senate to-day struck from the Gregory Espionage Bill, the censorship provision that would authorize autocratic power to gag the press in any and all criticism of the Government's conduct of the war, and the Administration's international policies.

PETROGRAD, May 12.—The executive committee of the Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates to-day refused participation in a coalition ministry. Eight committeemen did not vote.

LONDON, May 12.—Flashes of light, indicating another aerial attack on Zeebrugge were observed between 3 and 4 o'clock this morning, a Reuter despatch from Flushing, Holland, reports. Later heavy and continuous gunfire was heard from the west. It is believed a naval engagement was in progress.

NEW YORK, May 12. — Union of all English-speaking nations was urged to-day by British Foreign Minister Balfour in a speech before the New York State Chamber of Commerce.

"Let there be a bond of union between our peoples which nothing will ever be able to shake," he said. "It is the surest guarantee for the democracy and security of the world." A deafening roar of applause almost drowned his final words.

WASHINGTON, May 12. — Supporters of Colonel Roosevelt won an up-hill fight in the House to-day when by a vote of 215 to 178, the House recommitted a conference report on the Selective Service Army Bill with instructions to insert the Roosevelt volunteer division plan.

(By William Philip Simms.)

With the British Armies in the Field, May 12.—Three times the tide of battle last night and early to-day raged over a far near Guemappe, and then the British, summoning their energies to the full, pushed over the Germans and held the position, with a German trench extending half a mile to the north, several prisoners and three machine guns. This fighting aptly illustrates the sort of struggle which is raging to-day along the whole line of the British front. The Germans are everyhere continuing their tactics of counter attacking in force. Last night in massed attacks the Germans succeeded in taking Guillemont farm, north-east of Hargicourt. At one o'clock this morning the British counter attacked and drove the enemy out, consolidated their positions and were again in possession of the farm. The stubborn resistance put up by the Germans south of the Souchez river was costly. The British on taking possession of these possessions, found the ground strewn with dead. These bodies showed that three regiments of the German reserve division had been thrown into the fight in a futile effort to stop the British.

During the night the Germans prepared for an attack near Bullecourt, massing from two to four battalions, and putting down a heavy barrage on the British lines as a shield behind which the massed battalion were to attack. Turning their artillery upon the closely massed German battalions, the British broke up and scattered the attacking force.

NEXT YEAR WILL SURELY SEE THE END OF THE WAR

With Aid of United States Peace Will Once Again Brood Over the Ravaged Countries of Europe Says T. P. O'Connor

INTER-ALLIES' PARLIAMENT

By T. P. O'Connor

PARIS, May 12. — The Congress of the United States has been invited to send representatives to confer with the delegates of England and France, and to form a part of the Inter-Allies Parliament committee here. This committee formed a year ago against considerable official obstruction to confer on matters pertaining to the relations of the allies in the war, has grown into a body that is to-day of international importance, and its recommendations are listened to very carefully by both the British and the the French government. The delegates from these two countries have now been joined by the representatives of the Italian and the Russian governments, with Prof. Paul N. Milukoff, Foreign Minister for Russia, president of this section.

Serious and important matters have been discussed at the meeting this last week, the Russian representative alone being absent from the conferences. The deliberations have been aided not a little by the frank and free discussions in private, in which all the representatives have talked over informally all the problems of the war. Each nation has its own difficulties, but the submarine peril is common to all. It is agreed that this evil requires intensified action by all the governments opposed to the Central Powers, and above all, unity of direction in the efforts that are being made to overcome it. There is among the conferees a reliance upon America since her entrance into the war, everybody believing that she can make a vital contribution to the means employed to overcome the menace through the inventive genius for which that country has always been famous, and that the rapid construction of ships which the United States will be able to accomplish because of her extraordinary facilities, to carry food across the ocean, as well as steel, and the other commodities so necessary to the cause of the allies, will be invaluable.

The constant rumors that Germany and Austria are about to make peace proposals has been discussed of course but every delegate, without a single exception, joined enthusiastically in a declaration that no peace proposals would be listened to until the allies had won a complete and decisive victory.

PRINCE COLONNA.

It was our pleasure to welcome to the conference Prince Colonna, the Mayor of Rome, who it will be remembered, forced the hand of Gioletti when he presided over the great popular demonstration in Rome in favor of the allies. The prince and I have been selected to address the meeting, which will gather at the famous Strassburg statue at which will be declared publicly the inflexible resolution of Britain, France and Italy, at least, to demand from Germany as one of the terms upon which peace shall finally be declared the full restoration of the province of Alsace and Lorraine to the French Republic.

The weather here is lovely in its spring freshness. The temper of the people in the city seems unaffected by the war, and the streets are more crowded than they have been on any of my previous visits to the French capital since the fighting began, although the throngs are dotted here and there by the black-robed figures of women who mourn the loss of some relative on the fighting lines. Conversing with the citizens, I found among them a resolution that seemed to grow firmer each day, to continue the war until the German forces have been driven from the last trench, and the military power of the Hohenzollern dynasty utterly broken and dissipated.

During the last week-end the city presented to my eyes the appearance of London or at least there were moments when the avenues of Paris reminded one of the British capital.

RUSSIAN PEASANTS ARE TAKING MATTERS INTO OWN HANDS

PETROGRAD, May 12.—The anxiety of the plain people of Russia instantaneously to bridge the chasm between the autocracy that was, and the democracy that is, menaces Russia to-day. The workmen and Socialists mistrust the Duma leaders. Therefore the Government is powerless and practically under arrest in its own house, was the apt summary of the situation made in the Duma yesterday by the Delegate Shulgin.

Word received to-day indicates that nearly 115,000,000 acres of land have been seized by the peasants throughout Russia. Confiscation and distribution of land has in many sections of Russia been formally decided upon by vote of popular assemblies. The movement has become so general throughout the land that German agents have succeeded in stirring up great dissatisfaction among the soldiers at the front by insinuating that unless the soldiers went home to participate in the confiscation, they would lose their share.

NO CASUALTIES AMONG PETERBORO' SOLDIERS ARE REPORTED TO-DAY

For the First Day Since the Battle of Vimy Ridge This City Escaped the Sad Messages Telling of Death or Injury To Loved Ones---Peterboro' Boys Join the Cobourg Battery--To-day's Military News.

For the first time since the battle of Vimy Ridge on April 9th, there were no Peterborough casualties reported to the Examiner to-day, a very welcome blank in the long list that has been coming. However, it is feared that the lull is only a temporary one, as the large number of officer casualties reported in the Ottawa lists to-day would indicate a correspondingly great loss among the rank and file which have yet to come in.

Messrs. Peter Victor and R. H. Muir, president and vice-president respectively of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, left on the early C.P.R. train this morning to attend the meeting of the Provincial Branch of the Association.

It has been recommended to the Militia Department that C.E.F. companies be formed in connection with the C.D.F. The object of the companies will be to furnish drafts to overseas battalions now serving at the front. The C.E.F. companies would be attached to the C.D.F. units in the district for pay, rations and discipline, until they would be sent overseas to reinforce the battalions at the front. The recommendation was forwarded to Ottawa to-day.

The Cobourg World says: The strength of the 8th draft has been increased by the following enlistments during the past week: G. E. Taylor, stenographer, Lacolle, Que.; L. J. Livingston, painter, Toronto; W. A. Hartshorn, mechanic, Peterborough; J. A. Vincent, mechanic, Peterborough.

The Battery baseball team played a friendly game with a picked Cobourg team on Wednesday afternoon, the score resulting 10 to 4 in favour of the Cobourg team. The score, however, does not represent the merits of the game, as the Battery boys put up a very strong game after the first few innings. Battery for Cobourg team, Maher and Ewart; battery for artillery, Bombardier Bullock, Gunner Barrie and Gunner McGee.

Only a few more men are required to complete the 8th Overseas Draft, strength of which is now forty-six.

BELLEVILLE, May 11.—Returned soldiers in this city and district have organized a club, and will apply for admission to the Great War Veterans' Association. The officers are: Pres., Corp. E. G. Blaylock; Vice-Pres., Sergt.-Major Chas. Gibson; Sec., Pte. Porter; Fin. Sec., Pte. Duffy; Treas., Sergt. John Gilbey; Executive Committee, officers of the club and Pte. M. Sprague and Corp. E. Carr.

Mrs. Clappison wishes to convey her thanks to the Daughters of the Empire for flowers from the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club, War Veterans, and Radial Railway employees for letters of sympathy and also all kind friends for their kindness shown to her in her recent bereavement in the death of her husband, Pte. Harry Clapperson, killed in action, April 9th.

Pte. H. Clegg Is Wounded

Word has been received by his local relatives that Pte. Howard Clegg, formerly of No. 10 Benson Avenue has been wounded. Pte. Clegg enlisted with the 111th Battalion at Galt and went overseas with Lt.-Col. Clarke's unit. The official message stated that he was wounded in the right shoulder.

FINED $500 FOR SELLING.

Belleville Man's Supply of Liquor Was Also Confiscated.

BELLEVILLE, May 11. — Robt. Mackie, a resident of this city, today before Police Magistrate Masson pleaded guilty of having liquor for sale and of selling. He was fined $500 and costs. The fine was paid and Inspector Arnott was authorized to confiscate five cases of whisky and a case of gin which were found in Mackie's residence. Mr. W. S. Dingman, vice-chairman of the Provincial Board of License Commissioners, was present at the court proceedings.

WILL EXTEND AGE LIMIT UP TO FIFTY YEARS.

LONDON, May 11.—The War Office announces that the voluntary recruiting age will soon be extended to men up to 50 years of age, both single and married.

The announcement expresses the hope that those who come forward will be ready and willing to serve without delay when called upon.

AIM TO KNOCK OUT FOOD SPECULATORS

Windsor Council Will Seek Legislation Authorizing City Councils to Act.

WINDSOR, May 11.—Windsor City Council, at its meeting to-night took the initial step in what the Aldermen are confident will prove to be a knockout blow to the food speculators of Ontario. City Solicitor Davis was authorized by unanimous vote of Council to make formal application at the next session of the Provincial Legislature for an act authorizing cities to pass by-laws without assent of the electors for borrowing "such sums as may be necessary for the manufacture or purchase of supplies of food and fuel, and the selling and disposing of the same to residents of their municipalities, and for the establishment and maintenance of stores or places for manufacture, sale and disposal, provided such by-law is passed by a two-thirds vote of all members of the Council."

The resolution is so worded that the passage of the legislation recommended will mean that the profits of middlemen will be practically eliminated, and food stuffs and fuel sold to consumers at a trifling advance above cost.

Ex-Premier Viviani Praises Canadians

Famous Visitor Who Is Given a Great Reception at Ottawa Holds House of Commons Spell-bound As He Told the Story of the War

VICTORY IS SURE

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Ont., May 12.— Ex-Premier Viviani of France, held the Canadian Parliament spellbound for over half an hour this afternoon as he told the story of the war, and congratulated Canada for the part she had played in it.

All Ottawa turned out to welcome the visitor, cheering crowds lined the streets, and one of the greatest ovations ever recorded a visitor was tendered him by the House itself. Sir George Foster, Acting Premier, officially welcomed Viviani. The Marseillaise was sung by the whole chamber, followed by God Save the King. Senator Dandurand then called for three cheers for France.

"Canadians," said the famous visitor, "are fighting for the same reason as are the other allied nations, to stamp out barbarism and establish civilization forever. The day that the Germans first released asphyxiating gas against the allied lines, it was the Canadians who bore the brunt of it, who fought and died in the suffocating fumes, but who withstood the German hordes and saved the day. They stopped the way to Calais."

M. Viviani regretted the impossibility of his paying a visit to other Canadian points. He would liked to personally have thanked the whole people of Canada. The German nation, he declared, had broken all the laws of God and man, had violated international law and trampled on treaties. The war had been precipitated by a monarch who ruled alone, without any responsibility to any one but himself. In 1870 France was dejected; today France was not only holding its own, but had sure prospects of victory. (Loud cheering.)

German desired the world to believe that Great Britain started the war, but Great Britain had not even prepared for war. The present struggle was one between autocracy and tyranny, and liberty and democracy.

Loud and prolonged cheering followed the speech.

COUNCIL DECIDES TO GIVE CONTRACTOR A $500 WAR BONUS

Garbage Collector Receives Several Concessions From the City That Should Help Him Carry On His Work

CONTAINERS ON SIDEWALK

A war bonus of $500 to be paid at the end of the year to Mr. E. K. Graham, the garbage collection contractor, provided the solvent of the difficulties which have suspended the collections since Monday night. The Council at a special meeting last night altered the contract in several minor details which the citizens are requested to notice. As soon as the accumulated garbage has been removed, collections in the outside districts to be defined by Sanitary Inspector Stapleton shall be once a week during the remainder of May, and in November and December. The usual two collections a week will be made in those districts from June to the end of October, the warmest months of the year. In the central sections two collections a week will be made in during May, November and December. Garbage cans shall be placed at the street line for the rest of the year instead of behind the house line. In the meantime notices shall be printed and distributed throughout the collection areas informing residents of the new conditions. And a new contract shall be prepared containing these alterations and signed by Mr. Graham's bondsmen, Mr. J. M. Gemmel and Mr. M. S. Donoghue. The motion providing for the revision of the contract by-law was moved by Alderman Worth, and seconded by Alderman Dobbin. In effect it is substantially Aldermen McIntyre and Stratton's motion that was rejected on Tuesday night.

Mr. Graham was present last night with his bondsmen and urged that the $500 be paid monthly to enable him to offer higher wages to the men he hoped to engage. It was pointed out, however, that if this step was necessary Mr. Graham could raise the money he required on the strength of the bonus.

Mr. Stapleton told the Council that, in his experience, Mr. Graham had worked overtime and had responded to special requests from time to time. His men, however, had not been polite enough to inform new residents of the collection regulations. On the other hand many citizens were apparently unwilling to help the contractor by restricting the weights of ashes and garbage to the prescribed limits.

Mr. Graham stated that many of the citizens seemed to need only one collection a week since Monday and Tuesday were the big days in the week, and Thursday and Friday found the work much lighter.

FOUR DOLLARS RULES AS POTATO PRICE

California Potatoes may Force a Reduction—Onions are also on the Up Grade.

OTTAWA, May 13. — Potatoes are now selling at $4 a bag. One farmer disposed of 25 bags to one buyer at this figure yesterday morning. A few bags were disposed of at $3.75 but the ruling price was $4. In another week or so the new potatoes from California will be on the market and this may tend to send the price down a little.

But potatoes are not alone in the aeroplane act. Onions have been mounting steadily in price, until this morning they reached the fancy figure of 50c a gallon. There were a few purchasers at that figure, but only a few.

Council Not Prepared to Enter Into Contract With Sweeper Co.

The Council decided last night to revert to the old method of street cleaning to be carried out under the supervision of the City Engineer. City Clerk Armstrong was instructed to inform the Dominion Dustless Sweepers Limited, that the city could not see its way clear to enter into a contract with them at the present time.

PRACTICAL EDUCATION.

At any time in a country's history, is practical education a necessity; and it is especially so in this period of national reconstruction upon which we are entering, and for which it would be wisdom to be preparing. The results of the war have emphasized the need and even brought the recognition of the need of the application of the principles of technical education. Schools are opened and maintained where returned soldiers who are blinded or otherwise physically unfitted, are to be taught how to use the faculties and limbs they have left uninjured.

We turn out school children who are virtually similarly maimed. They have been taught little, if any, to use their hands for useful mechanical or other practical purposes. Their minds are similarly vacant of useful practical knowledge. The result is that they have to undergo further supplementary education and training before they can take their places effectively in the ranks of industrial or commercial labour.

In the House of Commons, Hon. Mr. Lemieux introduced a resolution calling for government action "at the earliest opportunity" upon the recommendation of the Commission on Technical Education. The Minister of Labour, as was to be expected, after the recent exhibitions we have had of his ineffectiveness, turned the matter over to the provinces, saying that the provinces constitutionally had jurisdiction over education. But Sir George Foster, leading the government, a bigger man, took a bigger view, asserting that the merits of Technical Education were beyond argument—it was only a question of how much assistance should be given; and that the provinces, having practical control over education, need not prevent the Dominion government giving aid, and his amendment was adopted. It was to the effect of a parliamentary declaration of approval of—

"The promotion of Technical Education as essential to the proper development of the resources of Canada and the extension of internal and foreign commerce; and that reasonable assistance be given thereto at the earliest practicable moment."

That is an excellent declaration of policy: but it is not action, which is the great need. If, as proposed, the Dominion government grant financial aid to the provinces the matter will be facilitated and our own government has inspired to make our educational system practical, instead of merely ornamental, as it is now. The defects of the Ontario educational system were pointed out at the meeting of the Ontario Educational Association April 11th. Principal Sprague, of the Hamilton Technical School, said:

"The trouble with our Public school system is that we are maintaining a system of public instruction that is not adjusted to modern economic and industrial conditions. The system is orderly and theoretically a fine achievement, but it is a system of book instruction and in practice it is a great failure. For eight years our children are burdened with scraps of information about geography and history, and are taught arithmetic by book rules, and when these children leave school we find that they have not even mastered the rudiments. The fundamental defect is that the present system confines itself to book work, and the training of the memory faculties. Pupils have practically no opportunity of applying their learning to practical problems. The remedy lies in introducing into our schools a larger element of vocational training.

He added to this an arraignment of the unpractical character of our educational system, pointing out that we have maintained at great expense a system that fails in the greatest educational good to the greatest number.

"The great majority of children," he said, "leave school between the ages of 14 and 16 years, yet for generations we have maintained a system of public instruction shaped to promote pushing a very small percentage of our pupils through High School or University into professional pursuits, while we have neglected to provide forms of practical instruction for the 80 per cent. of our children, who have to go to work in shops, mills and factories."

Now, as never before, we feel the need of a practical system of education; when the new demands of new conditions are to have well and practically equipped young men and young women to draw upon. At home we have too much carried on this war by theory—fine speeches of patriotic flavour, unfulfilled promises of soldiers for the battle line, while the practical work has been carried on by a twentieth part of our population, who have done Canada's real work, and won Canada her chief glory of achievement in this war, on the field of battle. In all spheres, the call is for doing less talking—less profession—and more doing.

OUT OF THE MOUTHS OF FRIENDS.

The Dominion government and its friends or apologists, claim exemption from criticism in their strenuous task of administering this war. In spite of this the government is subjected to a good deal of criticism, by the legitimate mentors, the Opposition members of Parliament, and the Opposition press, and their party sympathisers. It is their function to watch the government and keep it up to the mark; and if they neglected to criticise they would not be doing their duty.

It is a sad thing to say, but sadder still there is reason for saying, that the government in its war administration, and the administration of affairs relating to the war, has fallen far short of doing its work effectively. At first the public regarded the criticism to which the government was subjected as having party feeling and party prejudice as it basis. But the longer the war has lasted, the inefficiency of the government has become more pronounced, and public opinion is joining opinion with the partizan critics, and coming to the conclusion that a good deal of the criticism is not only justified but demanded.

It is not only its political opponent, the natural critics of the government that condemn it, but it has become the experience of the government that its "foes are those of its own household." Public opinion is changing its tone, and many former friends and supporters of the government are beginning to assume the position that the country's interests have claims superior to that of party; and many prominent Conservatives are beginning to see that the government administration is not quite perfect; prominent members of the party are becoming outspoken, indicating that things are not going quite right, when erstwhile ardent apologists of the government are publicly denouncing it.

At a public meeting in Massey Hall, Toronto, Mayor Church, who is a good Tory, was a day or two ago most severe in his condemnation of the government management of the returned soldier problem. He said the pensions were "shameful pittances." He also condemned the administration of the Patriotic Fund, and called the government to account for neglecting its duty, and trusting work, to "useless commissions" that belonged to a Department of the Government. These statements, coming from such a source, show that even its own friends are losing faith in the government's all-wisdom.

The same applies to Mr. W. F. Cockshutt, of Brantford, who strong Conservative as he is, could not stand the government's "shilly-shallying" with the food situation, but condemned it in the strongest terms on the floor of the House. When criticism comes from the government benches there is mighty good cause for it.

Then we have Sir Sam Hughes, who is still a supporter of the government's general policy, though a vicious critic of its war administration. When a member of the Cabinet condemns the Cabinet—and that is why he was put out—he must have strong reasons and ample justification for his public denunciations.

The Ontario Organisation of Resources Committee, whose chairman is Lt.-Governor Hendrie, and vice-chairman, Sir William Hearst, both good Tories, in a circular dealing with the "Food Situation," also gets after the government. After quoting from a United States paper a statement that there is "no need for a panic about food," the committee says:

But in Canada there is very real need for a panic about the government. Little has been done, or seems likely to be done at present, to regulate conditions, as is urgently needed, of production, of prices, of storage, of distribution, and of private trading. It is the fear that the government will not take the precautions necessary, that make the people panicky.

Here we have good opinion of Conservative flavour that the government is falling so far short of its duty that the people have lost confidence, and are becoming panicky.

When one remembers these few of the evidences and utterances that show that the government's supporters are joining the people at large in loss of confidence in the government, things are not going well. If the government's own tried — and too much tried—supporters are discovering that their idol has feet of clay; that it is falling short — "falling down"—in this great crisis of the country, Liberal journals should not be denounced as unpatriotic because they have anticipated the attitude that the government's accumulated shortcomings has forced from some of its staunchest and most influential supporters.

Is it not time that we had substituted for present inefficiency, and a government gone to seed, a government that would represent the patriotism and statesmanship of the country, with no policy but the country and its success in the war?

All fruit salads should be thoroughly chilled before serving.

THE CALL OF THE CRISIS IS CHRISTIAN UNITY

A circular embodying a religious appeal has just reached Canada, which may without exaggeration, be called unique. It is signed by nine English Bishops, four Presbyterian Moderators, a Field Marshal, Sir William Robertson, the Chief of Staff, several Peers, an Admiral, a Cabinet Minister, the Editor of The Spectator, and representatives of all the Free Churches and leading missionary societies in England. It is probable that never before have so many men of different types put their signatures to a definite religious document. In addition to the actual signatories, the circular is sent forth with the expressions of the great interest and hearty sympathy of the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, and two of the best known English Bishops.

Al lthis clearly indicates that something infinitely more than ordinary must have elicited so striking a pronouncement, because the men whose names appear on it are not of the class who readily assent to take such action without being prepared to support their names with personal responsibility. It may be said without any question that no one endorsed this effort without realising the serious importance of what he was doing. The circular is headed: "Call to United Prayer for the Greater Realization of the Presence and Power of the Holy Spirit; the Growth of Christian Unity; and for Spiritual Revival." It is issued by the World's Evangelical Alliance in London, England, and although the special purpose concerns Christianity in Great Britain, the object of the appeal will find a wide response throughout the whole Empire. The circular opens with these words: "There is in many hearts to-day a hunger for Christian unity. The feeling grows that if the Churches cannot draw closer under the pressure of our common need, the disgrace of our divisions will deepen into tragedy. Not only Christians, but all who have any sympathy with Christianity are conscious of the same desire. It is present in different quarters, sometimes as an intermittent cry, often as a deep-rooted demand." It then calls attention to various indications which are working at the present time towards unity. But it also points out that even the most impassable, optimistic, and expectant among us cannot help being conscious of the abiding and, as it would appear impassable barriers between some Christian Churches, the practical difficulties in the way of co-operation, and, still more, the hindrance to permanent unity. — The Globe.

HEAVY BATTERY WANT BALL GAME

The eighth overseas draft of the Cobourg Heavy Battery are anxious to arrange a ball game here with a Peterborough team on May 24th. Gunner Frank Barrie, of Peterborough, shortstop for the East City Champions of 1915, is captain of the Artillery men, and they have a pretty classy aggregation.

It Works! Try It

Tells how to loosen any sore, tender corn so it lifts out without pain.

Good news spreads rapidly and the druggists here are kept busy dispensing freezone, the other discovery of a Cincinnati, which is said to loosen any corn so it lifts out with the fingers.

Ask at any pharmacy for a quarter ounce of freezone, which will cost very little, but is said to be sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You apply just a few drops on the tender, aching corn and instantly the soreness is relieved, and soon the corn is so shrivelled that it lifts out without pain. It is a sticky substance, which dries when applied and never inflames or even irritates the adjoining tissue.

This discovery will prevent thousands of deaths annually from lockjaw and infection heretofore resulting from the suicidal habit of cutting corns.

Two Ways To Acquire An Estate

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family and yourself, may be, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, spent, dissipated, squandered, or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

Two Ways To Bequeath An Estate

1—By Testamentary Instrument: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape of Court. Requires Court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator — you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of Court proceedings—no expense of Court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor Court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

Which is the SAFER and BETTER Way to Bequeath an Estate?

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

Number of Reports Submitted--Association Has Had a Busy Year---Activities Are Being Extended

The annual meeting of the Y.W.C.A. was held last evening with Miss Martha Dickson presiding. A number of interesting reports were received detailing the operations of the past year. The reports indicate continued progress and increasing activity in the various departments. Miss Kate Lane, Dominion Secretary of the City Department of Y.W.C.A. work, gave an interesting address on Association work as it pertains to that particular department.

After the singing of Hymn 25 and the reading of the minutes of the last annual meeting, the management report was read as follows:

In submitting this annual report it is quite impossible to present a complete tabulation of the work accomplished, and the progress made during the year, as the religious, intellectual and physical influences diffusing from this association work, are not easily measured. Your Board of Managers has held fourteen meetings with an average attendance of thirteen. The executive, consisting of the president and officers and the following members: Mesdames Cressman, Wood and Walsh, has been called for eight meetings.

Mrs. Douglas, who returned to the work in September as general secretary, and in consideration of whose services a resolution of appreciation was recently passed by the board, is assisted by Miss Winnifred Parker of Toronto. Miss Littlefield, as physical directress, has maintained the high standard of efficiency which has heretofore characterized her labours. The gymnasium closing exercises recently held, even eclipsing those of last year in point of proficiency. The kindness of Murray Street Baptist Church, the Salvation Army, George Street Methodist and St. Paul's Presbyterian Churches, as well as that of the Y. M. C. A. Board, in helping to make this "closing" a success, was appreciated by your board.

Owing to ill health, Miss Beamer was compelled to resign from the position of house superintendent in January. The Board deeply regretted it being necessary to accept this resignation.

There have been eight public meetings held during the year. The Rally in September assumed the form of a social evening, when the guests included members of the Girls' Auxiliary, the Girl Guides, Industrial Classes and Normal students to the number of two hundred.

A series of helpful and inspiring meetings for girls was arranged, and carried out by Mrs. Scott and her committee in October, when Mrs. Frank Ray came as the special speaker. Important improvements have been made in the building and others are proceeding. Decorations, furnishings and repairs to the amount of eight hundred dollars have been placed in the House.

After thoughtful consideration and consultation with the Advisory Board, your Board of Management decided to build a swimming pool. This, it is expected, will be first-class in all its appointments, and will doubtless meet with hearty public support.

The following gentlemen from the Advisory Board were appointed to award the contract for the same: Messrs. W. G. Morrow, T. F. Matthews, A. W. Cressman, W. H. Hill, and J. J. Turner.

The Board would thank all who have rendered gratuitous service in any department of the work, especially Drs. Harvey and Cameron, who have had charge of the St. John Ambulance work.

During the year the House has been practically filled to its capacity, and the fact that there has been no illness in the institution is a cause for grateful thanks.

We are very much indebted to the indefatigable efforts of our president, Miss M. Dickson, for the success of the year.

F. D. CRUIKSHANK, Secretary.

Balance of $58.61.

The total receipts for the year from all sources were $12,093.83 and the expenditure $12,035.22, leaving a balance on hand of $58.61. This report was audited and confirmed by D. R. Fleming.

Mrs. W. I. Chisholm read the report of the nominating committee. The following will compose the Board of Management for the coming year, the officers to be elected at the first meeting in June:

Mesdames Walsh, Cressman, Wood, Roger, Hill, V. Eastwood, Robt. Neill, Morrison, Nugent, Chisholm, Gardiner, Scott, Reg. Turner, Denham, Cruikshank, Adam Hall, Matthews, Greer, Geo. Macdonald, Harvey, (Dr.) Eastwood, Widdess, LeClair; and Misses Dickson, E. Morrow, L. Rush, Aldridge, Cameron, Williams, Edna Ferguson.

Secretary's Report.

Mrs. Douglas, the secretary, submitted her annual report as follows:

In gathering up the various threads of the year's work in order to weave the web of the annual report, it has been a pleasure to find advancement along all lines, even though there is ever present with us the realization of the smallness of the work with what one had planned at the commencement. The war has turned the thread of thought, and of necessity our policy has had to change somewhat. This has been especially true in planning for our industrial clubs, owing to girls working so much at night. Also, our volunteer workers have had less time to devote to association work.

Religious Work.

Our Religious Department is not as strong as in many associations, especially the Sunday Vesper service, owing to the fact, we are happy to say, that so many girls attend sunday School. Last October the Committee arranged for a series of meetings to be conducted by Mrs. Frank Rae. The meetings were not as largely attended as we had hoped, the aggregate attendance being one hundred and eighty. A Vesper service at 5:15 was held up till Christmas time, but as it was found that the attendance were girls who attended Sunday School the service was discontinued. Miss Edna Ferguson has conducted a Bible Class on Thursday evenings with an average attendance of fourteen, aggregate attendance, three hundred and ninety-two. Prayers are conducted every evening after the tea hour.

Educational.

Two classes in St. John Ambulance Brigade work, First Aid and Home Nursing, with a registration of thirty-six, were conducted by Dr. Harvey. Enthusiasm has been such that a Nursing Division of the St. John Ambulance Brigade Overseas is to be formed by members who have diplomas in Home Nursing and First Aid.

Library.

It has been most interesting and gratifying to note the growing appreciation. Girls coming in to clubs and classes have made use of the privilege. One hundred and thirty cards have been filled out, and seven hundred and eight books have been read. In April the Girls' Auxiliary held their annual book shower, adding about fifty books to the library.

Russia Class.

The Educational Committee had a very excellent programme for a series of evenings on Russia. Three meetings were held. The attendance was appreciative, but somewhat too small to continue the programme.

Membership.

The membership report is not what we would call satisfactory, being only three hundred and seventy-six. Of this number eighty-one are junigrs. As this is the main basis of support of the Public Department, we would like the enrollment of every woman who is interested in the welfare of the girls.

Physical.

The Physical Department has come to mean a large force in our curriculum, and this year we have reached the highest standard of our work. Two hundred and ninety have been enrolled in classes during the year. Eleven classes have been held weekly, with an aggregate attendance of six thousand, two hundred and forty-six. The closing held in the Y.M.C.A. April 26 and 27, was most successful from very point of view doing credit to both instructor and girls. One hundred and ninety-two dollars, realized, with twenty-eight dollars expenses, leaving a balance of one hundred and sixty-four dollars.

Social.

We have had eight social events during the year, with an attendance of nine hundred and eighty-nine. Each class has also had its own social function.

Junior.

One hundred and twenty-two children were enrolled in the Saturday afternoon class, with an average attendance of seventy-five. The work this year was entirely gymnasium and supervised games. About thirty children paid their membership of fifty cents. We are indebted to Miss Morphet and Miss Jessie Cressman of the Girls' Auxiliary for playing for each Saturday afternoon. Also Miss Cressman for a delightful surprise party of ice cream and cake for the children. The Board provided the usual Christmas party, oranges and candy, and members of the Girls' Auxiliary assisted in making candy bags and helping with the party. We feel that this work is more than worth while, "the children of to-day are the men and women of to-morrow." These children are our future club members, and we hope to keep them interested each year in the Association.

Clubs.

The Girls' Auxiliary might be called the Secretary's "right hand." I feel I cannot fully express my gratitude to the girls who have always responded to every call. In the last two sad years since war began every girl has given her time to "war" work, and in this way many have not had the time to devote to the association. It is interesting to note that six of our Auxiliary girls have gone to train for nurses; others have entered the worlds of matrimony or business. However, their interest in the Association and Auxiliary is just the same.

Good Comrade Club.

The Good Comrade Club is mostly composed of girls from the Quaker Oats. After the fire of last fall the girls became scattered, quite a number leaving the city, others being absorbed in the various industrial centres. It has been most gratifying to know that although the girls have not met regularly for club meetings, yet they have spent many evenings at the Association room, and letters have been sent to secretaries in associations in other towns to which these girls have gone.

Loyalty Club.

A few meetings of the Loyalty Club have been held, but as nearly all the members of this Club have either left the city or are in factories and have been working at night, it has been impossible to hold the usual meetings. Some of the girls have joined the gymnasium and first aid classes.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

Colds or Coughs

SHOULD NEVER BE NEGLECTED

If They Are, Some Serious Lung Trouble May Be Sure To Follow

A cold or cough, if neglected, will sooner or later develop into some sort of lung trouble, so we would advise that you get rid of it before it becomes settled. For this purpose we know of nothing to equal Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This preparation has been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and has always given universal satisfaction.

Mr. Erwell Bolton, Wilton, Ont., writes: "Last winter I was caught in a storm and had to stay in a barn all night. I caught a severe cold which several medicines failed to cure. I went to some of the best doctors but these failed to do me any good. A friend advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I used three bottles and they gave me instant relief."

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get the genuine, put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and bearing the name of The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. Price 35c and 50c.

Meningitis Carries Off Three Children

Family of Pte. Wm. Murray, Formerly of Peterboro' Stricken By Dread Disease

TORONTO, May 11.—At a little home on Jersey Avenue, are Private Wm. and Mrs. Murray, parents of three young children, who have died within a fortnight from cerebal meningitis. Only one little girl, four years old is left to comfort the stricken father and mother. The dead children are Viola, aged seven; Gerald, aged six years, and Vera, just under two years.

The father, Private Murray, has been on special duty at Exhibition Camp since his battalion left for the front. About seven weeks ago the disease broke out in the family and the children had to be taken to the hospital. During that time the home had been under the strictest quarantine. The last of the little ones, Gerald, was buried from the hospital, yesterday. Private Murray and Mrs. Murray are Canadian born, the former coming to Toronto from Peterborough; Mrs. Murray is a sister of Mrs. John Trotter, 168 Lake street, Peterborough. Stella is the little girl that escaped the dreadful malady.

OTTAWA BATTALION DID GREAT WORK IN THE CAPTURE OF THE RIDGE

Unit of Which Capt. Hill of Peterboro' Was Adjutant Advanced to a Depth of 1200 Yards on a Frontage of Half a Mile—Many Officer Casualties.

AT THE FRONT, April 15.— In the glorious achievements of the Canadian Corps in this area since the morning of Easter Monday, the infantry regiment with so many Ottawa well-wishers has played a prominent and effective part—adding to its previous record, honours and successes even more favourable than the results of its previous operations on the western battle front. It is only at this date that the censorship permits even any general reference to the task of this unit in the brilliant attack on the famous Vimy Ridge, the outstanding success of which will stand for ever as one of the most glorious victories of this great conflict.

Great Achievement.

Already the achievements of the Canadian Corps as a whole, operating as part of the First Army, are well known to the public. It is worthy of interest, however, to note that the particular undertaking of the Canadians in the great battle of Arras, namely, the capture of Vimy Ridge, has been the subject of greater publicity both in English and French newspapers than any other particular part of the offensive. This is to be expected when the impregnable nature of the defenses of Vimy Ridge are considered with the additional fact that for two years it has been the scene of the bloodiest engagements of the war.

An Inspiration.

To the French, especially, it was a most satisfying and inspiring achievement for in this particular area tens of thousands, the flower of France's manhood, have been sacrificed in repeated efforts to gain a footing on this commanding position.

Atacked at Centre.

The Ottawa regiment attacked from the point in the front line in which it has done duty since December last, —almost the centre of the Vimy Ridge position. It was in the very van of the advance, its objectives being the enemy front line, his two support lines and the line of strongly defended mine craters or as they are sometimes termed "strong points." The task in all involved an advance of about 1,200 yards on a frontage of 800 yards. The objectives were reached, the positions captured together with a gratifying number of prisoners, machine guns, trench mortars, high explosives and other war material.

As was to be expected, the proportions of such a task necessarily involved a considerable price. The "costs" in the advance made that eventful Easter Monday included several well known and efficient officers.

Early in the day, Lieut.-Colonel C. M. Edwards, D.S.O., was wounded, the Adjutant, Captain H. F. Hill and the Officer Commanding "A" Company, Capt. E. C. H. Moore, were killed, as were also Lieut. A. W. Duncan, "A" Company; Lieut. R. H. M. Joliffe, "B" Company; Lieut. F. E. Hinds, "D" Company. Other officers wounded were Lieut. D. Guthrie, "A" Company; Lieut. A. E. M. Jarvis "B" Company; Lieut. F. G. Rolph, "B" Company; Major W. A. Morrison, "C" Company, and Lieut. H. C. Crowell "D" Company.

Losses Among N.C.O.'s.

The losses among n.c.o.'s were also considerable and including such well-known n.c.o.'s as Sergeant R. Campbell, B Co.; Sergt. B. Perry, D. Co.; Corpl. G. Taylor, B Co.; and Corpl. Chas. Ball, Signal Section, who were killed; also the following n.c.o.'s, who were wounded; C. S. M. T. Carroll, A Co.; Sergt. S. Potter, Sergt. O. F. Moses and Corpl. Guy Smith, B Co.; C.S.M.G. Cruickshank, Sergt. O. H. Hyslop, and Sergt. J. H. McCoubrey of C Co.; Corpl. A. E. Grison, Corpl. J. C. Findleton and Sergt. W. Freeman, of D. Co.

As mentioned above, the "Ottawa" regiment left our own front line at the opening movement of the offensive, which has been termed the "Battle of Arras." For practically three weeks our artillery had been carrying on an intermittent and almost continuous bombardment on enemy's lines and back areas. At midnight on Sunday this fire suddenly ceased. At 5.20 a.m. on Easter Monday morning there was a rattle of machine gun fire from our brigade machine guns. Sixty seconds later the greatest concentration of artillery—guns of every calibre from 18 poundens to 15 inch—the world has ever known, opened fire simultaneously. At the same instant a large mine was exploded towards our left close to the enemy front line. It was still quite dark, the light of dawn being delayed by the heavy rainfall. Then followed the intensest artillery bombardment which the war was yet witnessed. Scarcely a square yard of enemy territory in the area of the attack was not covered. Very shortly after this intense fire opened, our battalion in four waves left the front line trenches and proceeded across "No Man's Land," following closely the barrage or curtain of artillery fire laid down so accurately in front of their advance. In the gray dawn the spectacle was one never to be forgotten, the long lines resolute and determined, the earth fairly rocking from gun concussion, and the entire horizon towards the enemy one brilliant blaze of fire.

Many Heroic Acts.

At various points in the advance much opposition was encountered and many were the acts of individual heroism and courage. To commence to refer to these in detail would be impossible even if military regulations did permit. Some information can be given later when the results of many recommendations for decorations are known.

It may be permissible, however, to refer to the achievement of one officer of the "Ottawa" regiment who already wears a very high decoration, who attacked with only two men an enemy post manned by two machine guns, killing the crew of one and causing the other to retire quickly into a deep dugout. This officer entered the dugout alone, leaving his two men at the top and upon going down the stairway thirty feet in length, came upon a very large gathering of Boches.

Absolutely undaunted he called upon them to surrender. They proceeded to do so, whereupon this officer naturally had to use all the ingenuity in his power to give them the idea that he had a large force at the top of the dugout. Covering them with his revolver he ordered them to go up the stairway six at a time. At the top they were taken in hand by his two men and directed to the rear to be escorted to our headquarters.

Eighty Germans Surrendered.

When the dugout had been emptied, exactly 78 Germans and 2 officers had surrendered to him and the whole party was duly reported in time to our battalion headquarters. To the readers of this stupendous record of gallantry may be left the beauty of appreciating the personal courage and initiative required to carry out practically alone such an achievement. As might be expected this officer, who by the way is a company commander, has been recommended for the highest honour in the British Army, the Victoria Cross.

After consolidating their newly won positions, every effort was made to prepare for any counter-attacks which might be launched. Considerable activity was shown by the enemy the two days following the advance and every evidence of any offensive movement was promptly dealt with. In the meantime our patrols had continued to push forward, gaining valuable information all the time, until on Friday morning, April 13th, the battalion took its part in another advance which resulted in the capture of the town of Givenchy. This new position was again consolidated, and here the battalion continued to hold the line — a position practically two miles from where they started from the preceding Monday morning — until relieved by English troops on Saturday, April 14th.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. A. M. Moore, Shortroad, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

FAREWELL TO CANON AND MRS. CORNISH BY PEOPLE OF ST. JOHN'S

St. John's Sunday School-room was crowded to the doors last evening on the occasion of the farewell to Rev. Canon and Mrs. Cornish, who are returning to the West, after a year at St. John's. The affair was a striking testimony to the place Canon Cornish has gained in the esteem and affection of the people of St. John's during his residence here.

Mr. W. F. Johnston was the chairman of the evening, and his address said that, whilst admitting sentiment was a very beautiful thing, it was even more so when backed in a substantial way. As Canon Cornish had not time to visit all the parish before leaving for his parish in the West, the congregation had come to him, and the church wardens, teachers and Sunday School scholars had taken this opportunity to present to him a purse of gold and a travelling clock. Dr. Holloway, on behalf of the wardens, presented the purse and Mr. Scadding the clock from the Sunday School.

Canon Cornish, in a few words, expressed his gratitude at the warm expressions of appreciation from the people. He said that it did not usually both him to speak before an audience, but on this occasion he did not feel equal. It would be impossible to express his feelings. When such a company, representative of all ages, assemble, one is bound to feel they are not present out of curiosity. After 14 months it will be very difficult to leave the people he has learned to love. There is that in the ministry which carries one above the ordinary walks of life, the tie which binds the clergyman with his people in times both of joy and sorrow. He came, he said, to St. John's with fear and trembling, but found the people not cold but ready to make him their friend as well as pastor, and he feels confident that in leaving the people he leaves a number of friends and not one enemy. He said he felt he couldn't deserve all the people have said and done for him, and hoped they would pardon his mistakes; he did his best. The people have shown that deep down in their hearts there is a great love for church. Looking back over the past 13 months he could see not one cloudy day or the faintest attempt at friction. He was welcomed as a friend and clergyman, and the people have remained loyal. On behalf of Mrs. Cornish and himself, he thanked the people for making this portion of his life one of unbounded happiness.

A splendid musical programme was given by members of the Sunday School, and excellent slides of our boys at the front were shown by Mr. Scadding.

In conclusion a beautiful bouquet of flowers from the Sunday School scholars was presented to Mrs. Cornish.

Mother's Club Concert Was Fine Success

Enjoyable Programme Given in the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium Last Night

A very excellent concert was given in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium last evening under the auspices of the Mothers' Club of the Y.M.C.A. with a view to raising funds with which to purchase yarn for the soldiers' socks. The attendance was not as large as had been hoped for, although more than one hundred and twenty-five tickets were sold, but everyone who was privileged to be present certainly enjoyed the treat provided for them.

The programme consisted of a Spanish Mazurka nicely presented in costume by the Intermediates and Senior School Girls of the Y.W.C.A. who had been well trained by Miss Littlefield. This was followed by a dumb bell drill by the Junior School boys of the Y.M.C.A. Miss Mignon Telgmann played very pleasing violin solos in her usual accomplished style, accompanied by Miss Lily Simpson. Miss Gertrude Stevens sang with excellent voice, Ici Bas by Victor Hugo, and "Memories" by Gustave Kahn and was well accompanied by Miss Stella Young. "Maw's Auto Ride" was recited in very humorous style by Miss Muriel Harvey and she graciously responded with an encore, "The Hindu's Paradise." Mrs. H. R. Widdess as usual, delighted her audience with two selected solos accompanied by Mrs. Buchanan. The hit of the evening, however, was made by Master Hughson Johnson, a boy of eight years of age, who appeared in two recitations. His first number was Robert W. Service's "Jean Dupres," a patriotic selection showing the criminal treatment of the prisoners by the Prussians. The second was a humorous selection showing the trials of a small boy.

Mr. G. H. Roper was the very excellent director of the programme, which opened by singing "God Save the King" and closed with "O Canada."

The ladies expect to clear in the neighbourhood of twenty dollars from the effort, which is a great credit to the ladies of the Club, especially Mrs. W. R. Scadding, who was responsible for the concert, and Mrs. C. N. Meserve, the President.

Many Ways Of Taking Life

The Rev. R. Pogue of St. Paul's church will continue his series of sermons on the Ten Commandments tomorrow night, and will preach on the Sixth, "Thou Shalt Not Kill." Among the many ways of taking life and of violating this commandment he will deal with such matters as the guilt of governments in the neglect of child life, in permitting child labour and tenement conditions in big cities;; and the guilt of the lords of industry who refuse to pay a living wage. He will also deal with its application to capital punishment and to war.

The GRESSMAN Company Limited

THE NEW ROYAL BANK BUILDING IS A CREDIT TO THAT INSTITUTION

The Prudential Insurance Company and the Heintzman and Company Occupy Offices That Are Second to None in the City—Another Valuable Addition to the Business Section of the City.

The completion of the Royal Bank building at the corner of George and Hunter streets, constitutes another valuable addition to the modern public buildings of Peterborough. The past few years has witnessed striking changes in the topography of the city. Many new buildings have taken the place of the initial landmarks and many buildings of a substantial character have been remodelled to meet with present day requirements. The most recent addition to the last named class is the Royal Bank building which has been in the hands of the artizan since early last winter. The result is now apparent in its finished state. The ground floor on George street and west on Hunter street to the main entrance to the offices upstairs, is occupied by the Royal Bank. No expense has been spared to create for the use of the Bank itself, one of the finest office buildings in the city. The interior is commodious and well laid out. Every facility for the transaction of business is at the disposal of the customer, including two well equipped service rooms.

Mr. V. Eastwood, manager of the local branch of the Royal Bank states that it will be several days before the offices throughout the building are completed, with the exception of the magnificent offices occupied by the Prudential Insurance Company on the second floor. Another occupant of the building is Mr. B. H. Britton, representing the Heintzman Piano Company, who is located on the ground floor at the west end of the building facing on Hunter street. The remainder of the building, including the third floor, will be developed into offices in keeping with the rest of the building.

"Ye Olde Firm Of Heintzman"

One of the finest display rooms in the city is that occupied by the Heintzman Piano Company, with Mr. B. H. Britton in charge as local manager for the firm. The floor space is approximately fifty-two by thirty-two feet. In the basement is a concreted, plastered sales-room in addition to the beautiful salesroom on the ground floor, which includes four sound-proof Victrola rooms. The whole lay-out is conceded to be the best of its kind in Ontario outside of Toronto. Peterborough may well be proud of such improvements as are being made by the Heintzman Company. Mr. Britton handles piano players, pianos, Victrolas, Sonoras, thousands of Victor records and a large stock of piano player rolls, all of which can be adequately cared for in the new quarters over which Mr. Britton presides. Up over the salesroom, Mr. Britton has a well equipped apartment, where he and Mrs. Britton will reside.

The Prudential Insurance Company

The office occupied by the Prudential Insurance Company on the second floor is probably more advantageously located than any other office in the city. In addition to that it is one of the finest equipped offices in Peterborough and for many years to come will provide adequate accommodation for the increasing business of the Company. Mr. J. I. Allen and his staff of eleven local representatives may well be proud of their new quarters. The interior fittings are of the finest grained oak with separate rooms for the policy holders, agents, cashier and Mr. Allen, who represents the company in the capacity of local superintendent. From the corner window of the Prudential office it is possible to see as far as the corner of George and King streets. Both the interior and exterior of the office presents a pleasing appearance and adds dignity and tone to the business, so efficiently and capably managed by Mr. Allen.

Good use is made of the basement, in which is stored records belonging to the Bank, in addition to the regular use to which a basement is usually put. The entire building is a credit to the Royal Bank and is a practical exemplification of the enterprise which characterizes this well know institution.

Produce Poultry Says Organization Of Resources Com.

The Organization of Resources committee of Toronto has written Mayor Duffus requesting him to call a meeting of citizens to urge the greater production of poultry this year. This matter has already been broached through these columns, and it is known that quite a number of citizens have entered upon the work. There is a certain office in the city, the employees of which have already received two shipments of seventy-five chicks each, which they are raising as a co-operative effort, and this is but a sample of the growing activities. The Mayor states that he will call this meeting as soon as possible and will invite the assistance of the Poultry Association.

The Work Of The Canadian War Contingent Association

Many people are, it seems, still in doubt as to the work and value of the Canadian War Contingent Association and as to the scope of its operations, as compared with those of the Red Cross Society. The following information may, it is hoped, make clear to the many enquirers, the great and direct need that is served by this Society and indicate the harmonious and close relationship which exists between this and the Red Cross Society, while each continues to serve a distinct and separate purpose.

First of all, we cannot too strongly emphasize the advantage of sending whatever goods are intended for our men in the trenches through the medium of the C.W.C.A. Special provision is made for the transportation of all Red Cross supplies, including goods intended for the work of the C.W.C.A., so that as far as possible a safe and quick delivery is guaranteed whereas we know that the transit of personal parcels and those of minor societes is, in these times, anything but certain. Then, too, the question of expense cannot be regulated. Those deliveries through the C.W.C.A. are, as sharing the privilege of Red Cross, free, so that all money, to designated, goes for the purchasing of supplies, none being expended for the transportation.

It will perhaps be interesting to note that the C.W.C.A. was formed at the suggestion of the British War Office in the first weeks of the war to look after the needs of Canadian soldiers on active service. Sir George Perley was its President and the leading Canadian residents in England, its members. Upon the arrival of the first Canadian contingent the C.W.C.A. undertook the management of the Queen's Canadian Hospital at Beechborough Park. With the arrival of the first contingent, however, the society began at once to attend to the needs of fighting men in camp and trench, just as the Red Cross was organized to look after the sick and wounded.

Meanwhile in Canada, the Canadian Red Cross Society found that the public regarded the Red Cross as the proper channel through which all goods for the soldiers, whether sick or well, fighting or prisoner, should pass. The Red Cross, therefore, had either to return goods and money sent in for fighting men or to send them on for distribution to some society which could undertake this work. The National Service committee, consisting of presidents of women's organizations, volunteered to take over the goods thus received and to transmit the funds and supplies to the C.W.C.A. in England. This arrangement continued until the end of 1916, when owing to the growing needs, the National Service committee laid down its work in favour of a direct representation in Canada of the C.W.C.A.

The goods intended for fighting men may be consigned to the headquarters warehouses of the Canadian Red Cross Society either in Toronto or St. John. In England, the relations between the two societies have been of the friendliest and the commission of the Red Cross has received instructions to assist in the work of the C.W.C.A. as far as possible and to turn over to this Association all goods shipped to them but not received by the Red Cross and suitable for distribution in the trenches. Thousands of pairs of socks in particular have been handed over to the C.W.C.A. under the arrangement, which results in a clearing house for all gifts for soldiers.

Without a doubt, the time has arrived for people in Canada to come to the aid of Canadians in England on whom the weight of providing for the contingent is resting. Nothing of course can or should take the place of the individual parcel mailed direct to the individual soldier by his own friends, but a society which looks after the needs of all Canadian units and not only of some special battalion, or the men of some particular locality, has a strong claim on the generosity of Canadians.

What do the men in the trenches need? Comparatively few garments except socks, some towels and handkerchiefs are acceptable, but the real need in the trenches is for things to eat and read, to smoke and play with, to counteract the monotony of the life and to let the men feel that they are not forgotten, even if they have no immediate friends to send them parcels. To supply these needs, the C.W.C.A. requires money.

FARMERS ATTENTION!

The Bank of Ottawa will loan money at 6 per cent. to any good farmer for the purpose of buying seed for the greater crop production this year.

Editor, Examiner:

Editor Examiner,

Dear Sir,—To correct erroneous impressions among the public regarding my resignation as Agent of the Children's Aid Society, and in justice to myself and members of the Board, between whom harmonious relations have always existed, I beg to be allowed to state that the reason for tendering my resignation, given in my letter, which was read to the members at the meeting on Tuesday last, was "the persistent interference and assumption of authority of Chief Howard," one of the members of the Board. Thanking you, I am,

Yours truly,
C. A. G. SPENCE.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Are the City Fathers going to wake up to the fact that the coal situation FOR THE POOR MAN in Peterborough is serious? Or are they going to play with the question as they are with the d/s by-law at the present time? Have the indignant and outraged citizens and housewives got to take the matter into their own hands and use any means they can to adjust it? If those in authority but knew, it is fast coming to that. It is bad enough to have food prices advanced every time supplies are needed, without being refused coal, even for cash down, simply because the "big pots" are filling their cellars to overflowing. Is there a man on the Council who is energetic enough to secure justice for us in this matter? He would have no cause to worry about the influence of the "big pots" at election time. The people he would benefit now (and they are a few) would be right there behind him every time. What's the matter with the city buying the coal and selling to the people for cost, plus cartage? It would be some trouble, perhaps, and maybe a little expense, but are those in authority not supposed to act for us, especially in a crisis? Let us see some action taken right away, not wait till next winter.

ANOTHER SUFFERER.

RELATIVE VALUES OF FOODS

Is milk, after all, the most practical and valuable of foods? In ordinary time the ordinary person would not ask the question, but it is being asked very frequently nowadays and will continue to be if the "education" of the consumer goes on as has been suggested. Flora Rose, in an article in Hoard's "Dairyman," makes a careful study of relative economy of milk, and concludes substantially as follows:

1. That no foods can bear investigation more successfully than milk; that it is not only a cheap food, but one whose values cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. Although it is not the cheapest source of energy, it is, nevertheless, an important source of energy and its energy-yielding substances, the protein, the milk sugar, and the butterfat, all have special value.

2. Milk is a cheap source of protein becaause the protein that it contains is of a kind particularly valuable for building tissue.

3. The fat of milk has peculiar advantages over many fats because of its growth-promoting properties.

4. Ordinarily milk is the cheapest and most valuable source of lime, unless it is discovered that lime in water can take the place of lime in milk.

5. Milk is a valuable and cheap source of phosporus.

6. Milk is deficient in iron, but the iron that it contains is particularly well utilized.

7. Milk is the most important of the three foods, milk, eggs and meat, which are the chief sources of a factor in food that is soluble in fat, that is essential for growth and health, and that is called "fat soluble A."

8. Milk is one of the most important sources of a factor in foods soluble in water, that is essential to growth and health and that is called "water soluble B."

The proof that milk is a cheap food is not the price paid for the quart, since even at fifteen or twenty cents a quart milk is a cheap sources of nutritive substances always needed by the body, but particularly needed during the growth period. The energy that a food may yield is measured in terms of the calorie. The greater the number of calories a digestible food will furnish for a given amount of money, the cheaper the food as a source of energy. If ten cents is to be spent and the particular need to be considered is the energy need, the problem is how to invest that ten cents in order to buy the most energy. Ten cents will buy the following amounts of energy in a few of our typical foods:

	Calories
Milk at 10c a quart	672.5
Milk at 8c a quart	840.1
Round steak at 26c a pound	271.0
Eggs at 35c a dozen	294.0
Eggs at 55c a dozen	183.0
Bread at 6c a loaf	1713.5
Oatmeal at 5c a pound	6901.5
Cornmeal at 4c a pound	4087.0
Cheese at 25c a pound	796.0
Butter at 50c a pound	699.0
Butter at 40c a pound	872.0

These figures quickly convince one that milk is not the cheapest source of energy that can be included in the dietary, although it compares more than favourably with meat and eggs; that a combination of milk and cereal makes a cheaper energy-yielding meal than milk alone; that cereal alone is cheaper still.

Figures show that the amount of protein which various common foods will supply for the same amount of money may be seriously misleading. They should be accompanied by qualifying statements concerning the value of the protein from various sources. For example, ten cents will buy:

	Grams protein.
Milk at 8c a quart	40.00
Milk at 10c a quart	32.00
Cheese at 25c a pound	88.20
Round steak at 26c a pound	27.14
Eggs at 35c a dozen	20.60
Eggs at 55c a dozen	13.06
Dried lima beans at 10c a pound	62.10
White bread at 6c a loaf	61.50
Cornmeal at 4c a pound	104.80
Oatmeal at 5c a pound	151.80

Hoard gives the following table to show what percentage of various proteins eaten by pigs is used for building tissue:

	Per cent.
Oil meal proteins used for building tissue	10-17
Wheat protein used for building tissue	20
Oat proteins used for building tissue	25
Wheat germs protein used for building tissue	40
Casein of milk used for building tissue	45
Skim milk proteins used for building tissue	60

In spite of the fact that these figures are not the result of experiments on human beings, it is still reasonable to conclude that they show that milk is a decidedly superior source of protein for general human consumption and that it is a particularly good source where the growth is taking place; that the amount of protein required in the daily dietary may be less if milk or cheese form a considerable part of the diet than when food such as the cereal foods are mainly depended upon; that milk is not an expensive source of protein.

Lloyd George, making a visit here on important state matters, brought with him a large staff of officials, and they, with a host of soldiers and sailors wearing the English uniforms, are everywhere in evidence.

THE FRENCH LEADER.

I have had the pleasure of meeting, for the first time, General Petain—now in supreme command of the French fighting forces. Not I alone, but everybody that I have met since coming here this time, considers General Petain the greatest soldier and the most accomplished general in the whole of France, which has many distinguished fighters. I was at once struck by his countenance. Never before have I seen a face to which the term "beautiful" can more aptly be applied. His expression is at all times, even when discussing the most exciting subjects, tranquil and gentle. He is superbly refined in his manner and thoroughly self-controlled, never for a moment losing control He has the pallor of a student, rather than the bronzed visage of a soldier of the field, and his color is high.

I had some moments with Lloyd George. He is in excellent spirits, notwithstanding the difficulties he has to face at home, and expresses himself as quite well satisfied with the progress at the fighting front. He is fully aware, or as much aware as anybody outside of Germany can be, of the food difficulties of the German people, and of the extremely narrow margin by which they may hope to escape starvation or surrender simply for lack of food with which to keep them going. He is also cognizant, perhaps even more so than may appear on the surface, or than he will state publicly, of the internal difficulties which threaten disruption of the empire by a dissatisfied people, weary of the war and anxious for a form of government that will make them something more than the serfs that they now are. But, while he is still of the opinion that their conditions will prove an important factor in the ultimate defeat of the German arms, he believes as firmly as ever that the only guarantee of a real and enduring peace for the world is the absolute and crushing defeat on the field of battle that he is confident will result from the aggressive policy of our commanders and the splendid fighting of our troops. In other words he remains faithful to the declaration that the knock-out blow of which he spoke some time ago, must be delivered.

Of course, the submarine peril is on the tongue of every man, and there is much speculation as to how it will be ended, and the damage it may do before means have been found to overcome it; but all I have seen and heard since I came to the French capital only confirms me in the belief I have often expressed, that while the operations of the submarines are serious and inconvenient, while they make more difficult the problem of living, until we have won this great war they cannot be disastrous in their final effect upon our cause.

Everything I have seen and heard also points to a confirmation of the opinion I have before expressed that unless Germany proposes peace terms that will be tantamount to surrender, this awful war will last until America has thrown at least a part of her great available force of wonderful fighting men into the battle; until from the United States a million men come across the ocean to add the power of their might to the struggle the allies are making for the freedom that is the heritage of the citizens of the great republic across the ocean. They cannot be brought here in a day but they must be brought here if the full service of their country is to be given to break the militarism that would enslave the world.

In other words, I believe and my belief is strengthened by conversations on the subject with all sorts and kinds of people, both here and in England, that the war will not be brought to an end in this year, but that with the aid of America, next year will surely see war cease, and peace once again brood over the ravaged countries of Europe.

I have had little information since I came here about the trend of events as they affect Ireland. But if one considers how the submarine peril brought back the tillage of large areas of Irish soil, it is possible that the act of our enemy may solve one of the most acute of our problems—namely, the long fight to break up the grazing ranches. The shortage of food may compel England to compel the enactment of laws by which great ranches will be transferred to small farmers, who will grow food upon them to feed the British. By this means the insane policy that drove millions of Irishmen into exile because of lack of room for them to work in their own country, will be reversed.

My latest information about developments in the home rule question is not altogether favorable. Carson is still insisting upon the exclusion of the six Ulster counties, but the tremendous pressure that is being exerted upon Lloyd George by the Liberal Labor parties, and the immense campaign carried on by Lord Northcliffe, by eliciting an expression of American opinion in favor of Home Rule, is having an effect.

EAT LESS MEAT AND TAKE SALTS IF KIDNEYS ACHE OR BACK HURTS

Says Bladder Irritation or Rheumatism Means Kidneys Aren't Straining Out Uric Acid.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels, removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or side headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acids of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

Who Owns This Watch?

Soldiers Time-Piece Sent Home With the Effects of Lieut. A. R. Ackerman

Among the personal effects of the late Lieut. A. R. Ackerman, which were sent home from France, is a wrist watch for which Mrs. B. F. Ackerman would like to find an owner. The watch is a small gold one with a leather case, and is engraved with the initials "C. G. P.", and marked "39th Battalion, 3rd Contingent." It is possible that the time piece was the property of a Peterborough soldier. Lieut. Ackerman had taken charge of it, intending to send it home when he himself was fatally wounded. The watch may be seen at the home of Mrs. Ackerman, 223 Dalhousie street.

TO A FRIEND OF POOR OLD TRAY.

What a silly written article I saw,
In last Night's Review,
But it cannot be expected,
To hear better sense from you.

You want the Police to catch the dogs,
That run around our streets,
You must think the Police are crazy nuts,
I guess you're up the wrong street.

Now regards the revolver shooting,
You'd be surprised to hear,
That the Police are dandy revolver shots,
Their marksmanship you need not fear,

I understand the Police are here,
To do what is just and right.
And not to run around the streets at night
To seize homeless dogs on sight.

Now before writing any more stuff,
So senseless beyond a doubt,
Just scratch your old wooden head,
And think what you are writing about.
Contended Under the Circumstances.

Only Developed Talent Is Profitable

Sometimes we feel our "reward" is not sufficient return for the effort; we doubt its worthwhileness.

People are downcast because they cannot understand the promise, and fail to grasp its benefits to them.

The rewards of life are many; virtue is its own best argument for sustained purposes and diligent service.

In the daily duties there is a divinity that shapes our end—there is a purpose that ripens with the day.

We gather from the odds and ends of life the threads of success which we weave into a beautiful and satisfying fabric.

Giving our hearts to a cause, applying our understanding, developing our purpose, insures something better.

We gain by this effort and profit by this participation. Often we have our prayers answered more than we deserve.

With every Sabbath comes the opportunity of assembling in houses of worship with those of good intent and purpose.

When a man says he can gain in solitude all he can acquire in association, he deceives himself.

Going from "strength to strength" requires exercise of those faculties which produce manhood and understanding.

Assembling for prayer and praise proves a desire for a benefit and a willingness to share what is there offered.

We receive much by the mere fact of our correct attitude toward "the Way, the Truth, and the Life."

Every Sunday is an opportunity in this Christian land for increasing our efficiency in Christianity.

If the "atmosphere" is right we breathe the spiritual life and are attuned to the services of the hour.

Let us take the services seriously, happily, earnestly and make of them something which will be generally helpful.

The Sabbath is our day; the benefit is for us; the value will be commensurate with our desire to be uplifted.

Sunday is a general need, and church services offer the rest and refreshment that will make us capable of better effort.

Are you willing to share the reward without contributing to the work? Get started in the work—the reward will follow.

Your participation is an opportunity; reward is in giving yourself to what is worth while! Benefit by covenant keeping.

"And make a covenant before the Lord, to walk after the Lord, and to keep his commandments and his testimonies and his statutes with all their heart and all their soul."

Interviewing The Monarch of Finance

The Governor of the Bank of England is a mysterious personage, fearful, sacred, and exalted. He is hidden behind his title. Many even the most prominent international bankers did not know his name until he appeared in the British visiting Commission which is in New York today. Yet Lord Cunliffe, from all accounts, is quite democratic and accessible, and so — but let us begin at the beginning. Back in 1890, at the time of the Baring Brothers' failure in London, the possibilities were so serious that the Bank of England stepped in and temporarily took over the obligations of the great firm, which had over-extended itself by tying up its funds in Argentine and other securities. At that time the American journalist Creelman was the London correspondent of the New York Herald. He conceived the idea of interviewing the Governor of the Bank of England.

Now interviewing so sacred a personage as the Governor of the Bank of England was something for a British reporter never to dream of. Creelman approached the first official, who was shocked at the idea; the American passed from official to official, each of whom was so amused or so astounded by the request of a mere mortal, worse, a newspaper man, trying to see the Governor of the Bank of England, that Creelman got past with surprising ease, and found himself at last in the sanctum, the star chamber, the presence of the Governor. The Governor at that time was William H. Lidderdale, honest, a Scotchman, a merchant, a democrat, who refused proffered titles, and afterwards died leaving £2,000. Lidderdale wanted to reassure the financial world, seized on this as his opportunity, and gave the interview. Creelman, teleghapher it over in full; Creelman, telegraphed it over in full; newspapers were frantically wiring to newspafers were frantically wiring to New York for the details, and getting the story by cable.

Muskoka Lakes

The Muskoka Lakes enjoy an international reputation, and have won a firm hold on the affections of a large number of discriminating tourists and travellers from all over the world. As this wonderful summer region is just a step from the homes of residents of Ontario, there should be a heavy influx of Canadians to Muskoka this year. There are golf links for those who enjoy this royal game. Good hotel accommodation to suit the pockets of all. Interesting descriptive publications telling you all about it free on application to C. Truck Turned Over and Boy Was Injured

Garnet Fleetwood, a local youngster, was painfully injured about the face and head yesterday afternoon when a motor truck in which he was riding overturned on the Hunter St. hill in East City. There were three boys in the truck, but the others escaped unhurt.

Quotations On The Farmers' Market

Eggs rose this morning from 35 to 40 cents a dozen. The reason the farmers explained for this sudden rise was that the buyers were giving 36c, and those not sold were needed for setting.

Chickens, 90c to $1.25 each.
Turkeys, 20c a lb.; $3.00 each.
Potatoes, $4.25 to $5.00 a bag.

MAY SEE FLOUR $20.00 BEFORE YEAR IS OVER

But Herbert C. Hoover Says If Controlled Its Price Can Be Cut 40 or 50 Per Cent.

NEW YORK, May 11.—Herbert C. Hoover, who recently came from England, says that without control we may see flour at twenty-dollars a barrel before the year is over, but that with control "the present price of flour can be reduced forty to fifty per cent., and at the same time the producer be treated in a liberal manner."

GARBAGE CONTAINERS MUST NOT EXCEED THE PRESCRIBED CAPACITY

Citizens might as well know that the garbage collector will not remove in future containers weighing more than 75 pounds when full of garbage or ashes. And no container shall have a capacity greater than two cubic feet. The Council admits that this phase of the work has been abused in the past, and the success of the work seriously threatened and impaired.

BREAD WILL GO UP

Guelph Bakers Increased Price—One Blames Wheat Gambling.

GUELPH, May 11.—As in Galt, Brantford and other places, bread was advanced by the bakers of Guelph to 10 cents a small loaf yesterday. It had been for a week or two 9 cents. "It ought to be at least 12 cents," said one baker. "The Government must do something to stop gambling in wheat," the baker went on, "or bread will go up a lot more yet."

Athena Club.

The last but by no means the least is the Athena Club, our newest club, with a membership of 35, which has for its motto "self-reverence, self knowledge, self control," which is doing, and hopes to do, great things. The girls meet for tea after which they have gymnasium and club work.

Office.

No statistics have been kept of the numbers of telephone calls or the numbers applying for domestic help, (which could not be supplied), the numbers of girls who have come in and out of the association rooms. Had these been kept it would no doubt have been a surprise to many and would have shown how much time the secretary has spent in answering the 'phone, and in talks with girls, etc.

Our rooms have been used during the year by a number of organizations, including the 57th, and Otonabee I.O.D.E., Business Girls Club, W.C.T.U., and Local Council of Women.

We desire to express our gratitude and thanks for the many kind acts shown us throughout the year. Donations large and small and the splendid assistance of volunteer workers. We owe much to the city papers who are ever willing and interested in doing anything in their power to further our work. We appreciate the brotherly co-operation of the staff of the Y.M.C.A. and every one who has in any way contributed towards the association during the year.

I could not close without expressing my appreciation of the work Miss Littlefield has done in the Physical Department. Our work throughout the year has been marked with one word, 'success,' yet we are only touching the fringe of the work to be done in this city. I think it has been proved many times that the Peterborough public only need a reminder that their co-operation is needed for any good work, and the response is forthcoming. Therefore, to the City of Peterborough we commend the Y.W.C.A., we need your sympathy, co-operation and support. We do indeed hope and plan, and expect great things. We know full well that the work of the Peterborough Association is not our work for young women, but His work for young women. "Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

Miss Lane's Address.

Miss Kate Lane, the Dominion Secretary of the City Department of the Y.W.C.A., gave an interesting address on the work of the Association and spoke briefly of the efficiency of the local branch.

Miss Mann rendered a solo and after the singing of the National Anthem, refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour was spent.

Absorption Process Makes Faces Young

Success has at last come to scientists who for years have sought some method of removing the outer veil of facial skin in cases of unsightly complexion, which would be both painless and harmless. The new process is so simple, so inexpensive, the wonder is no one had discovered it long ago. It has been amply demonstrated, that ordinary mercolised wax (sold by druggists in ounce packages), entirely removes, by gentle absorption, the withered, lifeless surface skin, showing the youthful, rose-like skin beneath. The wax is applied at night, like cold cream, and washed off in the morning. The absorption also cleanses clogged pores increasing the skin's breathing capacity and preserving tone, color and natural beauty of the new skin.

A simple and harmless wrinkle-remover which has also proved quite successful can easily be made at home in a jiffy. All one need do is to dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel and bathe the face in the solution once a day for a while. After the very first application the finer lines disappear and the deeper ones soon follow.

$50 For The Tobacco Fund

Mr. W. H. Dunsford received from the Bonner--Worth Company yesterday a cheque for $50.00, their second donation to the Overseas Tobacco Fund, the first being for a similar amount.

The Bonner-Worth Company itself, by these subscriptions and their employees, have been very generous to the Fund.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT MARK STREET CHURCH

To-morrow's services will be of unusual interest at Mark St. Methodist Church. In the morning the subject will be the claims of children upon their parents, especially their mothers. In the evening there will be a musical service with songs of mother, home and heaven, and the book that guides to a better life.

WOMEN'S AILMENTS

Come From Heart and Nerves

Young girls budding into womanhood, who suffer from pains and headaches, and whose face is pale and blood watery, will find Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills build them up.

Women, between the ages of 40 and 50, who are nervous, subject to hot flushes, feeling of pins and needles, smothering feeling, shortness of the breath, palpitation of the heart, etc., are tided over this trying time of their lives by the use of this remedy.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have a wonderful effect on a woman's system, making pains and aches vanish, bringing color to the pale cheek, and sparkle to the eye.

The old, worn out, tired out, languid feelings give place to strength and vitality, and life again seems like living.

Mrs. Alfred Winter, Castor, Alta., writes: "I should like every woman who is suffering from nerves or heart trouble to know how much Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have helped me. For two years I kept a hired girl and was doctoring all the time. After having taken four boxes of your pills I am able to do all my own work. I would especially recommend them to women between 40 and 50, as at that time they are more liable to be far from well. One of my neighbors knows how they helped me, and she is now using them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c., or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

It's All In The Tie Space

The reason why one man has to pull and jerk his tie into place while the other slides his around easily is due entirely to the tie space provided in the collar.

Very few makes of collars have enough tie space—especially in the larger sizes.

The design of W. G. & R. collars is such that every man, whether he wears size 14 or 17, secures ample and uniform tie space.

W. G. & R. collars are the "slide-easy" kind—a boon to mankind.

WEEK-END MARKET LETTER FROM BRYANT, DUNN & CO.

NEW YORK, May 11.—A spirit of pessimism gave way this week after the war taxes were announced, to a more cheerful feeling. There was nothing very pronounced about this to be sure, but there was apparent relief because the worst was known. To use a Wall Street expression, Shorts beat a hasty retreat and stocks looked better. This is a common development when the market becomes oversold and a technical change is due. There were many doubting ones, however, and the rise was not sufficient to dignify it as a forward movement. At this time it does not look as if we can have a broad market for some time to come. The shorts probably furnished most of the buyers. With these eliminated, the market is more vulnerable. It will be subject to doubts as to several highly important matters. The big war taxes will be a bitter pill to many, but they must be borne and they will be made the best of.

The huge war loan must be put through and it will be. The bringing in of large amounts of British gold is concededly a part of the plan to help the bondsale and to keep down money rates. It will tend to ination and this is calculated to increase credit for purchase of the government bonds. This, of course, is more or less abnormal, but we are living in abnormal times with food stuffs mounting upward and Herbert C. Hoover predicting still highes prices unless we establish food control.

We have now seen enough of the sian exchange this week. Russia is concededly a danger point which must be closely watched. If internal conditions there become worse they would affect our market adversely. Urgent representations are being made by all of the Allied countries to Petrograd to keep in line, but they may come too late. Germany is doing her best to bring about separate peace with Russia. On the other hand Austria wants peace and is said to be making advances to the Allies. This is something of an offset. Few here attach any importance to the forthcoming peace plan of the German Chancellor. It is largely intended for effect at home and particularly for Russia.

We have now seen enought of the war order business to establish the conviction that the Government intends to deal fairly with home industries. A leaf is to be taken from the Allies, which have been doing all they could to foster trade, on the theory that sentiment must be kept cheerful. Profits here are expected to be general ten per cent. it is said, but this rule will not be strictly followed. Thus it appears there is nothing for business men to be disturbed about. On the contrary, the war if prolonged, should bring very large profits, particularly to these turning out munitions. Their taxes will be heavy, but will leave ample profits. As for volume, the domestic demand for leading products along with war orders, point to a new record, as indicated by the U. S. Steel report of unfilled orders.

Investors receive something of a shock this week by the ease with which Standard rails and other stocks went down. Some asked the question, "Is there no bottom?" We think hargains are now offering in the railroad list. The government control which is now in progress means a new era and the Interstate commerce commission will we believe grant some increase in rates—perhaps half of what is asked. The railroad heads assume that, as a result of their turning over the managements to the Government they will be practically guaranteed paid dividends. If this view should prove well founded there can be little doubt that standard rails are cheap. We favour a trading position in stocks for the present. Use setbacks to buy for moderate turns.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

A SMILE ALWAYS BEATS A FROWN

When you have to strain the eyes in order to make out what you are looking at the face unconsciously wrinkles into a frown that is not pleasant to see. When Dr. Fowler fits you with a pair of his high-grade "Peblo" Glasses, using the eyes becomes a pleasure and smiles take the place of the frown, which is a great improvement.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Colour and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of mess.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

NEARING THE END IN GERMAN EAST AFRICA

Enemy Was Saved Twice From General Smuts' Strategy —Men Prefer Fighting on the Western Front —Internal Trouble

From the South African Correspondent of The Daily News.

PIETERMARITZBURG, South Africa, May 14.—Some of the South African infantry, which was recently recalled with the intention that the completion of the campaign in German East Africa should be left to native troops, are not being sent back for equatorial service. A Defence Department notice announces that at the request of the Army Council and Generals Smuts and Hoskins, the 7th and 8th South African Infantry Regiments are to be at once restored to full strength for further service in East Africa.

It is disappointing that the operations in German East Africa have lasted so long. General Smuts, by brilliant startegy, enveloped the main German force on two occasions, and it is said he should have secured an unconditional surrender each time but for the failure of one of his commanding officers. One of these commanding officers in default as a Briton and the other a Dutchman, neither of them is there now. Then, but for the German getting a munition supply steamer through the British blockade a year ago the enemy force would have had to surrender for sheer want of material to fight with. The greater and far away the best part of German East Africa has been ours for some time, along with the railways and ports. The rest of the country is comparatively worthless, and its acquisition as chiefly important as it contains the remnants of the German force under their skilful and resolute commander Von Lettow Fordeck, September is the latest date put down for the finish.

Prefer Fighting in France.

The casualties sustained by South African troops since the commencement of the war number 8,668. This figure does not include casualties among the thousands of South Africans serving in Imperial units.

Recent recruiting has been sufficient to assure us that the South African Brigade of Infantry in France is to be maintained and its identity, under the command of Gen. Lukin, continued. Most of the men returned from East Africa are having a much needed rest. Those who are contemplating further service are almost unanimous in their preference for the fighting of France and Flanders rather than any more of Malariland, as German, East Africa, is sometimes called.

There is apparently some internal trouble among the Johannesburg Greeks, which has come to a head through the dismissal of the priest. The latter, a close personal friend of M. Venizelos, so it is said, omitted from the religious service prayers for the King of Greece and family. A compromise has been arranged and the dismissal has been withdrawn.

The Nationalists have fought bitterly against leave being granted to Gen. Smuts to be absent from Parliament in order to attend the War Council in London. The Nationalists also strongly object to the South African troops wearing khaki, and Gen. Botha had actually to defend it and commend it to them on the ground that it tended to the saving of life.

"BACKING THE MOTHERLAND"

You may tell about your patriotic pride,
And say you've gladly done your share,
In giving help and money,
But your talk sounds very funny.
For tell us, are you really fair,
Though your money goes to Belgian and to Serb;
And helps to man the monster gun,
Souls you may not save from dying,
You see plainly we're not lying.
You can't buy food when there is none.

REFRAIN.

Do your bit is the call.
Do your bit one and all.
There is work for everyone you know
If crops should fail,
Food ne'er will sail
To the land where our brave lads go.
If you can fight,
You would do right
To keep us safe from war's alarm,
If you can't go.
You, food can grow
And do your bit by working on the farm.
One man for hundred acres now
Is the way our glorious farms are manned.
One man does all that work
While in your home you shirk,
Not working on the unused land.
Though you're working with your might and main
At work you used to do before the war.
You are doing work not needed,
While our country's still unseeded,
Needing food as never in the days of yores.

MAYOR CHURCH LOANS RIFLES TO THE LEAFS

Toronto Team Will Carry Arms Throughout International League Circuit.

TORONTO, May 11.—So impressed was Mayor Church with the clever drilling and soldierly appearance of the Toronto and New York ball teams at the Island Stadium on Wednesday that he proposes to give all the assistance possible to the Leafs in their preparedness plans.

The New York players have been drilling for ten weeks with rifles. The Leafs, like many other teams, are using bats instead, but Mayor Church has offered the team the use of twenty-five of the rifles bought by the city when the home guard was organized. The rifles will be carried by the Toronto team for the remainder of the season, and drills will be held daily at home and on the road, at 9 o'clock in the morning. Manager Lajoie is as enthusiastic as the players. The Leafs will salute the Canadian and American flags in a brief ceremonial before every game in all parks of the circuit.

The Providence team is also drilling, and the players, like those of the Leafs, are ready to serve their country whenever called upon.

President McCaffery is endeavouring to arrange games with a major league team morning and afternoon on Civic Holiday. The Leafs are scheduled to open the inter-league series in Columbus, Ohio, that day, but are trying to have a change made to permit the exhibition games here on the holiday.

PROBE THE PURCHASE OF CAMP BORDEN LAND

Some of the Land Offered at $8 an Acre, Whereas Govt. Paid $12 for It.

OTTAWA, May 11.—Before the Public Accounts Committee of the Commons this morning an enquiry was commenced into the purchase by the Governent of the Camp Borden site, which includes 17,300 acres for which the sum of $207,000 was paid.

No witnesses were examined but E. B. Devlin caused to be put on the records the original agreement between Sir Edward Kemp then Hon. A. E. Kemp, acting Minister of Militia), and Mr. James Barr, of Toronto, through whom the lands were secured at the price of twelve dollars per acre. The agreement provided that in the event of the land secured exceeding 17,300 acres, Mr. Barr was to receive an addition of $12 per acre on such overplus and in case it did not amount to 17,300 acres, there was to be deducted $12 per acre on the deficiency.

Mr. Barr stated in the agreement that he was the owner of or had control of at the time, over eight thousand acres of the land in question. The agreement was dated April 10th, 1916, and the deal was to be closed before May 10th, 1916. There was also produced a letter written by J. T. Barnes, of Toronto, to Mr. Fred Smith, De La Roche St., Montreal, the owner of some of the land, which now constitutes Camp Borden, offering him on behalf of the Government, eight dollars per acre for the same. This letter was dated September 28th, 1916.

The Auditor-General, who read these documents at the request of Mr. Devlin, said that he was not familiar with the matter, and his examination was not proceeded with to-day.

THE ENGINEERS MADE VICTORY POSSIBLE

Light Railways Built by Canadians Great Aid to Army Breaks Are Quickly Repaired—Great Water System

BY STEWART LYON.

Canadian Army Headquarters,—The proposal to send England from the United States to aid in working out engineering problems of the Allied nations arouses interest here, where the extraordinary difficult conditions of transportation of men, munitions and supplies have been overcome under the direction of Canadian engineers.

Engineers from Allied countries who have visited Vimy Ridge and the region behind, express profound admiration and amazement at the magnitude of the work done in a few months, which vitally influenced the strategy of the Allies on the Western front this year. Without it the battle of Arras would have been impossible. The carrying of Vimy Ridge is part of the phrase. The Germans knew this and counted on preventing the development of Gen. Haig's plans for his great offensive on both sides of the Scarpe River, by holding Vimy Ridge at all costs.

When the capture of the position was assigned to the Canadians the decision probably was influenced much by their aptitude for, and experience in, the construction of transportation systems.

For months before the assault, men in thousands were building the waterworks plant and roads, without which, it is now admitted, the conquest of the ridge and the holding of it after its capture, would have been impossible.

GREAT WATER SYSTEM.

The railway system begun by the French during the campaign of 1915 was reconstructed and brought into general use and served the vital purpose in feeding both men and guns without disclosing information of value of the system of tunnels and subterranean accommodations of all sorts for men and materials.

It may be said that under the direction of Canadian Engineers in many places galleries were constructed for troops and dressing stations for wounded. There were water pipes which fed taps at which the men could fill their water bottles or secure supplies for cooking or washing. There were also strong places for food and ammunition. A water supply for over a hundred thousand men and almost fifty thousand horses in a circumscribed area was another great problem.

Streams miles back, an abandoned coal shaft and a spring on Vimy Ridge almost under the Bosche lines, were the chief sources of supply.

Forty-five miles of four-inch pipe was laid sufficiently deep to protect it against shell fire.

LIGHT RAILWAYS.

It had been already told in dispatches of the tremendous labour involved in the construction and maintenance of roads and light railways. Some of the problems were unique. Trees near the front were cut down to provide material for plank roads, but were found to be full of metal. Shrapnel and bullets had played havoc with the teeth of the saws in a portable sawmill, and as none with individual teeth could be obtained saws had to be filed by hand after every break.

The plank roads and light railways were the only possible means of getting supplies up to Vimy Ridge after our artillery had destroyed the German road system.

The day before his death, Col. Britton reported the gallantry of a driver of a petrol engine, who, when his cars laden with shells and charges of cordite took fire, hauled the burning explosives at imminent risk to his life, to a point where he could get water from a shell hole and with the aid of some soldiers, to whom he set the example by his filling his helmet with water and throwing it on the flames, put out the fire.

BREAKS QUICKLY REPAIRED

Many breaks occur in the railway in a single night, but sections are ready in an instant to repair them. The result is an accumulation at the front of many thousands of pounds of projectiles before the day of an attack.

During a single twenty-four hour period, 457 tons of explosives were carried up this railway. This is believed to be a record on a battle field, where the enemy from his commanding position could see by day every movement for miles behind the front.

The result of all these engineering devices was a decisive victory which forced Von Hindenburg to throw in reserves which he had hoped to use elsewhere in an offensive, enabling him to regain the initiative, and tied the Germans down to a defensive war in the west, involving terrific losses from the superior Allied artillery fire.

All the prisoners coming in speak of great losses from shell fire. Half the enemy reserve divisions, numbering forty-four at the opening of the campaign, are believed now to be in the front line.

The work of the Canadian engineers has helped materially to bring about this result.

Sunday Hits Hard At Church Members

Colonel Benton, commander-in-chief of the Ancient and Honourable Artillery Company of Boston, which has figured largely in the martial and social annals of Billy Sunday's New York tabernacle platform Friday afternoon. Colonel Benton said:

"Before Billy Sunday went to Boston two-thirds of the population were opposed to his coming. But before he went away there was almost a unanimous vote in favour of him and his work, and now at least two-thirds of the people would welcome him back."

There were only about 2,000 in the tabernacle when Billy began preaching. Sunday got a long laugh when he advised his hearers to go through their libraries and burn all the books which were not in harmony with Christianity, adding: "Then I'll bet you wouldn't have enough paper left in the house to hand you old hat or wad a shotgun."

The evangelist preached on "The Secret of Finance," taking his text from Jeremiah 5, 25: "Your iniquities have turned away these things from you."

He scored a deep thrust when he declared:

"There are thousands of church members who don't know the A.B.C.'s of religion. People of to-day are not different from those of Jeremiah's time."

He urged his audience to be content with their lot, not to have hard feelings against the man who drives a motor car because they couldn't afford to run one.

"I'm not sore on the fellow who has the money to live on Fifth avenue when I haven't," he added. "I can't afford to live there, but I'm having a good time."

After urging the congregation to "give up booze," Billy said.

"I'll tell you what one chauffeur did the other day. I won't tell you who he drives for. He hit the trail and brought five other chauffeurs down with him, and when the beer waggon called at his home later he said: 'You needn't leave any more booze; I've quit it.'"

Continuing his sermon he said:

"When God enters into a covenant, He promises substance, peace, joy, prosperity, victory, honour. Such are a few of the numberless promises given to the Jews. But they were rejected by the people, and they did not gain the benefits. The same is true to-day.

God's promises to the man who accepts are numberless. Any man, unless he is a fool, would rather have God's love than God's curse. Any man unless he is a fool, would rather be saved than lost. Any man, unless he is a fool, would rather go to heaven than to hell. But they were not possessed of these things, and therefore the blessings were a failure; peace turned to war, joy turned to gloom, prosperity to need, victory to loss and honour to dishonour.

"All were failures Why? Did God make promises, knowing He could not fulfil them? No! Jeremiah laid the blame where it belonged, on the people.

"If church members will quit playing cards, we'll have no more gamblers. When the church members quit patronizing theatres, they'll either clean up or go out of business.

"The trouble with the Church of God to-day is a lot of you stand convicted of your sins, but you won't throw them out Say, 'God I've been worldly, I've been proud, I've neglected your gifts, I've sat in judgment on your servants.'

"Confess. Be humble and receive a blessing. Renounce your sins, get rid of it, throw it out.

"Tell God your troubles, not the public. It's none of the public's business.

"This is my coat I have on. I can take a pair of scissors and cut it up if I want to. It belongs to me. I can take this watch and throw it away and smash it up, if I want to. It belongs to me. I belong to God, and He has a right to do what He pleases with me, and also with you.

"Lay all of your sins at the foot of the cross and say, 'Nothing in my hand, I bring, simply to Thy cross I cling.' And hear him say, 'Thy sins which are many are all forgiven thee; go in peace and sin no more.

"My God, how can any sane man or woman refuse to receive such a blessing as this? How can he push it away And you will receive this blessing if you believe, and if you don't God says it were better for you if you had never been born or that you take a millstone and tie it around your neck and cast yourself into the river."

Directory First!

WHEN you call a telephone number from memory or when you guess at it you are apt to be wrong.

¶ The mind has a trick of transposing figures—instead of "1263" you are quite likely to say "1623."

¶ Also, telephone numbers, firm names, etc., are frequently changed.

¶ And when you thus ask for the wrong number, you waste your own time, the operator's, and the time of the person called through your error.

¶ Directory first is a good principle. In the end it saves time and temper to first consult the latest issue of the telephone book.

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. One day I saw your sign which read "Fruit-a-tives make you feel like walking on air." This appealed to me, so I decided to try a box. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine. I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely. I recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends".

CHICAGO, May 11.—Fred S. Hartman, hero of the dog race from Winnipeg to St. Paul last February, reported to the Central Department, U. S. A. here to-day as a volunteer for the army aviation corps. Competing against the picked "mushers" of the Hudson Bay district, on the verge of collapse from frost bites, wounds and loss of sleep, and with one of his dogs dead, Hartman won the plaudits of the entire north country for the determination shown in finishing the race over the 570-mile snow-bound trail.

TOLD BY PRISONERS

An English correspondent writes:—The prisoners come mostly from Bavaria and East Prussia. Of these the Bavarians are the better fighters. The East Prussian regiments include many German Poles and a considerable proportion of wastrels. They generally seem sufficiently, although not overabundantly, fed. Deserters arriving in our lines told appalling tales of starvation. One Pole declared that his company had had nothing but jam, bread, and tea for weeks. The usual meals in many of the German companies are coffee and bread for breakfast, a sloppy meat dish, half soup, half stew, for dinner, and coffee and bread for tea. Jam is often issued as well, and there is a small supply of artificial butter tasting like cart-grease. Tea is more and more used as a substitute for coffee. When the fighting is strenuous the food is increased. When in reserve or on a quiet part of the line it is reduced.

The physique of some companies is almost incredibly low, others very good, while most are mixed. Three prisoners brought in from one sector formed the most extraordinary trio that could be imagined. One had lost his right eye and had to shoot from his left shoulder. The second was half-witted and had not been called to serve until he was thirty-two. The third was a young degenerate. They said that theirs was a specially short company. Yet it had been placed in the front line to hold a part of an important position.

WHAT GERARD SAW

Horrors Endured by Our Prisoners in Germany

Ambassador Gerard, speaking at the Canadian Club dinner in New York, told a few of his experiences during his stay in Germany:—

"I want to tell you Canadians," he said, "some of the things I saw your fellow-countrymen endure in the German prisoner-of-war camps. You, sitting here, cannot imagine the horror of living two and a half years in a German prison camp. I know because I saw. I had seen small boys with German simplicity and kindness march about the prison camps armed with bows and arrows and shoot arrows tipped with nails at prisoners.

"Another time there was typhus fever in a camp where Russians were interned. Declaring that all the Allies should stick together, the Germans placed English and French prisoners with Russians in the typhus camp, thus condemning numbers of them to certain death. At another camp I visited they had trained German sheep-dogs to bite the British, and when the guards went through the camp they took the trained dogs with them, and it was seldom that the animals failed to bite the British soldiers. I complained to Berlin about the matter, and for a long time my complaint was not noticed. Nothing was done until I told the commandant that I was a very good pistol shot and that I was thinking about going out shooting some of the trained dogs and seeing what they would do about it. Shortly after the commandant was removed."

MARK OF THE "BEAST"

Trees with Their "Throats Cut" Causes Feeling of Powerless Rage

A press correspondent writes:—In Peronne are many fine trees planted for ornament. The German military authorities, probably from lack of labour, could not cart them away, could not even spend time in felling them. So instructions were given to hack every tree, as a hedge-grower cuts hedge-stakes, just deep enough to ensure the death of the tree. So the German left "his mark,' a V-shaped convict's mark, cut half-way through each trunk of the avenue. Fruit trees were more carefully severed than ornamental trees, and especial care was taken to destroy completely the espaliers and prettily trained fruit trees in which French gardeners take special and peculiar delight. I do not know why, but the sight of those little fruit trees with their throats cut filled me with more trenchant rage against the German mind than all the rest of the havoc.

New Church Plant To Cost $1,000,000

Announcement is made that a new Church of the Blessed Sacrament, rectory and school building, costing together $1,000,000, will be erected on the church property adjoining the south-east corner of Broadway and Seventy-first street, New York city. The land owned by the church includes the Broadway corner, which is occupied by a chapel. The chapel will be used for church service during the construction of the new buildings and then the site will be sold.

The Church of the Blessed Sacrament comprises what is probably the wealthiest Roman Catholic parish in America. The land owned by it alone worth about $1,000,000 and several times the late Mgr. Matthew Taylor refused to sell the property. The last mass will be said in the present church on May 13, and the next day the work of razing that structure together with the adjoining rectory and school, will begin.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

FOR LOVE OF A WIDOW

John's Attempt at Suicide Rewarded With Sensible Advice.

By DONALD ALLEN.

It was a new sensation for John Dale, farmer's hired man, to wake up one morning and find himself in love with the Widow Harper, who owned the next farm on the west. He had known her for a year, but love had come creeping along so insidiously that it gave him a shock when he came to realize it.

The Widow Harper owned her farm; John Dale was simply a hired man at $20 a month. The Widow Harper could discuss Shakespeare; John Dale had simply heard that Columbus discovered America. The Widow Harper quoted poetry; John Dale couldn't even repeat a Mother Goose rhyme. On account of these things and many others poor John Dale felt that the widow was as far above him as the clouds above the cornfield. Love had come, but it was a hopeless love. She was not for him. When he strolled over to her house she might welcome him with a smile and repeat lines from Byron or Milton as they sat in the gloaming, but in the end she would marry a sewing machine agent, and he must suffer with a broken heart.

For a week the farmer's hired man kept his hopes and fears to himself. Then he could stand it no longer, and he made a confident of a lightning rod man who came along and stayed overnight. After supper the stranger was taken out behind the straw stack and told all. He listened without smiling once. He listened to the very end, and then he sighed and shook his head in a solemn way and replied:

"John, if you were talking about a girl it would be different, but she's a widow, you see. A widow is a curious creature. No man just knows how to handle her. She may fall into the arms of a tin peddler, or she may tell a millionaire to take his hat and go."

"Then there's no hope for me?" plaintively asked the hired man.

"Yes, there's one hope. If the widow quotes poetry she's romantic. If

"WHY DID I FALL IN LOVE WITH YOU?"

she's romantic you have a chance. You've got to appeal to her romance by dying for her—dying for love of her."

"But if I died I sure couldn't marry her."

"You mustn't really die, but almost. Here, now, let us do some planning. I'll beat a farmer every day in the week when it's business, but when I find a man eating his heart out for unrequited love I can't go back on him."

The talk between the two was strictly private, but one of the results came to hand within a week. John Dale was found by his employer in the barn just as he had swung off in a noosed rope to commit suicide.

WHY Does Your Head Ache?

Headaches, sick or other kinds, don't happen to people whose livers are busy and whose bowels are as regular as a clock.

Thousands of folks who used to have headaches say this is the way they removed the cause:

One pill at bedtime, regularly. Larger dose if there's a suspicion of biliousness or constipation.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Genuine bears Signature

Colorless faces often show the absence of iron in the blood.

CARTER'S IRON PILLS will help this condition.

"You tarnal idiot, but what did you do it for?" demanded the farmer after he had cut down and revived the victim.

John Dale shed tears and said his life was a burden to him, and of course the Widow Harper heard of the affair and wondered over it. She would be suicide ceased to visit her, and that was another cause for wonder.

Ten days after his first attempt the hired man made another. He was caught just as he was about to partake of enough paris green to have killed a couple of horses. It was the farmer's wife that caught him this time, and as she gave him a box on the ear and snatched the dish away from him she said:

"Well, if you hain't turning into the biggest fool in America! What in catnip ails you, anyway?"

"It's my breaking heart!" was the tearful reply.

"Your breaking fiddlesticks! It's biliousness and nothing else. You are acting like a boy ten years old."

The widow heard of this second attempt, and it made her look serious for several days. She would have had a talk with John had he appeared, but she looked for him in vain.

Two weeks passed this time, and then came the third attempt at suicide. The farmer and his man were mowing grass beside the river when John suddenly threw away his scythe and leaped into the current. There happened to be an old boat handy, and the farmer managed to get the victim ashore and stretch him on the grass. Then he gave way to his indignation by shouting:

"You pothcaded lunatic! What's got into you this summer? This is the third time you've tried to die. What's the matter?"

"I'm in love!" replied John after a long minute.

"You're in what?"

"I'm in love with the Widow Harper, but she don't love me, and that's why I want to die. I stood it till I can't stand it no more."

"Ever ask her to have you?"

"I dasn't."

"You seven kinds of idiot! Don't know whether she'd say yes or no, but trying to kill yourself?"

The widow heard of the third attempt through a farmer's boy, and she was sitting on the veranda after supper and thinking the matter over when John Dale suddenly appeared. He had a story to tell, and he went right at it like a man hoeing corn.

"Widow Harper," he began, "I know I hain't fit to lick your shoes, but I love you. When I found I was loving you I tried to kill the feeling, but the harder I tried the more I loved. That's why I tried to hang myself."

"I see," she said as he paused and wiped away a tear.

"I was in hopes my sore throat would make me forget you, but it didn't. I had suffered for you, and you were dearer than ever. I couldn't get you out of my mind. I kept thinking and thinking, and, knowing how hopeless it was, I turned to that tater bug poison. I had a note for you in my pocket, and you'd have got it after my death. Mrs. Whalen took the poison away from me just as I was asking heaven to always bless you. In the note I also said I hoped you'd be happy with any man you married."

"Yes," remarked the widow as another pause came.

"Then I was determined to weed you out of my heart at any cost. I drank sour cider; I fell off the fence on purpose; I pinched the cows when milking them to make them kick; I ran through a bed of nettles in my bare feet; I rolled off a haystack. It was all in vain! I was loving you more instead of less. Down by the river I got to thinking about you marrying that sewing machine agent or a wire fence man, and I just made a run for the river and jumped in. I swallowed all the water I could, and I kicked when Mr. Whalen got me by the hair and pulled me out."

"And after trying three times you have succeeded in weeding me out of your heart?"

"No. That's what I've come over to tell you. I keep thinking of you every minute. If a bird sings or a duck quacks or a goose cackles I think it's your voice and look around. Why was I born into this world? Why did I ever see you? Why did I fall in love with you?"

"And now, John, just what is it you want?" asked the widow when he had uttered his last word and was gritting his teeth to keep the tears back.

"Why, I want—I want you to have me!"

"Then ask me. If you had done so a year ago I should have said yes, as I shall say now."

Shrewd Peter the Great.

Peter the Great adopted rather a novel means to convince his subjects that they should change their clothes to conform with the modern costumes of western Europe. Believing, as is well known historically, that the future greatness of Russia depended upon the facility with which it was made to assimilate all that was best in other countries, he had succeeded in introducing some important innovations into the half civilized region over which he held sway. At length he had patterns of cloth hung up at the gates of the towns, and those who did not conform to the fashions thus set were docked publicly, albeit this was done in as pleasant a manner as possible, for Peter believed in being good natured with his people. They, on the other hand, loudly demurred and used the argument that what was good enough for their forefathers was good enough for them.

"Very well," said the sagacious Peter. In 1708 he gave a dinner at Moscow to celebrate the marriage of one of his jesters and insisted that it should be conducted in strict conformity with ancient usage. There had formerly been a superstitious custom of not lighting a fire on a wedding. So Peter made them do without a fire, although it was very cold. He would not give them any wine, because their forefathers never drank it. When they remonstrated he reminded them that it was a poor rule which did not work all around, and thus by his good natured greatness wheedled his people into new coats, about the hardest thing that can be done with humanity.—London Mail.

The Panacea of Nature.

Every great and commanding moment in the annals of the world is the triumph of some enthusiasm. The victories of the Arabs after Mohammed, who in a few years from a small and mean beginning established a larger empire than that of Rome, is an example. But there will dawn ere long on our politics, on our modes of living, a nobler morning than that Arabian faith in the sentiment of love.

This is the one remedy for all ills, the panacea of nature. We must be lovers, and at once the impossible becomes possible. Our age and history for these thousand years have not been the history of kindness, but of selfishness. Our distrust is very expensive. The money we spend for courts and prisons is very ill laid out. We make by distrust the thief and burglar and incendiary, and by our court and jail we keep him so. An acceptance of the sentiment of love throughout Christendom for a season would bring the felon and the outcast to our side in tears, with the devotion of his faculties to our service.—Emerson.

NO LACK OF EVIDENCE RIGHT HERE IN PETERBORO'

To Prove the Remarkable Upbuilding Influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food—Two Good Reports To-day

PETERBOROUGH, April 12.—Day after day we are printing in this paper reports from Peterborough people who have been cured by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

There are in the meantime hundreds of other cases of which we never hear. But you will find that your friends and neighbours know about this great restorative treatment and have something good to say about it.

If you are skeptical, ask them what you may expect from its use. Then put it to the test. Use the Nerve Food regularly and you will soon find that weakness and disease are giving place to strength and vigor.

Mr. George Lee, 767 Water Street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food some time ago when I was in a run-down condition, and found them to be just what I required to build up my system. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food also worked wonders for my wife. She had been suffering from nervousness and could not get a good night's rest. She would wake up at different times during the night, sometimes jumping right out of bed. She tried doctor's medicine without success and finally commenced taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The first box helped a little, the second box benefitted her more, so she kept on taking them until she grew strong and healthy. She has recommended this treatment to many of her neighbors."

Mrs. Wm. Herron, 11 Conger St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I suffered from nervous, run-down condition, and was unable to get a good night's sleep. The least noise would waken me and then I would lie awake for a long time. Trivial matters used to worry me, and I did not seem to be getting any better. Through a friend, I was persuaded to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I commenced using this treatment, and am now feeling much better. I can get a good night's rest, my appetite has improved; the Nerve Food strengthened my nervous system and now trivial matters do not worry me as they used to. This medicine has done me so much good that I cannot speak too highly of it."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

The speaker will give an address of welcome, while on motion of Sir George Foster, seconded by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, M. Viviani's speech will find a place in Hansard. The Governor-General will entertain the visitors at luncheon.

Mr. E. M. Macdonald, Pictou, N.S., moved the adjournment of the House to discuss the menace to industry by the German submarine campaign. Our North Atlantic coast was at any moment liable to attack. A sub base could be formed on the coast of Newfoundland and Labrador. He submitted that it was the duty of the Government to establish a naval airplane station in eastern Nova Scotia, with auxiliary bases in Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island.

Canada should proceed at once, he submitted, to build trawlers, submarines, destroyers and freighters.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid, the kidneys clogged, the bowels sluggish, the skin sallow, and the whole system full of impurities. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also secure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

ALL HONOR TO BRAVE "NAVVY" BATTALIONS

Never Afraid of Work or Danger—Can Turn Their Hands to Anything—Possess No Nerves

An officer sends the following story from the fighting front, he says:—People home in England, may have noticed a casual mention of the Labour Battalions. Perhaps they will be interested to learn that the Labour Battalions have played a not inconsiderable part in our advance. Look at any map of France and the battle front, and you will notice roads. What is not shown, however, is the mass of new roads and the repairs of the old ones. This has been almost entirely the work of men who have filled all kinds of positions in manual capacities at home, and who, since July of last year, have been working at top pressure all the way through.

They are not young men, either, these men of the Labour Battalions. They may be anything from 42 to the wrong side of 50. Scores of them have grown-up sons serving with purely fighting units, scores of them carry ribbons on their breasts, dating from Burmah onward. They are of all trades—navvies pure and simple, builders, labourers, shipwrights, rough carpenters, old sailors, thatchers—indeed, there is scarcely a thing they cannot turn their hands to—in their own style.

On the Heels of the Advance

Just let me give you some idea of what kind of work is accomplished, day after day, by the Labour Battalions. They follow close on the heels of the advance. The existing roads are pitted with shell craters, large and small. Shells are tearing over their heads, but they don't worry. They just get on with their job. And this is to make the road up again, so that the guns, the horse transport, and the motor-ambulances may be ever getting upward and onward. And it isn't always roads they work upon either. They have repaired bridges, and they have laid light railways to bring stone from quarries to the point where it has been required.

Repairing Shell Crater

They work with pick and shovel, with crowbars, with cross-cut saws, anything that is needed. Road metal is obtained from somewhere, perhaps run up to the lip of a crater and tipped in, perhaps brought up in a motor-lorry. At all events, three tons of metal in the usual amount for a small shell crater to swallow; the larger ones take more in proportion. A big gun is waiting to go up, but a dixie bars its progress. Up comes a section of the navvies; with pit props or any kind of material at hand they build a bridge, and away she goes. Perhaps she (all guns are ladies) is in the middle of a field. The navvies build a corduroy road (surfaced with pit props or odd timber) and off she goes to the macadam route close by. On and on, in the wake of our victorious Tommies, press the "old men" of the Army. They may be true to the navvy tradition—always just about to begin or just about to leave off. But they never leave a job unfinished, and they never funk.

Stand with anybody that stands right. Stand with him while he is right, and part with him when he goe wrong.

SCOTT'S EMULSION
STRENGTHENS PURE CREAM

ALLISON GOT ROSS RIFLES

Made of Rejected Parts, But They Were Bought by Admiralty.

OTTAWA, May 11.—John Wesley Allison figured in the Public Accounts Committee to-day. From statements made by the Auditor-General, it appeared that through the agency of Allison 800 Ross rifles were sold by the rifle company to Sir Trevor Dawson, and then to the British Admiralty. The Auditor having raised the point that the whole output of the Ross factory was supposed to come to the Government, which was financing it, Sir Charles Ross explained that the rifles were made up of rejected parts.

Mr. Carvell moved to summon Sir Charles to explain the transaction, but Chairman Middlebro held that as no Canadian money is involved the committee had no right to investigate. The British Government, from the correspondence, was perfectly satisfied. Mr. Carvell said the account may have been changed up to the Canadian Government. Finally the action to summon Sir Charles Ross was concurred in.

Suffered With Heart For Ten Years

Would Nearly Smother

There is nothing that brings with it such fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The uncertain and irregular heart action causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, so that it beats strong and regular, and tone up the nervous system so that the cause of so much anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. M. O. McCready, Wapella, Sask., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I feel that it is only right for me to let you know what your wonderful remedy had done for me, and in a very short time, too. I had suffered terribly with my heart for nearly two years, could scarcely do any work, and would nearly smother at times. I had many remedies, some only relieving me for a time. I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and felt so much better that I kept on using them, and can truthfully say I feel like a new woman.

"I would advise anyone with heart trouble to use them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FORD'S TAX BILL $15,000,000

DETROIT, May 11.—Henry Ford will pay $15,000,000 personal income tax in addition to his share of the regular corporation tax, excess profit tax and special automobile tax under the war tax bill, Representative Fordney told Congress to-day.

DOGS OF THE MIDNIGHT SUN

DOGS are a versatile breed. The bloodhound will never live down his record as a policeman; the Pekinese always suggests his career as a Sunday supplement favorite; the mere mention of a gun serves to evoke memories of the dogs of sport; the trained mongrel wags his tail on every vaudeville stage; the Red Cross dogs of the French front bring a lump into the throat the world round. But after all, save and except the role of "friend" which is what all dogs are born for, there's no trade in dogdom so useful as that of the Northland canine who thinks he's a husky.

We can't go to the open fen of Greenland or the Labrador to see the dog-shaped timbre whirling their sledges along under the aurora. Most of us can't go anywhere north of steam heat in the bitter weather.

But all of us plan, some time or other to run up to Alaska in the summer, and when we think of midnight suns and totem poles, Yukon nuggets and Jack London yarns, let's not forget that Skagway is the entrepot to the land of Alaska Sweepstakes, the greatest event of its kind in the world, and the one sure road to immortality for "the dog who works."

Nome to Candle and return is the distance—413 miles. The prize is $5,000. The time is April. The weather disdains to rise to zero. Teams are entered by owners living from California clear to the pole. And every dog who runs in a collar is eligible to compete—husky, malamute, Siberian wolfhound or plain wonderful all-enduring mongrel.

In Alaska and the Yukon, hotels are sleeping places and meals are taken in side-street cafes with Chinese cooks. Last summer the writer travelled the thousand miles from Vancouver to Skagway in the Canadian Pacific Steamer "Princess Charlotte," took train a hundred and ten miles over the old "trail of '98 to Whitehorse and was preparing myself by an excellent dinner to catch the Yukon river boat for Dawson City. I was sitting with my back to the screen door of the little restaurant when I had that odd sensation of "being watched" which comes to everyone with eyes in the nape of his neck.

Turning I saw the biggest silver-greyest, softest furred dog you ever set eyes on. I dropped my knife in amazement.

"Never seen a malamute before?" she asked. "Some dogs, ain't they, and they do say they can live on air. I don't see how the ones in this town always look so fat in summer unless they fish in the rapids."

"Why, yes, you could buy him if you liked. Guess you could just run away with him, and nobody'd bother you. But, of course, you know he'd eat up your own dog when you got him down home. Then he'd jump the tallest fence you could find, and go clean up the neighborhood."

Grey Brother had finished his fish course. His eyes were as yellow as topazes and the fur on top of his head stood up in a silver fluff an inch thick. He was laughing all over with good nature and the idea of such murderous exploits as the waitress suggested seemed impossible.

Down the street came a tangle of bells and a tangle of dogs. In the middle was a team—Jersey, Sport, Blackie and Shep—and surrounding them like sportive colts was an assortment of unattached canine energy sufficient to run a mill. The boy who drove the dogs from his little cart was about thirteen.

"Mush on Mush on!" he cried to his team, unmindful of the concerns of the tourists as of the gentleness of his patellites.

Tells Of Russians' Fight For Liberty

Touched and Thrilled by President's Words in War Address to Congress.

How the Russian people have fought their way through generations toward enlightenment and freedom was told recently by Lieutenant Zinovi Pechkoff, the adopted son of Maxim Gorky and an officer in the French Foreign Legion, in a lecture at the Biltmore for the benefit of Russian prisoners of war. "Russia is coming into the family of free nations," he said, "not as a people not ripe for liberty, on whom liberty has been forced, but as a people perhaps overripe for it. They come into the family as a grown-up people, and I feel sure they will contribute still more to the world in the future than in the past."

Lieutenant Pechkoff began by quoting President Wilson's references to the Russian revolution and to the long-standing democratic spirit of Russia in his war address to Congress. "These words touched me to the heart," he said. "They thrilled me, for I know they were true. For generations these people have fought for liberty, acquiring it step by step, inch by inch, with death, imprisonment, and exile—men and women of different classes united in the fight for Russian liberty. It began about 1825 with the Decembrists, men who had been in Western Europe during and after the Napoleonic wars, who first saw that the structure of the Russian Government was not adequate for the requirements of the people. There was already the democratic village community as a foundation, and although the Decembrists and others were crushed, the beginnings of free institutions were built up from this basis. First came the district and provincial Zemstvos. They introduced education into the village, though always hampered by Governmental repression. The beginnings of popular education in Russia were very primitive. In some villages the school met in a peasant's house, the teacher was not paid at all, but the peasants took up a collection for him now and then. It was a sort of apostolic life, for many of the best young men from the cities when they finished their university courses went out to rural districts to devote themselves to the work of teaching.

"The universities had a great part in the struggle. The majority of the students are sons of labourers, peasants, or small shopkeepers. Commonly you will see eight or nine students living in one small room, with three or four pairs of shoes, three or four overcoats among them, going to the university in turn because they have not enough clothes to go around. They walk hundreds of miles to the university towns; they live on tea and bread, nothing more sometimes for years; and you should see them when they are invited to a social gathering where there is food. Here, too, however, there was always Government interference; all student organizations, even circles for study, were forbidden.

"The agricultural and industrial development of the last twenty-five years furnished a great impulse to the liberal movements, for with this development the Government and its repressions became more and more out of late. Then came the risings of 1905. A great part was played on the minds of the Russian people by the massacre before the palace in Petrograd when the people, under Father Gapon went to see the Czar, and tell him of their grievances. They thought he only needed to know what was going on to redress their wrongs, but the Czar left Petrograd, the Grand Duke Vladimir, was in charge, and 1,500 people were killed.

"In the last two years before this war there were many disturbances, and conditions were really becoming unbearable. But all rallied to the Government when Germany declared war. The support which the peasants gave the war was amazing, and no less so was the manner in which the bureaucracy hampered the national forces and worked for the enemies of the country.

"The plight of the peasants in many places had been so severe before the war that the village communities had had to remit taxes for three or five years, but when the war broke out these same peasants gathered their last resources and voluntarily brought them in to the taxgatherers to help carry on the war. Peasant women all over Russia organized in groups of seven for war work, each woman devoting one day a week to the work while the others performed her tasks for her at home.

Village communities raised money to buy comforts and even necessities for the troops at the front. They would not intrust the money to the officials, for they knew it usually would be stolen. It was the practice to select some old man, too old for military service, and send him clear up into the trenches, despite the opposition of officials, to see that the men got what was sent to them, and to learn at first hand what they needed. The rural and urban Zemstvos and the Consummers' Leagues worked to supply the armies, despite the hindrances put on them by officials. All the time the bureaucracy was getting worse. One campaign—that in the Mazurian Lakes—where 400,000 Russians were lost, was sold out by a traitor—Colonel Masuyedoff—who was supposed to be in the Russian Secret Service, but was really in the German Secret Service. He and fifteen of his accomplices were hanged, but they had cost the country 400,000 men.

"So the best men in Russia began to organize secretly, so secretly that the Government spies did not even imagine what great and efficient forces were being prepared against them. It was Milukoff who decided that the time was ripe for revolt. When by his great speech last Fall he forced the resignation of Stuermer the pro-German bureaucracy was doomed. Milukoff knew it, and kept pushing the issue until the revolution. Now Russia is in the best possible hands; the best men in the country are managing the Government. Lvoff is the most popular man in Russia, the feeder in chief of the Russian armies in the field, and perhaps the only man who has the entire confidence of the people, high and low. And all his colleagues are men of great distinction and patriotism."

"I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE"

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 822 South 15th St.

When a remedy has lived for forty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their health to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

WOULD PLOW AGRIC. PARK.

BRANTFORD, May 11.—That Agricultural Park be cultivated now, has been suggested to the City Council, as neither of the organizations using it—the Red Sox and the Brantford and Paris Football League—is now in the game, as baseball was killed through lack of attendance and soccer through enlistment of players. The land is convenient for tillage by West Brantford residents.

Not a Bite of Breakfast Until You Drink Water

Says a glass of hot water and phosphate prevents illness and keeps us fit.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste, toxins and ptomain-like poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache, colds, biliousness, constipation, others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals, are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver kidneys and bowels.

STATE OFFICIALS MUST NOT DISCUSS STATE AFFAIRS

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Mr. Lansing, Secretary of State, followed up his new iron hand censorship to-day by announcing that he will summarily dismiss any employe of the department who gives the press any information upon which criticism of Government policies may be based.

Any department employe who dares personally to criticise any policy also will be dismissed immediately.

Declaring that his action was taken in an effort to help the press get the news, Mr. Lansing made known his determination to discharge any employe violating the new muzzle regulations. The Secretary faced a large group of correspondents, who protested against his order prohibiting any one in the department except himself and his official press bureau from even talking to newspapermen. The long smouldering dissatisfaction at the department's suppression was thoroughly aired.

Mr. Lansing listened blandly, saying that he welcomed criticism and repeating his assertion that his object was to open news channels.

All Channels Closed.

It was pointed out that while opening one channel, which he personally controlled, he had closed others, providing easy means of suppressing all news of the country's international relations except that which it pleases him to make known.

The correspondents told Mr. Lansing that it was evident he did not trust his subordinates, and that he evidently did not have confidence in the newspaper men writing of international affairs.

The Secretary of State has made no secret of his lack of confidence in some newspaper men here. His statements to-day made it clear that he does not trust the judgment of department subordinates in matters of publicity.

Mr. Lansing's only answer to the charge that he was establishing an iron system of suppression was that, in his opinion, it was quite the contrary; that he welcomed criticism and would see that all proper announcements were made to the press.

He denied that he was paving the way for secret diplomacy.

REMINDER OF DISCIPLINE.

Canadian Soldiers in England Are Notified to Observe Saluting Rules.

LONDON, May 11.—The Canadian command in England considers that observance of saluting has become neglected, and has issued a reminder to officers and men of the necessity of properly giving and returning a salute as an outward sign of discipline. Officers are reminded that pipes are not to be smoked in the street or in public. Hunting crops are not allowed, gloves must be of regulation pattern, shoes are forbidden, and soft caps should be worn. Deputy Director Labour Headquarters, Major A. W. Wilby, Canadian Pioneers; flying officers, Lieuts. G. L. Lumsden, G. D. Hunter and L. A. Smith, Infantry.

SWEET MUFFINS.

One egg, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one even tablespoonful of butter, one cupful of hot water, one and one-half cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Break the egg into a bowl, add the salt sugar, hot water and butter. Stir well and when the butter is melted add the flour, and beat. Add the baking powder, and divide into six greased muffin or gem pans. Bake in a hot oven for fifteen minutes.

THE STATELY ELK.

It Is the Most Beautiful of Our Remaining Wild Animals.

Now that the buffalo survives only in a few preserves the elk is the most interesting as it is the most beautiful of our remaining wild animals. In this day of Americanism it would be a fine thing if this typical American animal should come to be known by his Indian name of wapiti. The wapiti is the largest of the red deer family and closely resembles his smaller brother, the European stag. The wapiti is not properly an elk, as the European elk is more closely allied to the American moose.

The wapiti is now numerous only in the states of Wyoming, Idaho and Montana, though nearly 4,000 head are thought to remain in Colorado, and considerable numbers are scattered through western Canada. The Camp-fire Club of America and other organizations and individuals are working for its preservation. The favorite home of the elk in the Yellowstone National park, where he has no rifle to fear and where cougars, coyotes and timber wolves are kept under control. In the park and its vicinity are probably 50,000 head, distributed in two main herds.

During the summer months the elk live high up in the mountains, generally at an elevation of 8,000 to 11,000 feet. The grassy plateaus offer an ideal summer range. Even on the wooded sides of the highest ravines there are parklike glades where the elk late in the afternoons come out to feed. It is difficult to imagine a more beautiful sight than is then afforded by these stately and graceful animals. Although their number in the park may sometimes reach as high as 60,000 head, it is rare for visitors to see a single specimen. Visitors are taken in stages around a regular route arranged for viewing the natural phenomena of that great outdoor museum.

The elk dislike to be pursued by tourists with cameras and keep away from the stage routes. If visitors would leave the highways of the park and seek out its byways, either on foot or by pack and saddle trips, they would have a marvelous opportunity to study the greatest exhibit which survives of our mountain wild life—not only the elk, but mountain sheep, deer, beaver and many other animals.

Korea and Chosen.

Chosen is the oldest name for Korea and is Chinese in derivation. The history of the name of the country is briefly as follows: From about 960 A. D. the name of the country was Kori or Koryu. In 1392, when the last dynasty was founded, a still older name, Chosen or Choson (Chinese Chaosien, morning freshness or morning calm) was revived. In 1897 the kingdom was called Daihan by the Koreans, but it became officially Chosen in 1910 when it was annexed to Japan.

The Snail's Horns.

A snail's manner of withdrawing his horns is very interesting. He does not pull them back bodily into their receptacles, but turns them inside out, just as one sometimes turns the fingers of a tight glove.

Took His Advice.

"He told his wife she ought to take cooking lessons."

"Did she?"

"Well, yes. She sent for her mother to come and give her a three months' course."

Horrible Crime.

"Not long ago," said a judge, "a colored woman came into court to see what could be done about securing a pardon for her husband, who was in jail.

"'What was yoah husband sentenced for?' I asked.

"'Ah ain't shuah, judge, but Ah thinks 'twus embiasonment!'" was the reply.—Case and Comment.

Barrie as a Baseball Fan.

When Sir James Matthew Barrie was last in this country the came here to see Charles Frohman in 1914) he was dissatisfied with his suit in a city hotel and changed to rooms in another part of the hotel. His reason for doing this was that from the window of the quarters first assigned to him he could not get a good view of the electrical score board on the Times building. The world's series was being played, and the author of "Peter Pan" spent many hours breathlessly watching the ball of light speed across the mimic diamond.

This revelation of Barrie as a baseball "fan" is one of many interesting intimate views of the great Scotch writer obtained by one of the very few Americans who have penetrated beyond the barriers of Barrie's shyness—Isaac F. Marcosson, the biographer of Charles Frohman. No one in this country, with the possible exception of Frohman, knew why the distinguished visitor changed his rooms or that he was interested in baseball.—Joyce Kilmer in New York Times.

Why Wool Is Warm.

The main difference between wool and linen is that wool is animal and linen is vegetable and that the fiber of wool is irregular. When the irregular fiber of the wool is woven it contains certain little cells which hold a neutral layer of air. The linen has no such cells. This layer of air which the cells make is like an invisible coat that keeps the normal heat of the body from leaving it and that at the same time keeps the atmosphere which is colder than the body temperature from entering it.

This layer of air is, as some writer has put it, a little gaseous armor.

If woolen yarn is rendered straight and regular by some special treatment in the mill and is woven like linen it is only a very little warmer than linen. That little is due to its being animal, which has always more warmth to it than the vegetable product.

Diedrich Knickerbocker.

It may be that a Dutchman named Knickerbocker did live in the early history of New York, but if he did there are no records extant to prove it. The truth is, the name was created by Washington Irving, who applied it to all residents of New York in his time who happened to be descended from the early Dutch settlers. Irving used this quaint Dutch character in his "Knickerbocker History of New York" to burlesque the early days of the city. The volume purported to have been the work of Diedrich Knickerbocker and gave an amusing and satirical account of the early Dutch settlers. Records of the period tell us that the book bitterly offended their descendants, who never forgave Irving for his fling at them.—New York Times.

Suffered From Severe Headaches

FOR TWO YEARS

Headaches are many and varying; but when the head starts to ache you may be sure there is some chief cause. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but the presence of the headache clearly shows that unless the cause is removed some other baneful disease is liable to assert itself.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for the past forty years, been curing all kinds of headaches and has proved itself to be a remedy that cures where others fail.

Mr. I. N. Petershea, Dnieper, Man. writes: "I am only too glad to be able to state that I derived wonderful benefit from Burdock Blood Bitters. I suffered from severe headaches for two years. I was treated by several doctors but received no benefit until by chance I heard of B.B.B., and I at once procured two bottles and in a short time I was completely cured. I am and always will be grateful for what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I am glad to recommend it to all who suffer from headaches. B.B.B. is the oldest and the best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington

Delightfully smart and simple in its design, this blouse might depend for its success upon the collar alone—since the season is so partial to collars—but a wide box plait in each front and in each half of the back cannot be overlooked. The sleeves are set in with slight gathers at the shoulder and with fulness all the way to the wrist, where a roll cuff finishes. Under a girdle of silk or satin the waist is blouse very full.

If contrasting goods are used for the cuffs and to outline the collar they will give a softness to the plain, tailored lines, and button decoration of the collar and of the fronts will be very neat and appropriate.

Satin, silk, cotton poplin and the like are suitable materials for developing—also butcher's linen for the most practical wear. This is an ideal model for the business woman or tidy housekeeper. Making a few box plaits is a simple matter, and that's about all there is to copying this design; the pattern is named and marked so that it is the only guide needed by the home seamstress.

The waist pattern, No. 8,110, cuts in sizes 36-42. To make in size 36 requires 2¾ yards of 36-inch material, with ¾ yard 27-inch contrasting. To obtain the pattern send to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

The German Losses In The West Staggering

BRITISH NAVY BRINGS DOWN A ZEPPELIN

BRITISH HAVE FIRM GRIP ON TWO PARTS OF HINDENBURG LINE

Fresh Progress Made at Roeux by General Haig's Forces Who Are Also Maintaining An Unbreakable Hold on Bullecourt---Von Bethman Hollweg to State Germany's Peace Terms To-morrow in the Reichstag.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, May 14.—Progress in the village of Roeux was announced by British Field Marshal Haig to-day. "North-east of Epey and to the north of Ypres hostile raids at night were repulsed," he reported. "A few were taken prisoners. At Roeux we progressed during the night in the village." Roeux has been a storm centre of fighting for the past three or four days. As at Fresnoy and Bullecourt, the German counter attacks there have been almost continuous, and the fighting of the greatest intensity. Roeux is one of the key points in the Oppy supplemental line of German defence. By progressing in Roeux and maintaining an unbreakable hold on Bullecourt, the British to-day have a grip on two parts of the vaunted Hindenburg line. The Oppy front is a so-called "switch line" to the main German positions. Bullecourt itself lies directly on the Hindenburg line.

LONDON, May 14.—A strike of London 'bus drivers is seriously interfering with the output of munitions. Munition workers are in many cases entirely unable to reach their places of employment in munition plants.

(Special cable by William Philip Simms)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, May 14.—Only two posts remain in German hands in the village of Bullecourt at the time this despatch is written to-day. The liveliest sort of fighting, which continued all through the night, was still in progress in and around the village. The two posts to which the Germans still tenaciously cling are to the south and north of the town. Around these a swaying fight is centering.

PETROGRAD, May 14.—Germany has withdrawn forty divisions (approximately six hundred thousand men) from the Russian eastern front and hurried them to France to oppose the Franco-British offensive.

PARIS, May 14.—(French Official).—French troops inflicted bloody losses on German reconnaissance parties at a number of points along the front last night, to-day's official statement asserted. The German attacks were particularly strong north-east of Vauxillon, west of Craonne, Hill 108 and in the Champagne.

The War Office said the usual cannonading was in progress over most of the front.

LONDON, May 14.—Munitions machinists at Derby decided to-day to return to work, pending a Government inquiry into the grievances which led them to strike last week. They are still on strike at other points.

SIR JOHN JELLICOE IS APPOINTED CHIEF OF THE NAVAL STAFF

Examiner Special:

LONDON, May 14.—Britain's nation-wide clamor for a shake up in the Admiralty and greater energy in combatting the submarine menace resulted in the announcement of numerous naval changes in the House of Commons to-day by Sir Edward Carson.

Foremost in the changes announced is the appointment of Sir John Jellicoe, First Sea Lord, as Chief of the Naval Staff. The new post is in addition to his command of First Sea Lord. Sir Henry Oliver was named Deputy Chief.

"The purpose of the changes," Sir Edward Carson announced to the House, "is to free the Naval Staff from administrative work, and, secondly, to strengthen the shipbuilding department of the Admiralty."

Sir John Jellicoe was the main figure in the last Admiralty shake-up, by which Admiral Sir Henry Jackson was retired from the post of First Sea Lord.

Of recent weeks a storm of criticism of the Admiralty has been brewing of such size as to lead to the belief that Sir Edward Carson's retirement would be forced.

GERMAN FLEET MAY GIVE BATTLE.

LONDON, May 14.—Is Germany making ready to pit her battle fleet against Britain in a decisive naval engagement?

The belief is strong among naval authorities that these frequent and apparently aimless destroyer raids on the British coast may be "feelers out" for such a great sea battle.

The way the British naval experts look at it, Germany is certainly up to some game in rushing her light cruiser squadron out of Kiel and engaging in apparently futile attacks against defenceless towns — manoeuvres which have invariably cost her more heavily than the British.

Whatever their meaning, these raids are welcomed by the British fleet, which, powerless against submarines and mines, has been chafing at its leash since the Jutland fight.

In the coming battle, which naval authorities feel certain will take place before Germany finally gives in, Britain is completely confident that her fleet will achieve a tremendous victory.

Later the battery was changed from a field to a howitzer battery, and became known as the 2nd Canadian Howitzer Battery, Lieut. Huycke remaining with the unit. He is the second one of Judge Huycke's sons to be wounded, Lieut. Douglas Huycke, who was wounded last year, is on the staff at Kingston at present, and Lieut. BRILLIANT ATTACK BY BRITISH TROOPS

LIEUT. G. MEREDITH HUYCKE
Son of His Honour Judge Huycke, who is officially reported severely wounded on May 10th.

LENS THREATENED

LONDON, May 13.—Concentrated on a front of seven or eight miles the British troops during Friday night and Saturday morning made a brilliant attack on the Hindenburg line from Bullecourt north across the Arras-Cambrai road to the north of the Scarpe east of Fampoux. The troops established themselves in Bullecourt, where hundreds of prisoners were taken; and continuing the offensive on Sunday after desperate fighting possessed themselves of most of the village. A German position on the Arras-Cambrai road, about two-thirds of a mile wide, as well as a mile and a half of trench system near Roeux have been taken, and the British occupy the western section of Roeux.

Hence General Haig's taking it piecemeal, patiently and deliberately, only after every "push" has been preceded by artillery preparation which has flattened out the Prussian defences and abolished the communicating trenches so that the men in the forward dugouts have often been without food or supplies for two and three days at a time.

Prussian Losses Increase.

Estimates last week regarding the Prussian losses were entirely too low and there have been substantial additions during the last seven days. They are now stated to be nearer 310,000, of which about 60,000 prisoners have been counted on both fronts, about 200,000 are believed to have been seriously wounded, and 60,000 to have been killed in action—an unusually large proportion owing to the desperate nature of the Prussian counter-attacks in dense formation, attempting by sheer weight of men to regain lost positions.

Bullecourt has been the centre of these repeated assaults ever since the Australians pushed their way into it last Monday. The Hindenburg line ran through the village, which was honeycombed with parallel trenches, communicating lines of defences and dugouts, the whole being most strongly fortified. In the vicinity is a small wood which was a nest of machine-gun positions. The wood was first thoroughly shelled till only broken boles of trees remained.

Then the Australians carried it with a rush and pushed into the village which they have held with bulldog tenacity against assaults of liquid fire, boiling oil and other unpleasant accompaniments of Prussian attacks. To-day's advance here was made possible chiefly through their valor and determination. Biencourt, about a mile and a half away, is the immediate objective of the move, and the Wotan or Drocourt-Queant line half a mile further on is gravely menaced at its southern end.

Lens Again Threatened.

Little has appeared about the situation at Lens during the week, but the British line around it is being gradually extended until it is more than half encircled. The British are in the suburbs of the Cite St.-Pierre and the Cite Jeanne d'Arc on the north-west, hold Lievin securely on the west and on the south last Wednesday captured a hamlet called La Coulotte, just west of Avion.

Lens still has one means of receiving supplies by the railway which runs from a loop below the town north east of Lille. This junction is just north of Avion, which is only a mile and a half from La Coulotte, so that there is every prospect that with their methodical advance this source of supply will soon be cut off and the important coal centre of Lens be in British hands.

GERMANS SUFFER TERRIBLE CASUALTIES ON WESTERN FRONT

Before the French Alone in the Two Weeks From April 16th to May 1st, Huns Lost 200,000 Men Killed, Wounded or Captured

EVEN HEAVIER SINCE

(By Henry Wood.)

With the French Armies in the Field, May 14.—Germany lost 280,000 men in killed, wounded and captured in the period from April 16 to May 1 on the French front alone. In the two weeks since May 1, it was estimated to-day her additional losses have been proportionally greater than this staggering mortality. These figures, on which these estimates are based, are those of headquarters and they are conservative. The totals may be much more. Between April 14 and 27, it is known the Germans were forced on account of losses, to withdraw twenty divisions (approximately 300,000 men) from the front, replacing them with fresh divisions. Since that date more than a dozen additional divisions have been practically wiped out. The ninth Bavarian reserve division, numbering seven thousand in its infantry battle array, lost 2,383 in prisoners alone, which, according to established scientific military statistics, means a minimum of three thousand killed and wounded. This means the division lost three-fourths of its entire number of effectives.

BRITISH HAVE FIRM GRIP ON TWO PARTS OF HINDENBURG LINE

Fresh Progress Made at Roeux by General Haig's Forces Who Are Also Maintaining An Unbreakable Hold on Bullecourt---Von Bethman Hollweg to State Germany's Peace Terms To-morrow in the Reichstag.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, May 14.—Progress in the village of Roeux was announced by British Field Marshal Haig to-day. "North-east of Epey and to the north of Ypres hostile raids at night were repulsed," he reported. "A few were taken prisoners. At Roeux we progressed during the night in the village." Roeux has been a storm centre of fighting for the past three or four days. As at Fresnoy and Bullecourt, the German counter attacks there have been almost continuous, and the fighting of the greatest intensity. SIR JOHN JELLICOE IS APPOINTED CHIEF OF THE NAVAL STAFF

Examiner Special:

LONDON, May 14.—Britain's nation-wide clamor for a shake up in the Admiralty and greater energy in combatting the submarine menace resulted in the announcement of numerous naval changes in the House of Commons to-day by Sir Edward Carson.

Foremost in the changes announced is the appointment of Sir John Jellicoe, First Sea Lord, as Chief of the Naval Staff. The new post is in addition to his command of First Sea Lord. Sir Henry Oliver was named Deputy Chief.

"The purpose of the changes," Sir Edward Carson announced to the House, "is to free the Naval Staff from administrative work, and, secondly, to strengthen the shipbuilding department of the Admiralty."

Sir John Jellicoe was the main figure in the last Admiralty shake-up, by which Admiral Sir Henry Jackson was retired from the post of First Sea Lord.

Of recent weeks a storm of criticism of the Admiralty has been brewing of such size as to lead to the belief that Sir Edward Carson's retirement would be forced.

ANOTHER ATHLETE KILLED.

OTTAWA, May 12.—Another good Ottawa athlete, Lt. Leslie Tubman, has been killed in action in France. He played lacrosse with the Ottawas in the Ottawa Lacrosse League, paddled with the New Edinburgh's in the Canadian Canoe Association, and played football for the Ottawas in the Inter-Provincial Union, before which he had helped the Ottawa Argonauts win the Quebec Rugby Union honours. He was also a crack middle distance runner. The third soldier boy of the Tubman family. Harry, is now training in an artillery unit in England.

Private Joseph Quilty, brother of "Silver" Quilty of the Ottawa College rugby team, was recently reported killed in action. Another brother is overseas.

Mr. William George Heard, R.R. No. 4, Peterborough, has received the following letter from the Minister of Militia and Defence:

Ottawa, May 9th.

Dear Mr. Heard,—I desire to express to you my very sincere sympathy in the recent decease of your Canadian battalion at the front.

BRILLIANT ATTACK BY BRITISH TROOPS

LIEUT. G. MEREDITH HUYCKE
Son of His Honour Judge Huycke, who is officially reported severely wounded on May 10th.

LENS THREATENED

LONDON, May 13.—Concentrated on a front of seven or eight miles the British troops during Friday night and Saturday morning made a brilliant attack on the Hindenburg line from Bullecourt north across the Arras-Cambrai road to the north of the Scarpe east of Fampoux. The troops established themselves in Bullecourt, where hundreds of prisoners were taken; and continuing the offensive on Sunday after desperate fighting possessed themselves of most of the village. A German position on the Arras-Cambrai road, about two-thirds of a mile wide, as well as a mile and a half of trench system near Roeux have been taken, and the British occupy the western section of Roeux.

It is evident there is not much left of the famous Hindenburg line which was broken at Vimy, broken at Vendhuile, on the Cambrai-St. Quentin Canal, broken by the French between La Fere and St. Quentin, and, lastly, broken at Bullecourt. What there is left however, is of wonderfully strong construction and could not be taken at once in a general assault, except at such a terrible cost of lives that victory would be almost as disastrous as defeat.

Hence General Haig's taking it piecemeal, patiently and deliberately, only after every "push" has been preceded by artillery preparation which has flattened out the Prussian defences and abolished the communicating trenches so that the men in the forward dugouts have often been without food or supplies for two and three days at a time.

Prussian Losses Increase.

Estimates last week regarding the Prussian losses were entirely too low and there have been substantial additions during the last seven days. They are now stated to be nearer 310,000, of which about 50,000 prisoners have been counted on both fronts, about 200,000 are believed to have been seriously wounded, and 60,000 to have been killed in action—an unusually large proportion owing to the desperate nature of the Prussian counter-attacks in dense formation, attempting by sheer weight of men to regain lost positions.

Bullecourt has been the centre of these repeated assaults ever since the Australians pushed their way into it last Monday. The Hindenburg line ran through the village, which was honeycombed with parallel trenches, communicating lines of defences and dugouts, the whole being most strongly fortified. In the vicinity is a small wood which was a nest of machine-gun positions. The wood was first thoroughly shelled till only broken boles of trees remained.

Then the Australians carried it with a rush and pushed into the village which they have held with bulldog tenacity against assaults of liquid fire, boiling oil and other unpleasant accompaniments of Prussian attacks. To-day's advance here was made possible chiefly through their valor and determination. Riencourt, about a mile and a half away, is the immediate objective of the move, and the Wotan or Drocourt-Quéant line half a mile farther on is gravely menaced at its southern end.

Lens Again Threatened.

Little has appeared about the situation at Lens during the week, but the British line around it is being gradually extended, until it is more than half encircled. The British are in the suburbs of the Cite St. Pierre and the Cite Jeanne d'Arc on the north-west, hold Lievin securely on the west and on the south last Wednesday captured a hamlet called La Coulotte, just west of Avion.

Lens still has one means of receiving supplies by the railway which runs from a loop below the town north east of Lille. This junction is just north of Avion, which is only a mile and a half from La Coulotte, so that there is every prospect that with their methodical advance this source of supply will soon be cut off and the important coal centre of Lens be in British hands.

GERMANS SUFFER TERRIBLE CASUALTIES ON WESTERN FRONT

Before the French Alone in the Two Weeks From April 16th to May 1st, Huns Lost 200,000 Men Killed, Wounded or Captured

EVEN HEAVIER SINCE

(By Henry Wood.)

With the French Armies in the Field, May 14.—Germany lost 250,000 men in killed, wounded and captured in the period from April 16 to May 1 on the French front alone. In the two weeks since May 1, it was estimated to-day her additional losses have been proportionally greater than this staggering mortality. These figures, on which these estimates are based, are those of headquarters and they are conservative. The totals may be much more. Between April 14 and 27, it is known the Germans were forced on account of losses, to withdraw twenty divisions (approximately 300,000 men) from the front, replacing them with fresh divisions. Since that date more than a dozen additional divisions have been practically wiped out. The ninth Bavarian reserve division, numbering seven thousand in its infantry battle array, lost 2,363 in prisoners alone, which, according to established scientific military statistics, means a minimum of three thousand killed and wounded. This means the division lost three-fourths of its entire number of effectives.

REV. CANON CORNISH DEPARTS

The departure of Rev. Canon Cornish from the city, to-morrow, represents a large loss to the Christian ministry and Christian citizenship of Peterborough. About fourteen months ago he came from Yorktown, Saskatchewan, to take the duties of Rev. Canon Davidson, Rector of St. John's, who went to the front as military chaplain, and is now faithfully doing his duty in France. It was expected that Rev. Canon Cornish would remain till the Rector's return; but it appears that his abilities and services are appreciated elsewhere as highly as in Peterborough. The Bishop of Saskatchewan could not forego his claim upon Canon Cornish; and the people of St. John's had to assent to his return to the West, with a reluctance that grew the longer he stayed, and the more they knew of him, and, resultantly, the more they came to revere him and "esteem in love for his works' sake."

During his incumbency of St. John's, he has won golden opinions from all men, both as a minister and a man. To his reverent and dignified rendering of the services of the Church, he has added earnest, effective preaching, marked by the eloquence that comes of sincerity and deep convictions of religious truth. He preached what has become less rare in these times—the Gospel. With close attention to parish duties he conjoined a practical and sympathetic interest in the work of the subsidiary organizations of Church activity; and earned and got the affectionate appreciation of all the elements of the congregation and parish, by his personal benignity and unostentatious devotion to his sacred duties.

As a citizen, Canon Cornish gained high favour, especially in relation to patriotic service. Both from the pulpit and from the platform, he made frequent and fervent appeal to the public sense of patriotic duty in relation to the war, that will be gratefully remembered.

Mrs. Cornish, in her less conspicuous place in parish and city life, was an effective helpmeet to Canon Cornish, and did her share in earning the esteem and love that relinquishes both with the deepest regret and follows them with the heartiest good wishes of every part of the congregation and [illegible] and of the town generally.

LIBERALISM AND PROGRESS

The city of Toronto has been stigmatized as being, according to the expression often employed, "a hot-bed of Toryism." It has been overwhelmingly Conservative. A "Grit" in a flock of Toronto street birds, or an assembled corps of citizens, has been a rara avis. Parliamentary, legislative, and very largely, municipal honours and emoluments, were monopolized by the dominant party. This was a condition that by its very weight, kept down Liberalism—in a hopeless minority. But such preponderance works its own remedy. The people place a limit to the subservency, or—a better word—slavery to party names and considerations. Heretofore, nomination of a Conservative candidate for parliament or the legislature was tantamount to his election. A man thus automatically elected, would give automatic service, and it has come to pass that Toronto has had the most perfunctory, careless, indifferent parliamentary representation, especially in the Provincial Legislature, of any place in Canada—simply because it was the most solidly and slavishly Tory place in Canada.

But this party preponderance, evil in its workings and results, naturally becomes top-heavy, and the natural discouragement of Liberals, under the grip of party in Toronto, with the new spirit of patriotism, is recovering from the despondency, and lack of organization resulting therefrom.

After years of confusion and disorganization and, comparative, impotency in active politics, Liberalism seems to be getting a grip of things at last. There is hope in the new national temper that has been aroused; and appeals to patriotism and the spirit of progress and the ideals of good government, will no longer fall on deaf ears—ears stuffed with partisanship, that with its success has long been arrogant. Appeal will be made to an electorate with a new spirit. In this condition, the Liberals of Toronto are taking a more militant grip of things, and are displacing disorganization with organization, and resultantly replacing with efficiency the demoralization that comes from lack of organization. In all parts of the city, Provincial Riding Associations are being formed, and men and women of the very highest standing are accepting office and undertaking the responsibilities of its duties courageously and hopefully. Interest and initiation have replaced the policy of sitting with folded hands, inactive under the discouragement of a huge party predominance, and leaving public affairs to drift.

The revival, thus indicated, of organised, efficient and militant Liberalism in Toronto, is a political and public matter of real import, and to none more than to a large number of the Conservative majority in Toronto, who, under the changed national atmosphere of patrioitc spirit and higher ambition, begin to feel the folly of following in the train of a party ascendancy which induces indifferent public service and the sacrifices of its interests to the interests of party.

GOOD OUT OF EVIL.

Though we seem to have had enough—and more—of war in Canada; and though we long for peace, and the exorcism of the war spirit, Canada should not abandon the war spirit, or at least one form of manifestation of it. Under it we have done great things, and if the accomplished results in the making of munitions is followed up by the application of the war spirit to industrial achievements in peace, we want to keep the war spirit alive and going. What Canada has industrially accomplished under the drive of the war spirit, she can accomplish in the promotion of the individual interests of peace.

In September, 1914, when the late lamented General Sir Sam Hughes undertook the first order for shrapnel shells, Canada's capacity for shell production amounted to 240 per week of 18-pound shrapnel shells, made at the Dominion arsenal, Quebec. To-day this capacity represents an increase in productive shell capacity of over 1000-fold. To-day the capacity of Canadian factories approximates 460,000 18-pound shrapnel complete rounds per week, including cartridge cases, primers, fuses and propellants. In addition to this amazing output, Canada has a weekly capacity of nearly 400,000 high explosive shells, ranging in size from 18-pounders to 9.2 inch, making a total weekly output of 800,000 shells, more than two thousand times greater than was possible with our weekly capacity of output at the beginning of the war. Into the present weekly output enters with other supplies made independently every week, about 25,000 tons of steel, 2,500 tons of brass, 750 tons of copper, 250 tons of zinc, 200 tons of antimony, 150 tons of resin, several tons of ferro-molybdenum, and about 1,500 tons of explosives—500 tons of cordite, 500 tons of trinitrotoluol, and 500 tons of nitro-cellulose powder.

These figures in detail afford the ordinary reader some slight idea of the complicated processes and materials that come into play in producing means of killing our fellow-men. When we see frequently high-piled truck loads of ammunition boxes passing down George street to the factories, we think that a lot of shells must be made in Peterborough. Yet these boxes are only a few of the 800,000 boxes made weekly, and in the process requiring about 3 1-2 million feet of lumber. The weekly value of these shell products can be fancied, from the fact that the total amount of orders placed in Canada is 800 million dollars.

Apart from the help Canada has, by the production of munitions, given to aid allied successes, the consideration of the benefits Canada has received bulk largely. These do not most consist in the extraordinary wages earned by workmen, but in the increased skill required by the workmen themselves. Workmen have been compelled to work with the highest skill: for every part of every shell must be made to drawings and specifications, with rigid inspection analysis and test before acceptance. A great impetus has been given to the production of metals, lumber, timber. Chemical and other industries have been stimulated, and we have learned to use waste products, for munition purposes, which after the war can be devoted to the production of useful domestic articles.

In a word, in meeting the demands of a destructive war Canada has become equipped for a constructive war, an industrial war, that will follow; by increased efficiency of workmen, by a higher standard of skill and economy and mechanical effectiveness; by new resourcefulness in the development of our raw material; by stimulated enterprise, and by greater confidence in ourselves to meet the demands that may be made upon us.

This war has remade Canada in many ways, enlarged her outlook, stimulated and created new ambitions, and taught us lessons that if laid to heart will in the way of national betterment, in material, political, moral and ethical ways, be profitable reward, if not ample compensation for the part we have played and the sacrifices we have made.

MILITARY NEWS

son, No. 22614 Pte. William Henry Heard, who, in sacrificing his life at the front in action with the enemy, has rendered the highest services of a worthy citizen.

The heavy loss which you and the nation have sustained would indeed be depressing were it not redeemed by the knowledge that the brave comrade for whom we mourn performed his duties fearlessly and well as became a good soldier, and gave his life for the great cause of human liberty and the defence of the Empire.

Again extending to you in your bereavement my condolence and heartfelt sympathy.—I am, yours faithfully,

A. E. Kemp,
Minister of Militia and Defence for Canada.

Pte. C. Robinson, one of the 93rd boys, now with the C.A.S.C., wishes to thank the Brinton Carpet Co. and employees for the parcel. It took exactly six months to reach its destination, but he says it was well worth waiting for. Pte. Robinson has just had word from the War Office to say he is recommended for the Distinction Badge, for services rendered. No doubt his many friends will congratulate him. As no decorations are allowed to be worn in uniform he has to wait till he gets into "civies." He wishes to be remembered to all friends and would be pleased to hear from any of them, and hopes to be back in Peterborough about Christmas, 1917.

OTTAWA, May 13.—About sixty delegates are present at the first convention of the Ontario branch of the Great War Veterans' Association held in Ottawa. They held one executive session this morning, and were given a banquet by the city in the evening.

Addresses were delivered by Hon. Mr. Crothers, Minister of Labour and F. B. McCurdy, Parliamentary Secretary of the Militia Department. Mr. Crothers said the Government was determined to do what it could to give returned soldiers good positions in life. Mr. McCurdy said that in the very near future a pension bill would be introduced in Parliament, which he thought would meet with the approval of the association.

Among the resolutions passed was one urging the Militia Department to see that the nature of wounds and disabilities and records of service be included in any discharge papers. There are 3,100 returned soldiers in Ontario. The headquarters in future will be in Toronto. Another session will be held Monday.

Messrs. Peter Victor and R. H. Muir represented the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans. They returned from the Capital this morning.

Private Christopher McGrath Tells of Meeting Peterboro' Boys Before The Battle

Pte. McGrath Was Hit on the Boot by Shrapnel in the Vimy Ridge Fight--A Narrow Escape--The Germans Had Good Dugouts.

Mrs. M. McGrath, 191 Reid street, has received the following interesting letter from her son, Pte. Christopher McGrath, who is now in France with the 1st Battalion. The letter reads as follows:

Dear Mother,—It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you these few lines, to let you know I am O.K. and I hope this will find you in the best of health. I suppose you have seen before now an account of the big drive the Canadians made on April 9th. I wrote you just before we went into action. The battle was to have started on Easter Sunday, but the weather would not permit, so that gave me a chance to go to Church in the morning and in the afternoon we had a good rest and a fine supper before we started. The 2nd and 3rd Battalions were with us and we had a good chance to see most of the boys from Peterborough. We were certainly glad to see them.

At 8 o'clock we lined up with the bands playing and the boys singing that good old song "Just Before the Battle, Mother." It sure was some sight to see those men going forward so cheerfully.

The Front Line.

When we reached the front line trenches "Fritzie" opened fire on us with his gas shells and liquid fire. We were nearly strangled but we got away all right, and that night we slept in an open field. It was not any too warm with the ground with snow, but Bob Scully, with his usual cheerfulness said, 'don't worry fellows; to-morrow night we will sleep in Fritzie's dugouts and, thank God, we did.

About 5 o'clock in the morning we started to advance on the German trenches. They shelled us strong and wiped out one platoon, but we stayed with it and, believe me, mother, war is hell. I could see the boys falling all around me, and the chap at my side was struck and I was hit on the boot by shrapnel. It is all too horrible to tell. When we advanced a few yards we would crawl into shell holes until the Major blew his whistle and go on a few yards more. In this way we came within fifteen yards of the enemy trenches, when the Major said, "All right, boys," and we went straight for them. It was fun to see them run to us with their hands up and their usual cry of 'mercy, kamerade.'

Good Dug-Outs.

They sure have some fine dug-outs, sixty feet under ground. In them we found music boxes, cigars, looking glasses and all kinds of 'eats' and comforts, not forgetting electric light. There were a great many Peterborough boys wounded, including a young fellow by the name of Ringer, whom I knew. Sergeant Major Brooks was also killed. He was among the first Canadians to come to France and it was hard to see him fall when we are at the point of victory. Poor Lieut. Milburn fell before the big drive. He used to talk so much about it and we certainly lost a good friend when he fell.

Sprained Ankle.

On the way up I sprained my ankle badly and though it was very painful I soon forgot myself in the heat of the fight. I went on fighting and praying for six days before we got back and then I could not get my boot off. The Doctor dressed it and sent me to the hospital for a few weeks. The nursing sisters are good to us and do all they can to cheer us up. I was having a little sleep beside a big German gun when Bob Scully and some more of my pals thought I was a dead German. They were going to search me when somebody called out, 'rum is up.' I was on my feet in no time, in spite of the fact that I was suffering pain with my ankle. The fellows certainly opened their eyes when they saw who it was.

Well, mother, some day I hope to tell you more about the big drive. Remember me to all my friends. Tell them I hope to see them soon.

Your loving son,
CHRIS.

Chinaman, Found With Throat Slashed, Says White Man Is To Blame

WATFORD, May 14.—Bathed in his own blood, and with his throat and windpipe cut, Charlie Mark, a Chinese laundryman, was found lying on his bed in the rear of his laundry. The wounded man, the only Chinaman in Watford, swears that the wounds were not self-inflicted, and that a man, described by him as a "short" dark Englishman, with a short beard," cut his throat after demanding money.

No one in the town saw anyone answering the description of the mysterious assailant blamed by Mark for his wounds, but the general description furnished by the Chinaman, in what he believed to be an ante-mortem statement, has been sent to Sarnia, and the police of the boys dor have all been notified.

The case is more than a mystery. The condition of the man and the fact that a bloody razor, identified by Mark as his own, was found close to the bed, immediately gave rise to the attempted a Jolde theory. That the wounded man, before he was rushed to the General Hospital at Sarnia, vehemently denied. He reiterated that an Englishman had slashed his throat. He claims $25 in cash and a gold ring are missing.

Reports from Sarnia say that the man has a chance of recovery, but when discovered this afternoon it was believed that he would not live until morning.

ACCIDENTAL DISCOVERY.

Discovery of the crime was accidental. George Chambers called for his laundry. There being no one in the front shop he called. Mark answered feebly. Chambers called again and the answer this time was a blood curdling one, that was known over the partition. Chambers immediately called William Clap and L. R. Kennel. The three men, entering the back shop, found the Chinaman lying on his bed, soaked in blood and with a slashed throat.

Dr. Siddal was called, and, with Rev. J. F. Fortner, took the man to the Sarnia Hospital.

CHINAMAN'S STORY.

Before he was removed to Sarnia Mark recovered sufficiently to tell his story of the crime. He speaks good English, and was able to give what the listeners declared was an apparent straightforward story. Last night, he declared, he had been feeling ill, and slept but little. This afternoon he lay down on his bed for a nap, removing only his shoes. He was awakened, he swore, by the "short, stout Englishman" bending over him. Money was demanded and then his throat was cut. The next he remembered was when he heard Mr. Chambers call.

BAD MONEY IN BANK.

The Chinaman had been in Watford for two years, and is regarded as above the usual class of Celestial. He is known to have money in the bank, in several accounts, and no motive for suicide can be ascribed. He has been the sole Chinaman in town for some time, although for several days he has been visited by another Chinaman. This second man left the town. Whether there is any connection between this visit and the crime is a problem still unsolved, although the coincidence has been sufficient ground for comment here.

When the razor was found, the weapon with which the man's throat had been cut, Mark declared, that it was his, and that it had been taken from his trunk by the mysterious visitor.

Favourably Received

The appeal of the organization of Resources Committee to the ministers of the district to preach a sermon on production has been most favourably received. A typical reply came from Rev. A. Irwin, of Norwood, who wrote, "I have already dealt with the subject you mention and the results are proving the value of the effort. Every farmer is right on the job in real ernest.

Moreover as Scoutmaster of the Norwood troops have organized the troops under the watchword. "A clean backyard and a truck garden for every scout." And the boys are right at it."

BELGIANS WANT NO GERMAN-MADE PEACE

MONTREAL, May 14.—All the advices being received by Belgian authorities here relative to the conditions in Belgium are unanimous in declaring that in their terrible ordeal the Belgian people remain constant to their trust, steadfastly refusing to work for the Germans. What work is done, is done for themselves. The attempt of the Germans to force a cleavage between the Walloons and Flemings has been an utter failure. The ranks of the population have closed up, and present a united front to the invaders.

As showing the spirit of the people the following letter from occupied Belgium, published in a Belgian paper, printed in France, is illuminating:

"People here are living (if it can be called living) miserably. No one can get a satisfying meal; and what food! There was a long period when no news, but sad, depressing reports came to us, when suddenly peace rumours broke out! All through the country that word of peace was repeated, and what a clamor! Ah, yes, peace, but at what a cost! We want none of it, if they keep on lying about the causes of the war, and deny the horrors everywhere perpetrated. We would rather suffer more and worse, as long as they please, as long as may be necessary, but no German peace! Never have they succeeded in putting us down! The executions, the requisitions, the starvation, the ignoble newspapers they serve out to us as a daily gall—all of that has had but one result—to rub us the wrong way; to make us hate them more and more and to give us both courage and resignation. And as to the unemployed, what do you think of them, over where you are? You should see them going by the car-loads, all of them on their way to slavery, howling "La Brabanconne" and "La Marseillaise." Oh, no we're not downhearted, and played out. And if we are not now, we surely never shall be.

That is the kind of people, the little heroic nation who dared to stand in the path of Goliath, and who are still ready to dare and suffer anything rather than have an ignoble peace—that is the kind of people Canadians are being asked to save from starvation. Daily among them the workers of the Belgian Relief Commission appear, distributing food provided by the kindness of Canadians, Americans, and others. Nothing but that food stands between them and certain death by starvation. No matter what the obstacles the people must be fed. It is a sacred duty in which all may help.

Contributions for this work will be gladly received by the Central Belgian Relief Committee, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal, or by any of the many branch committees throughout Canada.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

THE COURSE OF THE MARKET.

The stock market of the last seven days consisted partly of liquidation of old-time investments preparatory to Liberty Loan suscriptions, partly of heavy selling on the announcement of the new War Tax bill and partly of subsequent short covering which in itself indicated inherent strength in the active list that bodes well for the immediate future of investment and speculative operations. The determination to put out the Liberty loan in small denominations seems certain to insure a tremendous number of individual subscribers in proportion to the total amount to be raised. The Comptroller of the Currency estimates that in the United States at present more than 10,000,000 individuals and corporations are able to subscribe in amounts from $100 to $100,000,000, respectively. Assuming that there are more than 40,000,000 persons engaged in gainful occupations in the country besides the large number of men and women whose income is derived from their investments, the loan would be subscribed for six times over provided every individual in the United States should subscribe to the new bonds to the extent of only 5 per cent. of his or her total possessions. A realization of this fact will tend to check any unexpected conservatism induced by the magnitude of the loan. The statistical position of the stock market itself, in view of the undoubted inflation occasioned by Government borrowings on enormous scale, is bound to be reflected in the active list. The continuance of the increasing ratio of prosperity of the iron and steel industry was reflected by the 500,000 increase in the April unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation. The determination of the Administration to push its plans for a great steel fleet in addition to its previously announced scheme for a large number of wooden ships serves to point the way. There seems to be little question in the minds of the business men of large calibre that to a great extent the future of the United States lies over the sea. What this means to a great extent in regard to copper and steel stocks, steamship issues and many other industrial specialties could easily be under-estimated. Meanwhile, the initiative of the moment is largely confined to the flotation of the Liberty Loan.

The Business Situation.

The important feature of the week in the iron and steel industry was the speculation as to the needs of the Government in connection with the war. The "Iron Age" has this to say: "The hysterical reports from Washington of $1,000,000,000 outlay for American merchant marine, the diversion to Government uses of products of every steel mill in the country, and cancellation of existing contracts between the mills and private buyers have given some concern to manufacturing consumers. The fact is that no such drastic action has been determined upon, and it is not improbable that needs of the Shipping Board will be met by voluntary action of steel trade. In exports a 10,000-ton sale of oil pipe and supplies to Burmah, India, is of interest, the order going to the National Tube Company. France is in the market for 20,000 tons of rails. Pig iron holds steadily to its upward march. On Southern foundry iron the advance for this year's delivery is $1, or to $38 Birmingham for No. 2, and in Chicago markets iron for first half of 1918 is $2 higher, or $40, closing half the gap that has existed between 1917 and 1918 prices." In regard to general conditions, Dun's "Review" says: "A month of readjustment to new conditions has brought little disturbance in business, and only in relatively few instances are signs of special hesitation apparent. Lessening of ordinary demands has continued in some important branches, largely because of the extreme prices, and backward weather has retarded retail distribution of seasonable merchandise in most sections of the country. Maintenance of a large volume of business throughout the country is indicated by bank clearings at the principal centres, the total this week amounting to $5,954,758,620, an increase of 28.8 per cent., as compared with last year, and of 57.5 per cent., as contrasted with 1915. Partly because of financial operations and the May 1 settlements, exchanges at New York were next to the heaviest of the year, and disclose gains of 28 and 54.9 per cent., respectively, over the same period of 1916 and 1915."

Other Factors.

The financial community is so thoroughly centred in its attention that few considerations apart from the needs of the war, the needs of the allies of the United States, and their effect upon the economic conditions bound to follow once the results of the war have been made certain, that any discussion of ordinarily routine conditions hardly commands attention. Of course, so far as railroad stocks are concerned, it is vitally important to know the probable action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in regard to the 15 per cent. rate increase petition. All signs point toward Government encouragement of industrial and transportation resources and facilities.

SPECIAL PROGRAMME AT MURRAY STREET BAPTIST CHURCH

A special programme was presented during the first half of the lesson period at Murray Street Baptist Sunday School yesterday, in recognition of Mother's Day. The lesson for the day was read by Master Hughson Johnston. Miss Doris Rathbone sang a solo and Chief Howard gave a most inspiring address on "The Duty to Mother." He closed his address with a strong appeal to the boys and girls to live in such a way that they would be a credit and honour to their parents.

CRISIS IN THE 228TH, OTTAWA IS PROBING

Eddie Oatman Says He Didn't Enlist —Merely Hired For Hockey Claims $700

Lt.-Col. Earchman May Return to Straighten out the Situation—Other Military News.

Matters have been brought to a head in the affairs of the 228th Northern Construction Battalion, which was quartered at Givens Street School, and which left for St. John, N.B., two weeks ago. Eddie Oatman, hockey player of the 228th, has returned to Montreal from St. John, and claims he never enlisted with the 228th, but was hired for hockey. Oatman claims the 228th hockey club owes him $700 wages due for playing with the team in the N.H.A. He says he was paid $400. Along with Oatman are Lt. Gordon Meeking, and Frank Carroll, of Toronto. Carroll was trainer of the team.

The Inspector-General's Department at Ottawa is investigating Oatman's statement, and it is probable that an inquiry will be ordered. Lt.-Col. Earchman, officer commanding, may come back to straighten things out. As the battalion is out of the Toronto military district, no action can be taken except from Ottawa.

Wouldn't Let Him Play.

It is stated that two other players left the battalion at Toronto. Capt. Beade, paymaster of the unit, and manager of the team, resigned his appointment here in Toronto as the Battalion was leaving for the east, because Lt.-Col Earchman refused to allow the team to play a scheduled game in Quebec.

According to the attestation records, Oatman, Meeking, and Carroll were attested by the 228th Battalion, and therefore members of the battalion.

Applications have been made for their discharge on the grounds of "not likely to become efficient soldiers." This application was made at St. John's. If the three men got their discharge nothing is known here, and Oatman states he never was a member of the 228th. According to military law it is an offence to wear the King's uniform if one is not a member of a unit.

BOWLING

To-night there will be a meeting of the City Bowling League, which will be held at the Empress hotel at seven-thirty o'clock to wind up the business of the League and to set a date on which the blind scores will be rolled off.

The names of those in the 182 column are: Heard, Fitzpatrick, Fielder, Outram, Jardine, Solomon, Henderson, Ruiter and Carter.

The high score in five pins last week was 179, J. J. Cocks and W. Heaslip being tie, will likely roll off to decide who is the better man for the weekly prize.

CELTICS DEFEATED RANGERS BY 2 TO 0.

Twenty Thousand Saw Great Game for the Glasgow Charity Cup.

GLASGOW, May 12.—The semi-final ties of the Glasgow Charity Cup competition were played off today. Twenty thousand people crowded into Ibrox Park to see the star attraction between the great rivals, Celtics and Rangers. A rousing game for a place, in which the Scottish League champions always held the upper hand, and scoring once in each half, entered the final by two goals to nil. The strong counter attraction had a decided effect on the gate at Chathi Park, where Queen's Park tackled Partick Thistle before only 8,000 people. The famous amateur club was in its best form, and made rings around the Thistles, winning a splendid game by 4 to 1. The final will be played next Saturday at Hampden Park between Celtics and Queen's Park, which will bring the Scottish soccer season to a close.

Wonderful Picture Is Coming Soon

"The Crisis" Will Be Presented at the Grand on May 21, 22 and 23

Abraham Lincoln, instead of being a vague, superhuman shadow, is of the very blood and bone of "The Crisis," which the Superfeatures Limited will present at the Grand on May 21st, 22nd and 23rd, under the same management as "The Whip." Winston Churchill made Lincoln a viral personage in his novel, and William N. Selig in transferring the story to the screen, took more pains with this one character than all the others put together.

Lincoln, as portrayed by Sam D. Drane, is a gaunt, awkward, yet magnetic backwoodsman, who rose by sheer common sense to the Presidency, in spite of the scorn and contempt of his enemies, and even his enthusiastic, whole-hearted friends could not restrain a smile at the spectacle of such a leader. It is the human Lincoln, not the Lincoln that history and tradition are already converting into a demi-god.

Lincoln is intimately mixed up with the plot of "The Crisis," and appears again and again throughout the play. He is not merely a shadowy figure in a historical background, but is as necessary in tangling and then unravelling the threads of the story as any fictitious creation of Mr. Churchill's imagination. He is shown in the picturesque campaign of the sixties, when the flaming torchlight and the crackling bonfire added a homely excitement unknown in this day of electric illuminations; his debate with Douglas is dramatically staged; the events are then depicted, that converted him from a village humorist to a sublime Man of Sorrows, firm in his determination to save the nation intact, yet ever merciful to the individual sufferer; and finally, North and South, embodied in the Northern hero, Stephen Brice, and the Southern heroine, Virginia Carvel, who are united at the coffin of history's most mourned martyr.

The Veterans To Attend "Pinafore"

The members of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association have been invited to attend the production of "Pinafore" at the Grand to-morrow night. The veterans will be the guests of the Company.

Tributes To Late Capt. R. E. Picard

The requiem mass at the Church of the Sacred Heart this morning for the late Capt. R. E. Picard, was largely attended by his Peterborough friends. The memory of this young officer was honoured at St. Peter's Cathedral by Bishop O'Brien, and at the Church of the Sacred Heart by Rev. J. J. O'Brien, on Sunday morning. At the latter Church, of which his father, Mr. Joseph Picard, Sr., has been its most prominent member since its opening, Father O'Brien stated that Capt. Picard had been a pious and virtuous young man, who had enlisted because he regarded it as a conscientious and patriotic duty.

His life was clean, he was steadfast in his religious duties and had nothing to fear in death. It was natural that he should have conducted himself bravely on the field and this was recognized by his superior officers, who twice promoted him on the field.

RUSSIAN SITUATION CAUSES MUCH ANXIETY

The British Have Now Occupied All of Roeux Village

A WOLF IN SOLDIER'S CLOTHING

What a "Belgian Sergeant" Told Deported Workmen

In Soltau, there are 11,000 deported Belgian workmen, who persist in refusing to work for the Germans. One day in January, there came into the camp a prisoner, wearing the uniform of a sergeant of the 8th Belgian Infantry Regiment. He quickly fraternized with the workmen, and, speaking in good French and also in Flemish, he told them how foolish were they to endure such suffering—for many were dying daily of cold and starvation.

"The wealthy civilians in Belgium," said he, "are living on the fat of the land. The Belgian Government at Havre do not care a straw about you, and if they did, would not try to prevent you from undertaking peaceful labour for the Germans, for that need not offend your patriotic sentiments, and will ensure you good food and money to send to your starving families at home."

Day by day he moved about the camp, affecting the greatest solicitude for the Belgian workmen, but they, knowing that "peaceful labour" always eventuated in building defence works for their taskmasters, one and all refused his advice. Two months later the "Belgian soldier" was proved to be a German recruiting officer.

Says Cardinal Mercier: "Belgium is suffering to-day as she never suffered before." The whole country is a prison in which women and children are forever transfixed by the terror of starvation. Help at least to spare them this last extremity of suffering. Send a contribution to the nearest Relief Committee, or direct to the Belgian Relief Fund, 50 St. Peter Street, Montreal.

JUVENILE COURT FOR TOWN OF ST. MARY'S

OTTAWA, May 11.—An order-in-Council bringing the Juvenile Delinquents' Act into force in St. Mary's, Ont., and thereby permitting the establishment of a juvenile court in that town, has been passed by the Government. There is a section of the Juvenile Delinquents' Act which allows its application, without provincial legislation, in any town which possesses proper facilities for its enforcement; under this section the Government has acted.

HIS LETTER HOME.

A minister home from the trenches has been recounting his experiences among the Scotch regiments, and among other interesting stories he tells of a wounded Jock whom he found rather depressed, and on being asked whether he would like to dictate a letter home, he assented. Thereupon the minister brought a table with writing materials to his bedside. However, he found Jock tongue-tied and unable to begin, so much so that the parson said after a while:

"Come along now, I'm in a hurry. We must make a start."

"What will I say?"

No reply.

"Will I begin—My dear wife?"

"Ay," said Jock; "put that doon. That'll amuse her."

Otherwise the American people will find themselves with a broken down government in the midst of the most calamitous war known in history."

Mole At Zeebrugge Said To Be Breached

If Damage is Serious, Base will be Useless.

DOVER, May 15.—The concussion of the bombardment at Zeebrugge was felt here and at neighbouring coast places in a quite unusual manner. Windows and doors rattled sharply although the battle was proceeding sixty miles away. The reverberations of the guns caused the belief that the heaviest naval artillery was being employed.

Among the reports of the results current locally was one of the effect that the great mole protecting Zeebrugge harbor was badly breached. If this proves true and quick repair is impossible the port is likely to be rendered useless by the rapid silting up of the sand.

Zeebrugge is an absolutely artificial harbor, called into existence on the flats of the Belgian coast by the exigencies of submarine warfare, and practically depending on its being on the great mole.

USE ROLLER FLOUR, URGES LEADING MILLER

ST. THOMAS, May 14. — Ex-Mayor R. N. Price, who is president of the Empire Flour Mills, declares that Canada can save 2,000,000 bushels of wheat a year by the government making the regulation that the use of roller flour, containing 76 per cent. of the flour, be permitted until the end of the war.

Mr. Price claims this flour, which costs $1 per barrel less than the present high grade of flour used, makes bread just as palatable as and more wholesome than white bread.

Mr. Price made his suggestion at a public meeting called to instruct the delegates named to attend the "Win-the-War" Convention in Montreal on May 23rd to 25th.

Several strong resolutions were passed urging the adoption of selective conscription by Parliament; that drastic steps be taken to remedy the evils arising from war profiteering and speculating in foodstuffs; that, if necessary, all food stuffs be commandeered and sold to consumers at cost; that a War Council similar to the one in England be formed by Parliament to carry on the war and organize our forces, commercial, industrial, agricultural and military; that a food controller with Cabinet rank be named, and that a president of the Board of Trade be elected with Cabinet rank, he to be specifically charged with the duty of taking measures to meet economic disarrangement likely to arise after the war.

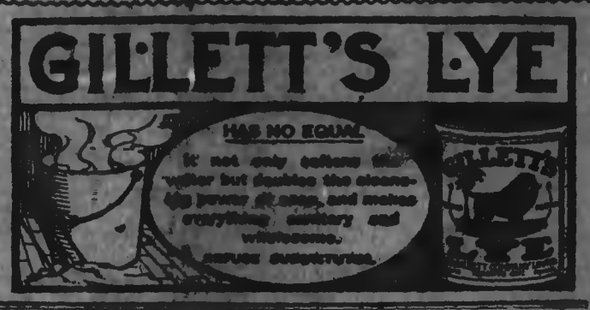
Sweden secures as its part of the bargain the release of its ships, laden with foodstuffs and other necessaries, which have been detained in British harbours.

GILLETT'S LYE



Rintelen's Money Dispensed With Lavish Hand

Witness Testifies That Bell of German Agent Would "Choke an Elephant"—A. D. Meloy Tells of Many Conversations—Labour's Peace Council Secretary Got Liberal Fees For Bulletin Reports —Careless of Money.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Andrew D. Meloy is the star witness at the trial of Captain Franz von Rintelen, of the German navy, who with seven other defendants is accused in the United States District Court, being Judge E. Cushman, of conspiring to violate the Sherman law by illegal interference with the munitions traffic with the Allies.

Mr. Melby accompanied Captain von Rintelen to England when the German officer fled from this country under a false passport and was arrested when the steamship on board which they travelled reached Plymouth. Von Rintelen is said to have posed as Meloy's secretary, but the British authorities penetrated his disguise.

Mr. Meloy's testimony is expected to furnish one of the sensations of the trial. He testified that he had returned to his office from a summer vacation to discover that von Rintelen had obtained desk room there through Frederick Stallforth. Mr. Stallforth was one of the first men to be interned by federal agents here after a state of war with Germany was declared.

With the consent of H. Snowden Marshall, United States Attorney, he recently was released, after a conference between the federal officer and von Rintelen, and it is expected that Mr. Stallforth may appear as a corroborating witness in the present trial.

After he had met von Rintelen, Mr. Meloy testified, he noticed that many employees in his office, which was shared by Mr. Stallforth, showed exceptional activity, and investigation proved to him that they were obtaining from newspaper clippings regarding the activities of Labour's National Peace Council. That is the organization through which, the Government contends, the defendants hoped to achieve their purpose of fomenting strikes and lockouts in munitions plants supplying the Allies.

After this discovery, Mr. Meloy testified, he had a conversation with von Rintelen and Mr. Stallforth. In that conversation, he said, he declared to the others that any scheme which was intended to stop munitions shipments to the Allies which was based upon strikes was an "absurdity and beyond belief by a sane man."

Careless of Money.

Further evidence of the careless distribution of much of the $500,000 which Captain Franz von Ritlen is alleged to have spent in this country in an effort to cut off munitions from the Allies came out from William Delahunty, a printer, who took the stand against von Rintelen.

Delahunty testified that H. B. Martin, who has been described as the chief disburser of von Rintelen's money, suggested in July, 1915, a trip to Bridgeport, Conn., to keep watch on labour troubles in munitions plants there and make regular reports to Martin. He added that he decided to spend his annual vacation at Bridgeport and to work there for Martin as an investigator and agent. Under instructions from Martin, he said he sent two long telegrams daily, summarizing conditions at Bridgeport.

The information sent to Martin by telegraph, Delahunty said, was exclusively taken from newspapers. He said he bought all the morning papers and made out his morning telegraphic bulletin. Then he bought the evening papers and sent Martin another report. For these labours during his summer holiday, Delahunty was well rewarded, receiving expense money and fees several times in amounts from $50 to $150.

After spending a great deal of money in telegraph tolls and other costs, Delahunty said, he finally discontinued his services because Martin never replied to his telegrams. As far as Delahunty's testimony went, it did not indicate that Martin or any member of Labour's National Peace Council had anything to do with the Bridgeport strike, but it corroborated one of the contentions of the Government, that the men who were taking von Rintelen's money busied themselves with existing labour troubles in order to make a show of activity and flatter the German captain that his plans were succeeding.

Denies He Fomented Strike.

Delahunty denied vehemently that he had been asked to promote the strike in any way and said:

"On the contrary, Mr. Martin said he would like to see it settled."

Delahunty finally admitted that, in addition to reading newspapers, he had gathered valuable information from a New York bartender at Bridgeport, and had been once to the headquarters of the Remington factory and several times to the headquarters of the strikers.

When Delahunty left the stand, Special Prosecutor Oeland said something in a low tone. L. B. Williams, counsel for Martin and Schulteis, jumped to his feet and exclaimed:

"Your honour, I protest against the statement by counsel for the Government, that their witness is an innocent babe.' I ask now that this wise jury be dismissed and a mistrial declared because of the constant repetition of such characterizations of their own witnesses by counsel for the Government."

Judge Cushman overruled the motion, but asked that no further remarks of that nature be made by lawyers.

As the charge against the accused men is that they conspired to violate the Sherman act by interfering with the munitions traffic, lawyers for the defence were pleased with Delahunty's testimony, in that, as they interpreted it, Martin had seemed to take only a languid interest in the strike at Bridgeport, which was considerably the most important labour disturbance affecting munitions. In seeking to establish further that the alleged conspirators did not make any active crusade against the munitions traffic, the defence succeeded in raising a question as to the authenticity of the so-called "strike relief resolution" supposed to have been adopted by Labour's National Peace Council. Leopold P. Staube, secretary of the Council, who was called to the stand, did not remember ever having the resolution in his custody and could not tell whether it had been voted on or not.

Tell of Martin's Big "Roll."

Straube told of his difficulties in collecting money which he had spent as secretary. He said he had been told by Martin that Buchanan had received $5,000 and should settle with Straube. He kept applying to Martin, who was the man he had seen with the most money.

"Martin had a roll that would choke an elephant," he said.

Straube also testified regarding Herman Schulteis, one of the defendants, who has figured little in the case so far. He said he never knew Schulteis to do anything in connection with Labour's National Peace Council and that Schulteis appeared to him to be one of many who were interested in the movement, but had no active part in it.

"I looked on him as just a rubber-neck," said Straube.

Testimony intended to link Frank Buchanan, at one time president of Labour's National Peace Council, with Lamar was given by Miss Fannie Ayers, a stenographer, who told of taking in shorthand a long document by Lamar. While she was working for Lamar at the Hotel Belmont she said she saw him in company with two men who went by the names of "Frank" and "Henry," and that she believed they were Frank Buchanan and H. B. Martin.

Drastic action taken yesterday by the Grain Exchange Boards at Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, and Duluth, with a view to checking, if not entirely eliminating the gambling element had the immediate effect of lowering wheat prices. Cattle Market.

Trade was very slow for the early trading, but picked up later in the day. There was a rather heavy run of cattle offering, including a fair proportion of choice quality well-finished steers and heifers. Several straight loads of heavy steers sold from $12.20 to $12.50, but prices as a whole were a little easier than the closing market last week. The market, in fact, was about steady with a week ago yesterday, but not quite as good as Wednesday and Thursday's markets of last week.

Hogs were steady.

Cows and bulls, steady to strong.

REINSTATED FOR BRAVERY.

Stock Exchange Recognizes a Suspended Member.

NEW YORK, May 12. — The governor of the Stock Exchange has reinstated to membership William H. Wallace, Jr., of the firm of Kelly and Wallace, in recognition of the bravery shown by him while with the American Ambulance Corps in France. Mr. Wallance was suspended for a year on July 12 last for breaking one of the Exchange's rules. He went to France shortly afterwards with the Stock Exchange auxiliary to the American Ambulance and recently received the Croix de Guerre for heroic conduct while under fire. Mr. Wallace is the third American to obtain this coveted decoration of the army of France. The members of the Exchange are preparing a reception for him upon his return to the United States on his next furlough.

THE HOME GARDEN

CARROT GROWING.

The smoothest and best shaped carrots are grown in distinctly sandy soil. If land is heavy it must of necessity be perfectly drained and have no tendency to bake. The young carrot plants are very delicate and for this reason the surface must be firm, mellow and moist; freedom from weeds is also important.

Carrots may be classed as hardy since both tops and roots will stand some freezing. Sowing may be done fairly early and if a good start is made dry weather can be endured without much injury.

For first planting which may be made toward the end of April, the short or globular varieties are most suitable. A succession of roots is secured by planting at intervals of two to three weeks or by sowing early medium and late varieties at the same time. Since many people prefer the smaller roots it is customary to use the smaller roots throughout the early summer while the half long varieties are planted for fall and winter use. From 8 to 10 weeks are required to mature the earliest and 4 or 5 months for the late varieties.

Various planting distances are used by growers. Ten or twelve inches between rows is sufficient for the early varieties and fifteen inches for the larger ones that require more cultivation.

The amount of seed depends mainly on the variety and on the size of roots desired. Small roots may be grown an inch apart in the row, which means that more seed must be sown. Ordinarily it takes an ounce to 300 feet of drill so that a small packet will easily give enough for a family garden. Scatter about 15 to 20 seeds to each foot.

Carrot seeds, like celery, germinate slowly and it is an advantage to sow enough radish seeds with the carrot to mark the rows. Tillage operations may then begin earlier so as to conserve moisture and control weeds. Half an inch or less of covering is sufficient.

Carrots will respond better than most vegetables to fertilizers, especially potash. However as potash can scarcely be obtained dependence may be placed in well rotted manure. Fresh stable manure should not be used. In small gardens the Golden Ball or Early Scarlet Horn are the most suitable varieties. These are not so good as the Chantenay, the standard varieties, but they fill in where a few early roots are desired.

No Potatoes For A Week

PICKERING FARMER SAYS IT WOULD REDUCE PRICE BY ONE-HALF.

A farmer from Whitevale, Pickering township, suggests that the people of Ontario refrain from using potatoes for one week, which in his opinion, would bring the price down 50 per cent. He stated that the farmers cannot afford to buy potatoes for planting at the present price of $4.25 per bag and if the people of Ontario did not devise some means of lowering the price they would not have any potatoes this coming fall and winter, as the farmers would not plant any.

When asked why the farmers have no seed potatoes this spring he stated that the exceptionally wet season last year prevented planting until late, and consequently the potatoes had no time to mature before the frost caught them. He stated that the farmers in New Brunswick, and throughout the west had a good crop, but their potatoes were being gobbled up by the American market, and were not reaching Ontario at all.

It was suggested that the War Production Club would do well to send out these people in Toronto who have had some previous experience in farming and encourage them to go back to the farms for a while as their work would be much more useful than unemployed help.

HEROES OF KITCHENS

What Impressed Most a French Visitor to British Front

M. Paul Birault, Editor of The Bulletin des Armees de la Republique, returning from a visit to the British front, wrote: "As I visited the British lines in the capacity of a special representative of the 'poilus,' I was allowed to witness a battle conducted by a Staff Captain. I saw all its phases, from the artillery preparation up to the wave of assault. On the following day, at the General's table, I was asked what had made the strongest impression upon me. I replied: 'The kitchens of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers.' My reply provoked laughter, and it was regarded as a French joke. It was nothing of the sort, however. Amongst all these soldiers, who rivalled each other in courage, those who seemed to me the finest were the cooks, who, unarmed under the shell-fire, polished up their pots and pans as if their kitchen on wheels were appearing in a review."

"Following the Path"

An artillery officer writes:—The Gurkhas are a peculiar race. They were very funny coming over in the boat, I believe. When they had been on the sea for two whole days without seeing land they became very perturbed. "Without doubt the captain of the ship has lost his way," they said, but they counselled together and decided at last that all was well. Some one asked them if they had decided how the captain knew where to go. They led him to the stern of the vessel and pointed to the long wake of water boiling behind them, and with a smile as broad as the greatness of the discovery—"Without doubt he follows the path."

Women and Smoking

A woman writes:—Before the war a woman suffering from "smoker's heart" was an anomaly. A physician working in a munition area tells me that among his patients are no fewer than fourteen women suffering from this complaint in a more or less aggravated form. Some of them are quite young girls. All of them are women to be regarded naturally as mothers of the future.

The Northampton tramways cease running at eight o'clock in the evening.

Joined Athlete-Friend

Lieut. Jas. Robb, killed in action, was one of the supplementary officers of the 147th Grey County Battalion, who were sent over to France shortly after the battalion's arrival in England. He was a native of owen Sound, and a graduate of the Toronto School of Pharmacy. He was an intimate associate in local sport of Lieut. Stan Campbell, the first of the officers of the Grey Battalion to make the supreme sacrifice.

Few People Know This

The big dose purges its way through the system fast, but does not cleanse thoroughly.

The small dose (if right) acts gently on the liver, and gives it just the slight help it needs to do its own work, and do it well.

Take one pill regularly, until you know you are all right.

Exchanging Checks Among Themselves

Cable despatches tell us the results of Germany's sixth loan. The total is just below thirteen billions of marks, and may be carried to that sum by the subscriptions of the soldiers in the field still to arrive. The largest previous German loan was about twelve billion marks in September, 1916. Hitherto the German loans have been announced with the regularity of the almanac in March and September. There is significance in the delay of the sixth loan. The cash is coming harder, and it is coming differently. Over five million Germans subscribed for the fourth loan. Less than four millions subscribed for the fifth. On the other hand, the bank subscriptions are increasing. Under the system of issuing loans for bank paper there is no limit to totals which might be borrowed, and fantastic figures may be expected. Already Germany is borrowing to pay interest. Already the interest on the borrowed total exceeds the total taxation before the war, when even Germans grumbled at the burdens they bore as nearly intolerable. The annual interest alone is now two-thirds as much as the total debt before the war.

At the very zenith of her industrial and agricultural prosperity Germany objected to a naval programme calling for a quarter billion marks spread over several years. Since then Germany has devoted the same energy and efficiency to waste that she before had devoted to profit. Now her interest bill is larger than previous estimates of the Empire's entire annual earnings. Germany's funded debt is now sixty billion marks, and the authorized loans are seventy-nine billions. There is a floating debt incurred since the sixth loan was floated of uncertain amount. It would seem that Germany is approaching the limit of safety which the President of the Reichsbank named to Mr. O. K. Davis. A debt of 100,000,000,000 marks, Mr. Haverstein said, would crush Germany; "but we will never reach that point. We shall win success long before our debt goes to such a figure." That seems less sure than when uttered.

Germany has accomplished wonders, but she cannot accomplish the impossible. The Entente armies have picked up their handicap, and Germany can no longer rely upon a military victory. On the other hand, the British fleet is disappointing in that it merely rules the surface of the sea, and cannot overcome the submarines. It is a blow below the belt, and Germany will rue the day she struck it. Her punishment will be at home, in her finances. The sulguarine ruthless war announcement was relied upon to float the loan whose success is just announced. If it shall prolong the contest until a seventh or eighth loan, nothing can save Germany from repudiation or confiscation. The ruin of the Rheims Cathedral is nothing to what is sure for Germany, win or lose.

It will require peace to bring this out. It is only because Germany has no external relations that it is able to owe so much even to and within itself. There is no reason why Germans should not go on exchanging checks among themselves until they are starved. It is hard to put a limit to a people so robust and disciplined, but it is sure that they have been living on their fat, and are now pretty lean. They betray their apprehension of the fate befort hime by the ecstasy of their search for gold, for which they have no use under present conditions. But with the return of peace, and the resumption of external relations their paper becomes a mockery. Now Germany is enjoying a war boom. Her stock dealings are secret. The illicit quotations show premiums of 200 and 300 per cent. upon all war industries, and many indirectly related with them. Her steamship companies are ruined. Her trade is gone. She has the ill-will of the world. It makes little difference what terms are finally accorded her. She is nearly friendless, and even her friends will not take her paper. Of gold she has nothing comparable with her needs. The economic structure which she has reared with such skill and success is a sucked shell. The longer she fights the worse will be her ultimate collapse. There is a cancer in her vitals, and only by a miracle of surgery can the healing knife reach the spot.

MY WHOLE LIFE

was going to trouble to cure me when by using one box of Zam-Buk ointment," writes Mrs. Jeffrey, of 21 French Street, Methuen. "Then I heard of Zam-Buk, used it, and am now completely cured.

"Thirty-three years ago the ulcer appeared on my ankle, and gradually spread to my thigh. The pain and torment I endured I could hardly walk and had to remain in the house. For twenty-five years I received doctors' treatment but got only temporary relief.

"Then I heard of some wonderful cases worked by Zam-Buk and commenced using it. The relief I experienced was wonderful. The inflammation was gradually drawn out. The pain was soon ended, and at last after thirty-three years of misery, I was on the road to recovery. To cut a long story short — perseverance with this wonderful balm resulted in a complete and permanent cure."

Zam-Buk is also unequalled for eczema, ringworm, abscesses, boils, blood-poisoning, burns, scalds, cuts, and all skin injuries. All druggists or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto; 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

PAINLEVE: GODFATHER OF FRENCH AVIATION

When French Aviation Was in its Infancy Became First Sponsor—Laughed at by Skeptics as "a Dreamer"

A French writer pays the following tribute to Paul Painleve, he says:—When aviation was in its infancy Painleve became its first sponsor. As early as 1908 he proclaimed the approaching birth of military aviation, and he was one of the promoters of the famous Circuit of the east, and at that time—August, 1910—he traced in broad lines his plan for the organization of France's new arm. He stated frankly that aviation was a great perilous adventure, and that many lives would have to be sacrificed in its cause, but he demanded that France should possess within the shortest possible time several hundred airplanes. He desired the formation of an aviation centre, a sort of central school and laboratory of military aviation.

People Skeptical

In France—as in England at that time—people were skeptical. The Painleve scheme was laughed at, and he himself was declared to be a dreamer of Wellsian dreams. He made the dream a reality. Ten months after people had scoffed, airplanes took an active part in the French autumn manoeuvres, and the practical suggestions he made at that time are almost identical with those that the allies adopted.

Knew Poverty in His Youth

Paul Painleve was born in Paris on Dec. 5, 1863; his father was a lithographic designer, and Painleve knew poverty in his early days. When he was barely twenty he had made up his mind to devote his life to science, and he then published his first book. When he was twenty-one he was professor at the Faculty of Science at Lille; at twenty-eight he was called to the Sorbonne, and finally he was appointed to a post under the Briand Government, in which he became minister of public instruction.

THEY DID NOT PASS.

Stubborn Heroism of "Blue Devil of France"

Lieutenant-Colonel Jean Fabry, Marshal Joffre's chief of staff, attracted almost as much attention in the streets of Washington, U.S.A., as his superior when stories of his gallantry in action became known. "The Blue Devil of France," as he became known in his own country, probably experienced as many thrills as any man in the French army. As commander of a battalion of Alpine Chasseurs he led his men in the battles of the Marne, Ypres, Dixmude, Artas and in the Vosges. In a gallant action in which his battalion carried by assault a position on the height of Reichacherkopf, Lieutenant-Colonel Fabry lost a leg.

M. Hovelaque, speaking of him said: "The Blue Devil" is a remarkable man. He has been wounded several times, and has seen some of the most dreadful things that have occurred during this war. Here is what happened at the Yser:—

"Fabry, in command of about sixteen hundred men, defended a long line for a week against German line after German line that sought to break through. The earth was soft, so soft, in fact, that the only parapet that could stand had to be made out of some other substance. He used the dead bodies of Germans, and when they decomposed he would discard them and would throw out a hook and haul up more bodies for the same purpose.

"His best friend was killed beside him. He buried the man, and then for days lived and fought for France with only a foot of earth separating him from the body of his friend. Terrible hardships were experienced. Food and ammunition had to be brought up with great danger under cover of darkness, and it was impossible to move the body until some time later. The Germans, it might be added, did not break through the lines held by the 'Blue Devil of France.'"

CITY OF HOSPITALS

Greatest Hospital in Lyons For Army's Nervous Cases

The beautiful city of Lyons, lying at the confluence of the Rhone and Saone, has been made the "Hospital City of France." More than thirty-five thousand sick and wounded are cared for there. A thousand of these are assigned to the Neurological Centre and housed in the handsome buildings of the Normal Lycee, the new boys' college at the entrance to the park. In each of the twenty medical districts into which France is divided there is a similar hospital for men who have suffered damage to the nervous system. The Centre Neurologique at Lyons is, however, the largest of these centres, and for certain reasons the most interesting. There are opportunities offered in the hospital for the study of every injury to the nerves and to the brain. There are many illustrations of wounds to the several nerves of the extremities taken individually and in groups. There are instances of the isolated destruction of the small single nerves that control one muscle, as of the nerve controlling the muscle that supports the shoulder blade, or the one that activates the muscle which rotates the shoulder blade forward when the arm is raised above the head.

Cheerful Soldier a God-Send

An officer writes: Amongst all the horrors of war the cheerful soldier is a god-send. He laughs when he falls into a shell hole full of water; he plays on his mouth-organ when the men pine for a tune to help their feet along the road; he is good tempered when he is called upon to dig trenches for the fourth night in succession; and he refrains from swearing when the ration party brings him his 217th pot of plum and apple jam.

WOMEN'S WIDE SCOPE

Prominent Engineer has Great Confidence in their Capabilities

Mr. F. Kellaway, M.P., Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Munitions, speaking at an exhibition of war work in London, said that in the first summer of the war about 171,000 women only were at work in munition factories; January of 1917, there were over 691,000. A few months later women were working at 471 different processes, but it was impossible to give the figures to-day as they would have to cover practically the whole engineering and chemical trades. "So wide is the scope of women labor," said Mr. Kellaway, "that a prominent engineer has expressed his firm conviction that, given two more years of war, he would undertake to build a battleship from keel to aerial entirely by woman labor. We have assembled in this hall examples of some of the most technical processes in engineering produced entirely by women who, eighteen months ago, knew no more about engineering than the average man does about nursing a baby."

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS

Sleeplessness is caused by the nervous system becoming deranged. Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be secured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

DANGERS OF CORDITE

Habit of Chewing Explosive Often Proves Fatal

A London correspondent writes: Drink is not the chief temptation to which over-strained munitions workers are exposed. It has been discovered that a good deal of the "dreamy" manner attributed to women and comparatively young girls is due to another and hitherto unsuspected cause—the chewing of cordite, the smokeless explosive used in the shell of 9cm explosive used in the shell of 9cm ammunition and the cartridges of small arms. The fact that cordite has a pleasant taste, owing to its sweetness, has been a real discovery to many of the women workers and the primary source of their danger. Cordite, when chewed, has all the exhilarating effects of a highly stimulating drug and cannot be tampered with except at great risk. Its effects on the nervous system are immediate and ultimately deadly.

Germany's Blissful Ignorance

A tall, intelligent-looking man who gave the name of Kenrick Nanahatsa was charged in London, Ont., with begging and with failing to register. Hesitating his answers with a foreign accent a constable questioned him, when he said he was a German, and admitted that he had never been naturalized or registered as an enemy alien. Later he declared he did not know a war was going on.

Daily War Bill Aggregates $75,000,000

It is quite true that no man living could pay a week's cost of the war. It is estimated that the aggregate war-bill is $75,000,000 a day. This is a very modest estimate. Thus a week's expenditure would be at least $525,000,000. The richest man in the world is Mr. J. D. Rockefeller, who is said to be worth $500,000,000, or $25,000,000 less than a week's war-bill.

HE NEEDED ONE.

An Atlanta lawyer tells of a newly qualified judge in one of the towns of the South who was trying one of his first prisoners. The prisoner was an old negro charged with robbing a hen roost. He had been in court before on a similar charge and was then acquitted.

"Well, Henry," observed the judge, "I see you're in trouble again."

"Yassuh," replied the negro, "the last time judge, you will recollect, you was my lawyer."

"Where is your lawyer this time?"

"I ain't got no lawyer this time," said Henry. "I'se going to tell the truth."—New York Times.

YES! THIS IS TRUE! ANY CORN LIFTS OUT

No foolishness! Lift your corns and callouses off with fingers.

Pains? No, none at all!

Sore corns, hard corns, soft corns or any kind of a corn, can safely be lifted right out with the fingers if you will apply directly upon the corn a few drops of freezone says a Cincinnati authority.

It is claimed that at small cost one can get a quarter of an ounce of freezone at any drug store which is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus without pain or soreness or the danger of infection.

This simple drug dries the moment it is applied and does not inflame or even irritate the surrounding tissue while applying it or afterwards.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A MATTER OF FIGURES

Natalie's Mistake and the Explanation That Came Later.

By MATHILDA HENDERSON WHEELOCK.

"Natalie!"

"Yes, auntie." Natalie stood in the doorway.

"That letter to Anne Whitmore in regard to those purchases for Coralie's trousseau with which she is to be commissioned—can't you attend to it for me, please? Coralie ought to be here to attend to her shopping in person. You'll find the list with her letter there on your desk. Write in your own person so as not to disturb me for the signature. You know what I wish you to say. I went over it with you this morning. Don't forget the outside limit—$1,200. George would utterly spoil Coralie if I permitted it, and Anne Whitmore would abet him."

Natalie turned at once to her task. Coralie's letter with its dazzling list lay at hand. Such beautiful things! But Natalie felt no envy of this favored cousin, whose rich bachelor uncle made it his chief pleasure to indulge. Her own life as housekeeper for deaf Uncle Joshua, who was a widower, childless and far from rich, was as happy as it was busy.

Envy Coralie? Natalie envied no one, particularly now, when Ted Markham was coming to Forestville to spend his vacation. She had met him last winter during a visit to Cousin Adaline. Ted was paying teller in the same bank where Cousin Adaline's husband was bookkeeper, and his calls at the pretty flat had been frequent during the three weeks of Natalie's visit. Then all the spring there had been his letters.

And only yesterday had come a box of roses. Her note of acknowledgment should go by this mail, but Aunt Esther's letter must be first. She wrote this conscientiously, then looked at the tiny clock as she signed her name. She had time for Ted's note yet if she hurried.

The postman's whistle broke into the signatures she finished, and, hastily thrusting the letters into their respective envelopes, already stamped and addressed, she smiled cheerfully, going to the open window, laughingly threw them on the gravel at the feet of the carrier, who was just turning away.

Four days later Ted's answer came. Natalie flew with it to her own room, while Aunt Esther seated herself on the piazza with the letter brought her by the same mail.

"Natalie!"

The call came sharply up to where Natalie sat, white faced and stunned.

NATALIE SAT WHITE FACED AND STUNNED.

"I have thought best to change my plans," she had read. "Some fellows are going camping and have asked me to go with them. We shall be somewhere in the Maine woods, not, I imagine, in very close proximity to a postoffice, so that you will probably not hear from me while I am away."

That was the gist of the letter. The rest didn't matter.

"Natalie!"

"Yes, auntie."

"I wish you'd hear this, please!" whereupon Natalie descended.

When she had recalled herself Mrs. Eldred read:

"My Dear Esther—Your habit of delegating your letter writing to whosoever will relieve you of the duty has in this instance resulted in the inclosed jumble, from which I am unable to extract anything that will serve me as a working hypothesis.

"With much love and some pardonable curiosity, ANNE WHITMORE."

Natalie glanced at the inclosure which her aunt handed her, her face paling and flushing by turns—the first page of her letter to Mrs. Whitmore and her note of acknowledgment to Ted! For a moment she sat staring; then her overwrought nerves gave way, and she fled upstairs to her room. There, later, with head bowed on her crossed arms, her aunt found her.

"Why, don't take it like that, child! The mistake can be easily rectified."

"He isn't—isn't coming!" she managed at length to sob out.

"Isn't coming?" Mrs. Eldred adjusted her glasses. "Natalie, let me see that young man's letter, please."

Natalie obediently passed it over. Mrs. Eldred was puzzled.

[illegible] your note of thanks for the roses. You will send him that, of course."

"He doesn't expect me to write him again. He—he doesn't wait me to!"

Mrs. Eldred reread the letter. It did seem as if the young man were slowing down the correspondence, and, with a sigh, she laid the missive down at Natalie's elbow and softly withdrew.

The matter troubled her for days, however. Meanwhile she did some thinking, the final result of which was that on the very day but one before his vacation ended Ted Markham was handed the following letter, forwarded from his bank to the little postoffice, seven miles from the camp where he had spent a restless and thoroughly unsatisfied twelve days:

My Dear Mr. Markham—I have reason to believe my niece, Natalie Dare, sent you, instead of the inclosed note, a list of materials my friend, Mrs. Whitmore, was to select for the trousseau of my daughter, who is to marry Mr. Harry Gates, bookkeeper in the First National bank of our town. My brother, with whom Coralie and I live and who is very wealthy, spoils my daughter shamefully, as the list will show. Will you kindly mail the letter to me at your earliest convenience? Yours very truly,

ESTHER ELDRED.

Mr. Markham had just time for the 10:18 for New York. It would land him in New York in time to catch a train for Forestville, which would give him just four hours of his precious vacation with Natalie.

Once settled on the train, he took a worn envelope from his pocket, extracted a letter—more properly speaking, part of a letter—and read:

Aunt Esther insists that the inclosed list must come within an expenditure of $1,200. She considers this quite sufficient for a girl who is to marry a bank clerk, even though a fond uncle is willing to indulge her extravagantly. Very sincerely yours, NATALIE DARE.

It was Natalie herself who the next evening answered Ted's ring at the door and who listened to the explanation he lost no time in making.

"I've been a fool, Natalie," he wound up. "But those figures! Twelve hundred dollars—why, they simply floored me! That was almost the extent of my salary for a year, and if that was what you were accustomed to and what you considered a reasonable and even an economical outlay for clothes at one clip—well, girlie, there seemed but one thing for me to do, and that was to forget what I had hoped for."

"But the things were for a trousseau," began Natalie.

"There wasn't a word about a trousseau in my part of the letter! I'm glad there wasn't. That would have put a quietus on my hopes with a vengeance, Natalie."

"But I said the girl was to marry a bank clerk." Natalie hurried on indignantly. "How, then, could you suppose"—

Ted's arms shot out and took her into a swift embrace.

"How could I suppose anything else? To me there was only one girl in the world—and one bank clerk who loved her. It was unwarrantable presumption on my part, Natalie, but can't you see? And won't you forgive?"

And Natalie both saw and forgave.

OUT OF THE RUNNING AT 40 YEARS OLD

Men at 40 should be doing their best work. This is impossible unless health is good. Many a man at 40 thinks he is getting old and out of the running, because his back aches, his joints are swollen and sore, or he is the victim of rheumatism.

We have records on file of men who felt just like this but who took Gin Pills and quickly regained the young spirit and energy that goes with good health.

So much depends on the Kidneys, whose function is to carry away the poisons from the blood stream. If the Kidneys are not working right, though a man is only 20, the poisons will make him feel old before his time. Don't delay if you have a sore back, cannot lift weights, limp with rheumatism, suffer from Kidney or bladder trouble, lumbago, inflammation of the bladder, brick-dust deposits, or other urinary disorder. Try Gin Pills.

Gin Pills are noted, too, for their pleasant action as a laxative. If you are troubled with constipation, here is the remedy.

Try Gin Pills. We will refund your money if you fail to get results. All good druggists and dealers sell Gin Pills. Sample free upon request to the National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 97

NOW ABOUT POTATOES

Grow Some and Keep Down the High Prices.

TOMATOES ALSO A GOOD LINE

But All Danger of Frosts Should Be Passed Before Tender Crops Are Put in the Ground.

(By S. C. JOHNSTON, Vegetable Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Some of our vegetables are very tender and should not be planted until after all danger of frost is over. It must be remembered that because the soil is ready to receive the plants it is not absolutely necessary that the grower should set the plants out. Potatoes planted out between 24th May and even the first of June will give excellent results. Tomatos may be set out after the 6th of June and good returns expected, as some seasons a severe frost destroys many tomato plants as late as June 6th. Vine crops such as cucumber and squash may be planted after all danger of frost is over.

POTATOES. Potatoes are one crop which may be planted on land which is considered to be in a very rough condition. Possibly there is no better crop to be planted on land which has been in sod for a number of years. Medium-sized tubers of good quality should be secured and they should be cut so that there are at least two eyes in each piece or set. It is a good plan in a small garden to have the soil prepared fairly well, then cut the seed and commence planting. Furrows may be made with the hoe about six inches deep and two feet apart. The sets may be placed twelve inches apart in the bottom of the furrow and should be covered with two inches of soil. This will leave the young plant more or less in a trench. As the plants grow the soil will be gradually dragged up and the trench will be filled. It will be necessary to cultivate the soil between the rows so as to keep down weeds, and at the same time soil should be gradually drawn up to the tops in sufficient quantities so that the growing roots will not be exposed to the sunlight, which will cause them to turn green and be of inferior quality. If an early variety has been planted and a vigorous growth has resulted it is possible that some may be fit to dig in August. By removing some of the soil from around a hill with the hand one can tell whether they are fit to dig. If the potatoes are grown for winter use they do not need to be dug until quite late in the fall. The tops will die down at the first frost, but it is not absolutely necessary that they be dug immediately. They should, however, be dug before there is any severe frost.

TOMATOES. The tomato is one of the most popular vegetables either fresh or in a preserved condition. It may be grown quite easily in the backyard. The better practice with tomatoes is to purchase the plants ready for transplanting rather than attempting to grow these plants if one has not had experience in handling a hot-bed. Plants having a large root system are best, and the stock in any case should at least be the size of a lead pencil. The soil should be thoroughly prepared before planting time, possibly a crop of lettuce or radish may be taken from the same, but it is always advisable to have plenty of manure incorporated in the soil. A shallow hole may be made with the common hoe to insert the roots of the tomato plant. These roots should be thoroughly watered so that the soil will cling close to the roots when they are set out in the garden. The plant should be set fairly deep and the earth should be firmed around the roots. If the season is dry and hot, water may be poured around the plant in order to facilitate growth. These plants may be set two feet apart if they are to be trained on stakes and kept from covering a large space in the garden. These stakes should be preferably six feet long, two inches wide, and one inch thick. They may be driven into the soil a few days after the plant has been set out and the plants tied up to the stick with a piece of twine or cotton in such a manner that the tie will be directly under the leaf. As the plant develops in size in front of each leaf a slender growth called a side shoot will appear. These must be removed by pressing them out with the thumb when very small. Four or five ties will be necessary to support the plant. As a result of the staking fruits of a superior quality will ripen earlier than those grown on the ground.

CELERY. Celery may be grown in many garden soils if they have been heavily dressed with manure. For the backyard gardener it will be much better if the plants are secured ready for setting out about the 24th of May. All the plants should be set on the level from six to eight inches apart in the row and from two feet to thirty inches between the rows. It will be found necessary to water celery more than any other crop in the garden, and the soil between the rows should be stirred constantly. In the fall when the celery has reached sufficient height it will be found necessary to blanch it. Possibly the best method being to stand twelve inch boards against the rows of plants, holding them in position with stakes at each end. In from ten days to two weeks the celery plants will have grown considerably, and owing to the exclusion of the light will have become fairly well whitened, which improves the quality. The celery plants should be used as soon as possible after blanching. Other methods of blanching celery are the drawing of earth up around the plant gradually, commencing when the head of the plants are about four inches above the ground. Brown paper is sometimes tied around each individual head.

SUNDAY READING FOR A THOUGHTFUL HOUR

Prepared for the Examiner by a Local Church Worker

If Christ were here to-night I'd touch the hem
Of his fair seamless robe, and stand complete
In wholeness and whiteness, I who stem
Such waves of pain to kneel at His dear feet.

If Christ were here! Oh faithless soul and weak,
Is not the Master ever close to thee?
Deaf is thine ear that cannot hear
Him speak;
Dim is thine eye His face that cannot see.

Thy blessed Christ is in thy little room;
Nay, more, the Christ, Himself, is in thine heart;
Fear not, the dawn will scatter deepest gloom,
And heaven will be of thy rich life a part.

—Selected.

Long ago Job was perplexed over the problem of suffering—of the suffering of the one who had tried to live true to the inner light, while he saw the wicked flourish in prosperity. He cries out of his distress unto the Almighty: "Is it good that thou shouldst shine upon the counsel of the wicked? Thine hands have framed me, and fashioned me, yet Thou dost destroy me." In his anguish of spirit, his failing to find any satisfactory explanation of the purpose of God, his human heart cries out, "Oh that there were a daysman betwixt us, he might lay his hand upon us both."

The cry of the heart is the same to-day as in that long ago time, when sorrow and suffering come; when the results of years of labour are swept away, when health fails, or friends forsake; when the one who was the hope of the future is suddenly cut off, when

"The world seems simply made
To sweep your dearest hopes away,
And your best work brings but pain,
Perplexity and loss and doubt."

The longing for one who can explain, or at least sympathize, because of a perfect understanding of both the sufferer and the circumstances, is still the same human cry.

The anguished cry of the old man of Us, in the depths of his sorrows, has been answered. There is One who has come to reveal the love of God. One who is both human and divine, One who understands and sympathizes; the very One the suffering world needs to-day. He stands with tender, out-stretched, helping hands for every soul in distress. It is He who can lift the burden; it is He who can impart strength and courage; it is He who can give hope; it is He who can forgive sin; it is He, the living Christ, not theories about Him, that we must find. Then we shall have the answer to the cry of the troubled soul.

In the "Dawn of a To-morrow," by Mrs. Burnett, there is told the story of how a man who had wealth, and social standing, but lost health, found this Christ, and, finding Him, found a new life of service for humanity. Having failed to find health, after following the advice of his physicians, and fearing insanity, he had decided to end his life, and chose to take lodgings in a very poor tenement district. Some fear of a "to-morrow" held him back, and he was led through the person of "Little Glad" to an old woman who had been a sinner and found the Christ. This old woman was the good angel of the tenement, and had taught "Little Glad," who expressed her theology in these words: "If we keep sayin' and believin' 'e's close to us, not millions of miles away, we'd be took care of now, whilst we was alive, and not have to wist till we was dead." "I'm alive and I've got to be took care of now." "Taint boldness we're warned against; it's not lovin' and trustin' enough, and not askin' and believin' true."

While Antony Dale listened to the old woman tell of her religion, he thought "Why am I listening; I am doing it, because here is a creature that believes; knowing no doctrine, she believes; she thinks she knows her deity is by her side; she is not afraid. To her the awful unknown is the known, and is with her.

"Suppose it was true," he said, aloud; suppose it were true? And his forehead was damp.

What, he stammered hoarsely, his voice broken with feeling: What of the hideous wrongs, the woes and horrors, and wrongs?

"There wouldn't be none if we was right," said the old lady.

AEROPLANES FLY VERY SWIFTLY IN THE GREAT FIGHT

LONDON, May 15. — A despatch to the Daily Mail says:

"The latest aeroplanes on both sides are of quite breathless speed. At one moment aeroplanes swish over you like a covey of birds. At another you see or hear no sign of their presence. A moment later faint mysterious sounds as of hammering on soft wood, come from the heights, and then one of the planes, either winged or too weak for combat, dives for harborage within its own lines.

"The fighting is now so quick and skilful that the slower, older machine, has about as much chance as a sparrow against a hawk. All records were broken by one of the newest and fastest British machines which destroyed five of the enemy in one flight.

"The art of high diving has increased beyond telling. From 16,000 feet, where the are scarcely visible, or from the ambush of a cloud, planes come down like a plummet to bomb a train, to fire a balloon or riddle a body of men with machine gun fire. Firing at small objects is daily practised. So quickly do the divers come and go that men with loaded rifles on the very spot, are often in their astonishment to slow to fire till the plane is well out of range. The German authorities complain bitterly that their infantry fail altogether to use their rifles on such occasions.

"The Germans have concentrated a number of their best airmen, just as earlier they concentrated a group of their best gunners, in which is known as a 'travelling circus' which gathers wherever they meditate and offensive. It is a mobile unit of expert fighters and photographers."

ITALIAN NAVAL PROWESS.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Advices to the Italian Embassy here say that thirteen Austrian submarines have been sunk in the Adriatic by Italian patrols in the last few weeks, and that for the fourth time within a year Italian destroyers have penetrated the fortified port of Durazzo, sinking four transports loaded with provisions and ammunition.

CHINESE PARLIAMENT REFUSES TO DECLARE WAR ON TEUTONS

PEKIN, May 14.—After a riotous session lasting throughout Thursday night, the House of Representatives refused to pass a resolution declaring war on Germany.

The House of Parliament was surrounded by a mob which demanded war, making threats of violence. Upon the orders of Premier Tuan Chi [illegible] was finally dispersed the mob.

The Premier addressed the House, urging a declaration of war. He was denounced by members who said he was attempting to coerce parliament.

The press is opposed to the war party, urging parliament to resist military pressure on the ground that it threatens the republic.

ACID IN STOMACH SOURS THE FOOD

Says Excess of Hydrochloric Acid is Cause of Indigestion.

A well known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion is nearly always due to acidity — acid stomach—and not, as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation, then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, dumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas, or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash, or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

HUGE PRICES FOR SHIPS.

One that brought $75,000 in 1910, is Sold for $1,115,000.

LIVERPOOL, May 14. — The tremendous increase in the value of ships since the war is well illustrated by two recent transactions. A steel single deck steamer of 591 tons gross, built in 1904, has been sold to British buyers for 28,000 pounds ($140,000.) This vessel changed hands early in 1915 for 9,000 ($45,000.)

Another steel single deck steamer of 2,996 tons gross, built in 1896, has been sold for about 229,000 pounds (1,115,000.) Her original owners sold her in 1910 for approximately 16,000 pounds ($75,000.)

Nerves Were So Bad Would Lie Awake Nights

And Had to Avoid Crowds or Excitement—When Doctors Gave Up Turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food With Good Results

Peterborough, Ont., March 9.—The cure reported in this letter will be best appreciated by persons who know the keen mental anguish caused by inability to sleep. You lie awake and think with alarm of all the dreadful things that might happen to you. You lose confidence and courage, are easily irritated and life is scarcely worth while.

But there is a message of hope in this letter, for it tells of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and the grand work it is accomplishing.

Mrs. Chas. E. Wiley, 136 London street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "About three years ago I was suffering from nervous debility, sleeplessness and loss of appetite. My nerves were so bad that I could not attend church or any place where there was a crowd or excitement. During the night I would lie awake for two or three hours. I had tried several remedies and taken treatments from doctors. The doctor finally said he could not do any more for me, and it was then I started using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I had read in the newspapers of how highly it was recommended, so I secured some and commenced using it. After the third box I noticed an improvement, so I kept on taking them until I had used eight or nine boxes. The results were such that I could sleep and eat well and go to places where there was a crowd or excitement without any difficulty. My health was generally benefitted greatly. Since that, from time to time, when I am not feeling up to the mark, I take a few of the Nerve Food pills, as I usually keep some in the house. I would recommend this treatment to anyone suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

MUST HAVE NEWSPAPERS.

News-Print Situation in Canada is to be Investigated.

OTTAWA, May 9. —The news-print situation in Canada is to be fully investigated. Commissioner R. A. Pringle opened his preliminary investigation here to-day, at which a general questionnaire was drafted for submission to the manufacturers covering costs, available material, supplies, etc., and dating back to 1914. Answers must be in by May 21, and any refusing to give the desired information will be subpoenaed.

Copies of prospectuses and statements of companies as to profits must also be produced, with particular attention to those of the Brompton Pulp and Paper Company and the Abitibi Pulp and Paper Company. Some information will also be sought from publishers as to their paper supply.

Mr. Pringle stated that the people must have newspapers and he felt that the government would see to it that publishers were not deprived of paper.

AMUSEMENT TAX RECORD.

Total Last Month the Highest to Date.

TORONTO, May 10.—The amusement tax of the province for April totalled over $50,000, the highest since the tax went into effect in May of last year, and during a month when no racing meetings were in progress. The Treasury Department looks upon this as an indication of prosperous times.

The first race meeting of the summer will start on Saturday next at the Devonshire track at Windsor. No license has been applied for at the Parliament buildings as yet.

AN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIR.

Ottawa Authorities would Retain the Services of Prof. Lanos.

KINGSTON, May 10.—Whether or not Prof. J. M. Lanos, of the Royal Military College, who has twice been declared by the medical boards as unfit for active service, is to go to France in response to the call of his native lands, now rests between the Canadian State Department and the French Government. An old treaty between France and Canada, whereby the latter recognizes France's claim to its native-born, whether they take the oath of allegiance or not, looms up. Lanos is a British-subject, but so far as he knows now, he will leave at the week-end for France to report for service. This morning in response to orders from the Militia Department, he appeared before the medical board and was again declared absolutely physically unfit for service. The Militia Department wants to retain his services at the college, believing that he is of greater service to Canada than he could be to France, where he would be placed at clerical work. Sir Joseph Pope, Under Secretary of State for Canada, is taking up the matter with the French Consul at Montreal.

BOSTON. — The sale of 14,000,000 pounds of fish to the British government by a local fishing company, was announced to-day. The consignment will include haddock and flounders.

A representative of the company said that the British supply had been curtailed by the extended use of trawling vessels for mine sweeping and other war purposes and by losses of the vessels in various ways.

PAY TO BE INCREASED.

Higher Salaries in Lower Grades of Civil Service.

OTTAWA. — Important increases are to be given in the lower grades of the civil service ,and legislation to effect this will be introduced in the Commons as soon as possible by Sir Thomas White. The Finance Minister is at present in Washington, but the bill to amend the Civil Service Act (the terms of which he has laid down) will be ready for his return.

The minimum salary in the lowest class is raised from $600 to $600, and the maximum from $800 to $1,100. In the second lowest grade the maximum is raised from $1,200 to $1,600. But by far the most important portion of the new legislation is the change to be made in the conditions whereby a civil servant can move from the third class to the second class. By the Civil Service Act of 1908 a civil servant can only pass from the third class to the second class after passing the examinations prescribed, but by the new legislation he or she will pass into Class II. on the recommendation of the Deputy Minister, provided, of course, the recommendation is endorsed by the authorities.

SENT ADVANCE DENIAL OF REPORT OF DEATH.

British Soldier's Cable from France to Wife Causes Queer Mix-up.

NEW YORK, May 9.—The New York Sun this morning publishes the following cable despatch from London dated yesterday:

"The most anxious woman in England is the one who on Friday received from her husband in the British army in France a telegram saying:

"'If the War Office informs you I am killed, don't believe it.'

"The next morning came a War Office message announcing that her husband was killed. Nothing has been learned about him since. Officials are unable to explain how the husband knew he would be reported dead yet was unable to prevent it, although he was able to deny it in advance. The woman is positive her husband is yet alive."

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles, and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hins, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

BAN JOHNSON TALKS ON BASEBALL AND THE WAR.

CHICAGO, May 14. — President Johnson of the American League, returning from a trip around the circuit, said that it was too early to determine what effect if any the war was having on the baseball attendance.

Although admitting the attendance in the east is below the usual standard, President Wilson said he believed the falling off was due to the unfavorable weather, and not the national situation.

WILL MARRY CONVICT IF GOVERNOR PARDONS

Reports from Kansas that Mrs. Alma Ford, the New York stenographer, who went to Lansing, Kansas, several weeks ago to obtain the release of a prisoner, Winson Salisbury, so he might marry her, had left in dismay on learning of his record, were denied emphatically yesterday by Mrs. Ford herself.

"I came back because I had a longing to see my little son," she said to a reporter at her office, No. 220 Broadway. "Before I went to Kansas I had written to Mr. Salisbury that he must tell me everything of his past which anyone knew so that no one could spring a surprise on me. I did not learn anything new, and I still am working to have him released. When that happens if it seems best, we shall be married."

Salisbury has been serving jail sentences most of the last ten years for forgery, and is wanted in Wisconsin also. Mrs. Ford says she has enlisted the aid of Henry Allen and William Allen White.

Until she met him for a short time in the Lansing prison a few weeks ago, Mrs. Ford had not seen her intended husband.

"I wrote to him first on business connected with the Humanitarian Society for paroled prisoners," she said. "He is the founder of that society, and has practically made it from the writings he has sent out from jail. Now it counts Governor Capper as a vice-president.

"Mr. Salisbury's letters were a revelation to me. We had the same interests in art, literature, science and psychology. Our thoughts ran so parallel that often I would use an unusual phrase in a letter to him, and find that he had used the same phrase in a letter that crossed mine on the way.

"When I wrote about paroles, the prison authorities refused to let him have the letters. I tried code but he didn't understand it, so finally we got a keeper who acted as an intermediary.

"I'm not an adventuress and I'm not a fool. People said horrid things to me for having gone to marry Mr. Salisbury without having seen him. Is it necessary to see a person to know him? Mr. Salisbury and I have more in common than most married persons and it is a lack of common interests that makes most marriages turn out unhappily."

SHE HATES LOVE STORIES.

Mrs. Ford who is about thirty, and is attractive, said that she did not care what Salisbury's record had been. Asked about a report that he had had two wives, she said she knew of no entanglements which would bar him from marrying her.

"When a man's in prison they can say anything about him and he can't come back," she said. "Why, probably, there are men in this very building who have four or five wives and no one knows about it or suspects them; but when a man is in jail anything can be said."

One woman, Mrs. Ford said, was married to Salisbury for better or worse, and divorced him when it was worse, but old her friends that the two happiest years of her life were with him.

"I have faith in the power of thought or suggestion, to accomplish anything," the stenographer asserted. "I don't mean hypnotism, but the power of helpful thought.

"You know the feeling you have for each other is based on real mental attraction and not an ephemeral physical sympathy that draw sthe young and foolish together with a lot of false glamour. I hate love stories, you know; never read them, because the thing they make the basis and the end of life is so transient and unsteady. But Mr. Salisbury and I came to love each other through mental sympathy. I wrote him first because while in prison he had founded a society for placing exconvicts called the Humanitarians, which had become famous throughout the country. I wanted to find a position for a released prisoner and wrote to him.

"He answered, and a correspondence began. For the last five months except when I was in Kansas, I have written five or six single-space typewritten pages to Mr. Salisbury every day.

"At first we just exchanged ideas about prisoners and then one day Mr. Salisbury wrote that he experienced a strange mental sympathy for me which he had never felt before in his life.

"Maybe that was just a pose, because all men pose a little bit, I find, and only the young girls believe every thing they say. If a man tells me he has never loved before I just laugh; I know that he has loved before if he is a man. It is perfectly natural that he should.

"Well, after a time, I found I was making excuses to write letters to Kansas, and then in Mr. Salisbury's letters he referred to other women. So I wrote to him that a man as remarkable as he must correspond with a lot of interesting ladies. And he wrote back that he did correspond with others, and after that we always spoke of them as Interesting Ladies, you know.

SOME ARDENT LOVE LETTERS.

"Then one day Mr. Salisbury was taken with a keeper or an assistant warden to Leavenworth and he bought a lot of valentines and sent them to me; one of them was a big red heart, and underneath was a verse. The last line was, 'I wish your heart were mine,' and Mr. Salisbury had run a pen through the word heart and written over it 'friendship.' Then on the back he wrote, 'I should have liked to leave it as it was, but I did not dare.' And in my letter I asked him why he had crossed it out? Then he wrote saying he had no right to ask a woman to marry him or to wait for him indefinitely, and to accept disgrace. And I replied saying that a woman would wait through years for the man that she loved; that waiting did not matter. Then I went to Kansas.

"And a rude shock met me when I got to the prison. You see Mr. Salisbury and I had corresponded secretly through a prison official, and he had given copies of the letters to the warden. When I got to the penitentiary the assistant warden told me about it, and that the letters we had written each other were disgraceful; that he would not publish them now, but only hold them over us to protect themselves. Now, these letters were arrant, I admit," Mrs. Ford said with a smile.

"You see, Mr. Salisbury and I have both been married before and we wrote about certain aspects of marriage as you might write about a new hat. Oh, that Kansas warden was terribly shocked. They were very provincial out there. But finally he let me in the guard room and Mr. Salisbury was sent for. I took both his hands and kissed him, and then we sat down opposite each other, a table between us. We were not permitted to be near each other for fear I might slip him a jimmy or a black jack.

A KISS THAT MADE TROUBLE.

"Well, that kiss made more trouble. When I went back for another visit the warden himself met me and told me that my conduct in the guardroom had been disgraceful; that if I did not behave better he could not admit me to the prison. 'Have you never kissed anyone you loved?' I asked him. And he answered, 'I never kissed my wife until I was sure we were going to be married. But I don't take any credit for that. Give the credit to her.' I told Mr. William Allen White about the conversation when I asked him to get the Governor to pardon Mr. Salisbury. And Mr. White said, 'That's just like the warden. He thinks everything that he doesn't understand is low and obscene. He would not approve at all of the conversation that we are having now.' And Mr. White wrote a wonderful letter to the Governor for me."

"Do you think Mr. Salisbury will be released?"

"I have unofficial advice from Kansas that he has been pardoned." Mrs. Ford replied, "but no official notice has come so if the World hears anythin gabout it, will you let me know?"

"But of course I shall have to keep on working to get another pardon from the governor of Wisconsin, after Kansas has released him. He broke parole when he was released from prison in Wisconsin. What was he there for? Oh, all the charges against Mr. Salisbury are the same—forgery. What he did was to sign accommodation notes. They tell me that lots of business men do it. But he got caught—that's all."

And so saying, Mrs. Alma Goldsier Ford resumed her interrupted love letter to a prisoner in Lansing, Kansas.

London Merchant Says Schools Turn Out "Boneheads"

Mr. Jones of Cowan's Says the Pupils Are Crammed With Non-Essentials.

Is the Ontario educational system adequate to meet the needs of the rising generation? Does it definitely prepare them to fill positions of usefulness in life? At least one prominent businessman of London, Ontario, is emphatically of the opinion that the system, as it now stands, is a dissipation of time and energy, and lamentably fails in developing efficiency along any one line.

T. A. Jones, manager of Cowan's Hardware, and a large ratepayer, said: "The essentials, at least what I consider the essentials, are being neglected in order to devote attention to frills.

Don't Know the Three R's.

"Why, it is the next thing to impossible to get a boy nowadays that can figure, spell, read and write, even among high school students. We have experienced this difficulty for the past ten or fifteen years.

"In our business, problems in discount are constantly presenting themselves to be figured out. I often wonder what they teach now in more advanced arithmetic. Almost without exception, I have to teach the young men how to figure after we take them into the firm. The older employees, educated under a different kind of educational system, were thoroughly grounded in this, as well as in other rudiments.

"As far as writing and spelling are concerned, it is difficult to get a new employee who can make out a charge account properly. To give you an illustration of this: Archdeacon Richardson came in some time ago and ordered some goods to a charge account. The bill was made out, charging the firm of 'Harch, Deeks and Richards.'

Discounting Too Deep.

"We take them in from 15 to 16 years of age, whether from the public school or collegiate. They can get by with addition, but discounting is beyond them.

"There is no question in my mind that the fault lies with the present educational system. The children haven't time to learn anything thoroughly. They are too much crowded with non-essentials. These are things that the taxpayers should think about. If people want their boys to learn nature study, they will be willing to pay extra for it. I know I would. But I do want my boy thoroughly grounded in fundamentals and to learn these in such a way that he has a working knowledge of them. We pay high rates for education. Are our young people getting the benefit that is their due?"

Had Severe Cold PAIN IN CHEST SPASMODIC COUGHING

Many people when they contract a cold do not pay any attention to it, thinking perhaps it will pass away in a day or two. This is a mistake for before they know it, it has settled on the lungs.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that on the first sign of a cough or cold it must be gotten rid of immediately, otherwise it may cause years of suffering from some serious lung trouble.

Mr. A. George, 30 Blevin's Place, Toronto, Ont., writes: "Having greatly benefitted from your remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I take the liberty to write you a few words about the effect of that wonderful syrup. Two years ago I caught a severe cold followed by a spasmodic cough and pain in my chest. I was treated by many doctors but without any benefit, and also took many proprietory medicines which all failed to cure. One of my friends recommended Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after using three bottles I was completely cured. I recommend it to anyone as a God-sent remedy."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S TWO GORE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

A marked preference is shown this season for the separate skirt, which features the yoke effect, and this is true whether a silk or woollen weave—or a combination of materials—has been employed in the development of the garment.

In the model illustrated the deep yoke is the big style feature, but not the only one to draw admiration. To give a distinguished air to the garment and to show Fashion's latest whim, there are gathered side panels; these are joined to the tops of the gores, and gores and panels are attached to the yokes. The closing is at the left side with snaps. The button decoration to hip depth increases the "line" effect of the skirt, and so has more than decorative value.

For sports, walking and general wear, black and white worsted, serge, gabardine, woollen novelty weaves and other similar sturdy fabrics are suitable. With the aid of one of the new practical style of blouses a very smart costume may be had by copying this design. Style, fit and value will be all to your liking at a [illegible] original.

Size [illegible] No. 8,103, cut in sizes 24-30 waist measure. To make in size 24 requires 4⅛ yards of 36-inch material. To obtain the pattern, send [illegible] cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 9 for 25 cents.

German Counter Offensive Is Launched

PETAIN IN SUPREME COMMAND OF FRENCH

GERMANS LAUNCH HEAVY ATTACKS AGAINST BRITISH AND FRENCH LINES

Huns Smash Hard Drives at French Positions at Many Points and Also Against the British at Bullecourt and on the Hindenburg Line--Germans Repulsed After Terrific Fighting in General Counter-offensive Movement --British Advance Posts at Bullecourt Forced Back a Short Distance.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, May 15.—Germany launched a concerted counter attack on both the French and British fronts to-day of such force as to suggest at most a general counter offensive movement. The attacks were repelled for the most part, but both the British and French forces were compelled to relinquish insignificant bits of ground.

Field Marshal Haig's report detailed a tremendous German bombardment of the positions his troops have gained on the Hindenburg lines, and particularly at Bullecourt, followed by attacking waves. There was heavy fighting. In the northern part of the village the British Commander-in-Chief frankly stated British advanced posts had been "forced back a short distance." At Ypres British raids took prisoners.

PARIS (French Official), May 15.—The German forces launched an attack against the French lines on a wide front near Bouvelle, following a violent artillery bombardment, the War Office announced to-day. Heavy fighting at various other sections of the front was also reported. In the Bouvelle attack, the Germans were checked by heavy machine gun fire, and failed to reach the French lines, except at one small advance trench. Other German attacks were launched southeast of Ilian, north of Craonne, east of Hill 913, and northeast of Auberive, all of which the War Office said failed, French defenders imprisoning many Germans.

LONDON, May 15.—Violent German attacks against those portions of the Hindenburg line held by British forces around Bullecourt, were repulsed last night, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day.

"Early this morning the enemy heavily bombarded our positions at Bullecourt and on the Hindenburg line, and threw two determined counter attacks on the Hindenburg line which failed completely. There at Bullecourt were also repulsed after heavy fighting. Our advance posts at the northern portion of the village were forced back a short distance.

GENERAL PETAIN IN COMMAND OF FRENCH

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, May 15.—General Petain was to-day named Generalissimo of the French armies with supreme command of the forces in the field. General Foch, one of the heroes of the Marne, who commanded the French centre at that memorable battle, was named to succeed Petain as chief of staff.

General Nivelle, who has been in command of the French field forces, will have command of certain army groups.

The sweeping changes in the commands of the French fighting forces were decided upon at a session of the Council of Ministers.

Recruiting Now For The Peterboro' Battery

As announced in The Examiner yesterday Peterborough is now the headquarters of the 74th Depot Battery, Canadian Field Artillery, and arrangements are now under way for an energetic recruiting campaign for the Peterborough unit. This city has already supplied many recruits for the 74th, which has already sent over 300 men overseas in drafts, and it is expected that now that it is a Peterborough battery there will be an even greater response for the appeal for men for this fascinating branch of the service.

The 74th Peterborough Battery is in command of an officer who has seen much overseas service in the person of Major Randolph Crocker, who took the 39th Battery, C.F.A., overseas from Valcartier Camp in July, 1915, and later to France in January, 1916, as part of the 2nd Divisional Artillery going into action first in the Ploegsteert district, and afterwards at Ypres and on the Somme. With an officer of so much experience at its head, the 74th should make a big appeal to the young men of the city.

The 74th will winter in Peterborough with a full establishment it is hoped, while this summer the training will be done at Petawawa Camp, an ideal spot for artillery training.

The Peterborough Battery has opened a recruiting office at the Armouries and from now Major Crocker, Lieut. McLaren, or one of the N.C.O.'s of the battery will be there to give any information.

Will Submit Terms on Irish Question

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, May 15.—Premier L'oyd Geo.ge will transmit terms of a settlement of the Irish question devised by the Government to Irish leaders to-morrow, Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law announced in the House of Commons to-day.

What the Governments proposals for settlement are were not disclosed by Bonar Law. He said the Premier would outline them in detail in a speech to the House of Commons on Monday.

Irish members of the House protested angrily at this slight delay in making public the exact concessions which had been determined upon by the Government.

Those in touch with the situation to-day said it was by no means certain these proposals would be acceptable to the Irish Nationalists, but they looked for further concessions on both sides when the Government's plans have been made public.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Ninety lives were lost on April 24 in the torpedoing of the 7,782-ton British liner Aboosso, according to stories of passengers here to-day from Europe. She was armed, but the submarine was never even sighted.

The ship was torpedoed without warning. Forty-six passengers were lost and forty-four of the crew.

The Aboosso was unable to stop her engines after the German torpedo struck, and she smashed into three lifeboats, crushing those aboard or drowning them. She was bound from Nigeria to Liverpool.

Doubles the Life of Carpets and Rugs

The big special features of the Eureka Electric Vacuum Cleaner make it easy and convenient to handle, and may be operated by any one who knows how to sweep with an ordinary broom. Every housekeeper knows that broom bristles wear and tear the fabric of carpets and rugs, whereas air suction which does the cleaning in the Eureka, preserves and brightens. Leading carpet manufacturers give it as their opinion that the use of an Eureka electric cleaner will double the life of carpets and rugs. Messrs. Grant and Thorpe, the George street electricians, have the Eureka for sale. They will send it to you on free trial in your home.

A POWERFUL APPEAL TO RUSSIA'S SOLDIERS

PETROGRAD, May 15.—A powerful appeal to Russia's soldiers not to be blinded to the fact that Germany is seeking the destruction of free Russia; also calling for a revolution of workmen and peasants in Germany and Austria Hungary, but again voicing a demand for renunciation by the Allies of any policy of conquest, was issued by the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council to-day.

"Do not forget that the Kaiser's regiments are destroying revolutionary Russia. It would be an irreparable catastrophe not only for us, but for the working classes of the entire world," says the proclamation.

150,000 ARE AVAILABLE

OTTAWA, May 14.—The Minister of Militia, replying to a question by Mr. F. F. Pardee in the Commons to-day, made public some interesting facts in regard to the National Service registration cards sent out last winter and now analysed and collated. The total number of replies secured was 1,849,-680, or little more than eighty per cent. of the estimated number which would have been received had all the cards sent out been filled in.

The total number who are classed as "military prospects," according to the answers given on the cards, is placed at 364,470, but of these approximately forty per cent. are now engaged in agriculture, shipbuilding, munitions or mining, and consequently can hardly be drawn upon on present conditions.

150,000 Available for War.

Apparently Canada has still something like 150,000 males of military age who have not yet enlisted, and who if selective conscription came into force would be available for active military work. The classification given of "military prospects" is as follows:

Between seventeen and thirty years of age, single, with no dependents, 58,897; between seventeen and thirty years, single, with no dependents, but engaged in agriculture, shipbuilding, munitions or mining, 40,365; between thirty-one and forty-five years, single, and no dependents, 13,684; between thirty-one and forty-five, single, and no dependents, but engaged in agriculture, shipbuilding, munitions or mining, 11,365; between seventeen and forty-five, single, and with dependents, 50,675; between seventeen and forty-five, married, and with dependents, 92,409; between seventeen and forty-five, married and single men, with dependents, but engaged in agriculture or other necessary forms of productive work, 97,095.

In view of the great demand for men for the shipbuilding trade, it is interesting to note that only 184 men gave their trade as shipbuilders, while 3,010 men declared themselves to be toolmakers, tool-setters, etc.

No Classification of Work Yet.

The statement given out by Sir Edward Kemp adds: "Under the order in Council, each National Service Director is authorized to decide whether or not in any particular case the services of an individual are more important to the State in a civil than in a military capacity. No effort has been made up to the present to determine which work may or may not be regarded as non-essential. The circumstances of each particular case have been considered as occasion has necessitated."

"YOU ARE GOING TO VISIT SICK PERSON IN HIGH BUILDING"

One of the Cryptic Readings of the Cards as Interpreted by Woman Charged With Fortune Telling

SENTENCE SUSPENDED

The fortune-telling case the police uncovered in the west end two weeks ago proved disappointingly tame and colourless in its unfolding before Magistrate Dumble this morning. There were only three witnesses, although one of them stated that nearly every night women knocked at her door, mistaking her house for that of the fortune-teller. There was little of heart interest in the evidence, none of the usual mystic influences were mentioned and the customary properties of "tall dark man and another woman" were apparently unfamiliar in the readings of the cards in this case. Nor was there anything mysterious about the little woman who appeared in court, burdened with lusty twin babies and whom, it was stated, was visited by many women and girls, curious, and perhaps, a little credulous of the future revealed by the cards. The accused and the first two witnesses were soldiers' wives, a mutigating factor in the suspension of sentence upon the former who was found guilty by Magistrate Dumble, and of the curiosity of the latter who, it was assured, were anxious for the safety of their husbands.

"We heard she told fortunes, so we went to see," said the first witness. "She produced a pack of cards. She told me I was going to have a sickness, that my husband would never go to France and that he would be back in Peterborough in six months. There were present in the room my companion and I, the fortune-teller and her daughter and a border. She told me I was going to have a parcel left at my door. It would be something for my boys to wear.

"I never went back again. Five weeks after I got a parcel. It contained shirts from England for my boys. They came from my husband's father and sisters. We get them nearly every Christmas.

"Had she any means of knowing you got them?"

"Yes, she's heard me say before that I got them."

"Did she ask you for any pay"

"She asked for a quarter and my companion paid it."

"That was reasonable," commented the magistrate.

"She didn't get much," added Mr. Hatton.

DID NOT IMPLICITLY TRUST

Mr. Gordon cross-examining, asked —"You didn't believe she could tell your fortune?"

"No but I heard she could and went down to see."

"You don't think she could tell your fortune, a woman of your knowledge and age?"

"I'm not old. I'm young yet.

When I first went there I believed she could tell fortunes, but hardly anything of it came true."

NOTHING MYSTERIOUS.

"You were curious to know the future and thought you would find it out?" asked the magistrate.

"I guess that's about it."

"Did she call upon any power to assist her in this black art?"

"No, she just shuffled the cards three times and laid them on the table. She told me my husband would go to France but would never get shot. He was then in England, but is in France now. She said a lady would come to my house with a parcel and warned me not to accept it, because it was stolen.

I asked her how much it would be and she asked for twenty-five cents.

"Peterborough Prospects Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, MAY 15, 1917

WHO DIED FOR US.

Since April 9th, in France, fifty-one Canadian soldiers from Peterborough and vicinity have laid down their lives for us and the cause of liberty and humanity. Their passing has made sad hearts and homes in Peterborough. While natural feeling cannot suppress the grief and fail to feel the pang of loss, there is comfort for the sorrowing survivors. These men have died the death the brave man and the true patriot welcomes; the death at the post of duty gallantly attempted and done—"faithful unto death" winning the "crown of life." They have shown the "greatest love" that lays down life for a friend.

For how can man die better
Than facing fearful odds;
For the ashes of his fathers
And the altars of his God.

To die for God and Country is the greatest sacrifice a man can make; the greatest glory he can win. We mourn them deeply, yet, through the mist of tears that will not be denied to natural affection, we see the light of the halo of honour that shines about their heads. We see them and think of them as men who have honoured themselves, honoured their kin, honoured their country, and honoured their Christianity, by following the millions who have gone before in dying for the triumph of its principles. They have emulated them, and more, they have followed the example of Him who laid down his life for the humanity and the conditions of human happiness and human good, for which our Peterborough boys—piece to their ashes—gallantly fought and gallantry died. Their glory will not die; as time will kill our grief.

The muffled drums and roll has beat,
The soldier's last tattoo;
No more on life's parade shall meet
The brave and fallen few.
On fame's eternal camping ground,
Their silent tents are spread;
And glory guards with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead.

WE ARE DEBTORS.

The national, popular and official attitude towards Canada's duty in helping this war, would be changed, if our governments and all our people would realise the meaning of the great struggle now going on in Europe. Mayor Mitchell, of New York, in his address of welcome to the French commissioners, hailed them as allies to whom the obligations of the United States could not easily be fulfilled but by contributors of food, money, munitions and men. He intimated that for thirty-three months the allies had been bearing the burden of this war, not for themselves alone, but for the world of democracy—that liberty and freedom and justice should not perish from the earth.

There is no doubt that if the enemies of the allies and humanity should triumph—if militarism should succeed—the United States and Canada would be among the first of extra-European countries to feel the weight of the mailed fist; that the States of the Union and the Provinces of Canada would get what has been visited upon Belgium and northern France, Great Britain, France and Italy, and even crucified Belgium, are fighting for the people of the United States and Canada, as well as themselves.

This is the solemn and momentous truth. But do we of Canada and the United States realize it? Are not both in the mood of national paupers, accepting the charity, the gifts, the service, the sacrifices of the allied armies and peoples, as a dole due us, without appreciation or gratitude? If our shores were actually invaded, if the Hun were at our gates, would not the men of Canada, now indolently playing the part of idle onlookers, spring to arms? Would not our whole population put aside all inconsequential things and join in the universal effort to defend our homes?

Are we so bladder and dull of soul that we do not see and realise that this very thing is happening in another form—that we are virtually invaded, and are in the most tremendously real danger? If we could and would see this wouldn't we act differently? Would we be buying and selling as calmly and carelessly as if there was no danger and no stern call to duty? Would we be pleasure-seeking or wasting our resources in the dissipation of our time and our means—more precious now than ever before? With universal food scarcity and high prices; viewing the needs of our allies—of our soldiers in the field—for every scarp of contribution in food and otherwise, the waste of an ounce of food or the foolish and unfruitful waste of a cent of money becomes, not only wicked, but criminal. The failure of every fit man to enlist for service and the failure of the government to take adequate measures to bring about potential reinforcements for our soldiers at the front, who are thinning their ranks in splendid and victorious service for our sakes, becomes, not wicked, but criminal?

It is a proud thing to hear returned warriors of our allies and the greatest journals of Britain and the United States praise the valour, the courage, the fighting skill and resourcefulness of Canadian soldiers, but it is a humiliating thing to know that tens of thousands of equally robust (physically) men are idly onlooking, while their brethren are bearing the brunt and winning glory for Canada. It is a fine thing for Sir Robert Borden in Britain to tell in rounded oratorical periods how Canada is academically a solid unit behind the Mother Country in this war; but it is not a fine thing to know that the government he left behind him is paltering with the food situation, and marking time in the matter of recruiting initiative. It is a sad thing that thousands of our young men and tens of thousands of our citizens, act as if the war was none of their concern; as if their personal interests, their pleasures, had superior claims above the situation that demands, not only undivided devotion, but daily sacrifice, for the common cause. We are debtors to our fighting soldiers and to their allies every hour, and every hour should be consecrated to giving them the measure of help which our resources, in men and material, and the needs of the situation, demand.

"KEEPING TAB."

The Minister of Labour, Hon. Thomas Crothers, is in sympathy in one way at least with the people of Canada. They know, and he knows, for he has been told it often enough, by deputations and press reports, that there is a high cost of living problem in Canada, and the people know it in their pockets and stomachs. The mass of the people whose income is not $7,000 a year, plus a sessional indemnity of $2,500, feel the shortage very keenly, and they should be grateful that the Minister is doing his bit, as he told Parliament; he is "keeping tab on it." This means, we suppose, that he is watching it—with the detached interest of a man who doesn't feel hungry when somebody else is not getting enough to eat. But "keeping tab" doesn't help the situation, as the Minister, or the Government, doing something, would do. The Minister of Agriculture has told us time and again that his "investigations" yielded the information that there was a surplus of a million and a half bushels potatoes in Canada above all requirements for food and seed. This is cheering information, as information, but it doesn't help much when the whereabouts of these potatoes are as carefully concealed as a state secret. The potatoes may be somewhere so that the Minister of Labour can "keep tab" on them, but the people cannot get hands on them—unless the hands have in their turn, a good round sum of money in them, and not even then.

If the Minister of Agriculture has discovered a million and a half bushels of potatoes that are more than is needed for food and seed, he must know where they are. If he can't tell where they are he is only guessing—only fooling the people who are desperately hungry for potatoes, for both food and seed. We know the people of Peterborough are hard pressed to get potatoes for either feed or seed—so hard pressed that some of them are cutting the eye parts out of potatoes for planting and using the eyeless parts for cooking. It seems a sinful and shameful thing that if the Minister of Agriculture is telling the truth in saying that he has discovered a million and a half bushels of potatoes above all requirements lying around loose, or stowed away, that the people should have to pay $1.00 and $1.25 per peck for seed potatoes. If the Minister would only tell where his million and a half bushels are, and tell them to put them on the markets, who thinks that the price of potatoes wouldn't come down within reach of the average poor man's purse and the mouths of his hungry children?

Yet with all the high price and the urgent demand for seed potatoes to help the people meet the government's appeal for increased production, the Minister and the Government allow a part of this surplus of potatoes to be exported, thus reducing the visible supply, and making prices still higher.

And to add insult to injury, the government issued yesterday a statement or suggestion, which means that the government is going to do nothing to deal with the hoarding of a million or so bushels of potatoes in the country. This suggestion or advice, is to tell the people, if they don't like the price of potatoes, then eat beans, which by the way, are dearer than potatoes—about as costly as clover seed. A despatch received yesterday states that the Department of Agriculture (the department that has a million and a half bushels of potatoes pigeon-holed somewhere) has issued a bulletin advising the people that at the price of potatoes their food value is not worth the money, and urging the people to plant beans instead of potatoes. Fine advice, when beans—$10 or $12 a bushel—are scarcer and harder to get and harder to pay for, than potatoes.

Have government and administration become a game of farce comedy? "Keeping tab" on the agonising high food situation, and doing nothing, telling the people there are potatoes by the million and exporting them, instead of making them available to public access, to the lowering of prices and relieving the shortage, is cynically indifferent, heartless and cruel statesmanship.

"You Are Going to Visit Sick Person In High Building"

To Mr. Gordon—"You knew she couldn't tell your fortune?"

"I went down more as a joke. I was satisfied she couldn't tell my fortune. I didn't go there to do her any harm and I'm not here to do her any harm.

Mr. Hatton—If you didn't believe she could tell your fortune, why did you pay her twenty-five cents.

"I paid what she asked. I never looked for the parcel and I didn't care whether she could tell fortunes or not. I went as a joke and paid her as a joke.

YOUNG GIRL THERE.

The next witness, a young girl of about twenty, said she had visited the fortune teller twice, once with a "lady friend."

"She took a pack of cards and spread them out on the table. I don't know what she told me the first time, I wasn't interested enough. I left a quarter on the table for her time taken up."

Witness said she paid a return visit two weeks ago taking a girl friend to spend the evening. Her fortune was told, but no money was paid on this occasion.

"She told me I was going to be sick."

"That was a safe proposition," Mr. Hatton observed.

"And that I was going to get a letter and post card."

"Another safe proposition," said the crown attorney.

"Did she mention the colour or his hair?" asked Mr. Hatton."

"No nothing like that. She said I was going to visit some one who was sick in a high building."

"That was church," said Mr. Gordon.

"Or the Nicholls Hospital," remarked Mr. Hatton.

"I didn't pay much attention to what she said, but it all came true.

Mr. Gordon, representing the defendant, pointed out that the witnesses admitted they had not put credence in the "fortunes" they had been told. Hence they had not been deluded, nor defrauded.

"This is a new understanding in misdemeanors that should be stopped," said Mr. Hatton.

"It's very serious," was Mr. Gordon's ironic reply. "They'll probably get after the Sunday golfers next."

Magistrate Dymble found the accused guilty, but suspended sentence when she promised to discontinue the practice. The woman replied that she had done so when she learned that it was wrong.

GERMANS TRY TO ESCAPE.

Effort of Steamships Thwarted by Japanese War Cruisers.

A Shanghai telegram received in official quarters says that the captains of two German steamers, which are interned in the port of Shanghai, where they took refuge soon after the outbreak of the war, attempted to get their vessels away late at night, after China had sent her protest to Germany on the unrestricted submarine warfare. The two steamers were sighted steaming at top speed towards the entrance of the port under cover of darkness, through the merchantmen moored in the harbor.

Japanese warships cruising near the mouth of the port espied the mysterious ships and gave chase. Aware of detection, the German ships turned and returned to their moorings. The entente warships are maintaining a vigilant watch lest they should make another attempt. Japanese authorities allege that the intention was to sink the steamers at the entrance of the river to block trade with Shanghai.

"Is that you Mr. Riley that keeps the hotel?

"Is that you Mr. Riley they speak of so well?

"Is that you Mr. Riley, they speak of so highly?

This is a music hall song which was in vogue some thirty years ago, and the Mr. Riley referred to is one A. N. Riley, who in his time was one of the best known caterers in London. He arrived in Montreal a few days ago with no very good impression of the catering capacities of those who had charge of carrying over 5,000 soldiers' wives and children who reached Halifax last week by one of the big liners. Their trials and tribulations started when with their own supply of food, sufficient for sixteen hours, they arrived at a Scotch port, with their rations exhausted—the vessel was there; but according to Mr. Riley, its provisions had not been completed sufficiently to feed a hungry party of 5,000 people—and they were compelled to remain ashore, and were marched to the town hall of the port, but the question of obtaining food had not been solved when the mayor attended by many prominent citizens, appeared on the scene, and all kinds of supplies were distributed among the emigrants. As there was no one officially in charge, Mr. Riley acted as spokesman to express the gratification of the crowd for his timely assistance.

RILEY SPOKESMAN.

He had also to act as spokesman on board ship, when some exceptionally bad "tack" he claims, was provided for the women and children, and many were his interviews with the chief steward, the captain and some other officials. The party, however, arrived intact at Halifax a few days ago.

Twice the vessel put back to its sailing port in Scotland, owng to submarine scares, and not apparently without reason for, on the second occasion, it was reported in the press that twenty-five submarines had been snared that day.

"We saw the periscope of one sub," said Mr. Riley, who has lost a son at the front (R. M. Riley, of the 73rd Battalion), and who has five nephews also on active service. He has in his capacity of caterer, attended forty Lord Mayor's banquets, wedings, and the coming of age of sixty four gentlemen. He says of himself, "I have in over fifty years, done more catering than any ten other men put together."

He was manager of the catering department at one of the cuf ties at the Crystal Palace when 84,000 people had to be provided for and on one occasion at the Darwin Exhibition in Lancashire he was presented by the late Duke of Devonshire (then Lord Hartingdon) with a gold medal in appreciation of his catering services.

Textile Union Members Met At Labour Hall

Miss M. J. Kelleher addressed the second meeting of the Textile Union in the Labour Hall last night. There were about one hundred girls present. Miss Kelleher spoke of the three unions now in Ontario, Guelph, Toronto, and the small branch in Peterborough. In her address she said it was not necessary to go to parliament to get shorter hours and better conditions generally, but that being thoroughly organized was the better way.

She claimed that employers sent superintendents and fore-ladies to meetings to "knock" labour organizations and do anything to divide the workers among themselves. She said she had heard some employers have said since the last meeting, in a subtle endeavour to restrain organization, that only the riff-raff of a country belong to the American Federation of Labour. This she denied vigorously, saying it is sanor judgment and education which leads to organization.

Miss Kelleher secured at last night's meeting twenty new members which is very satisfactory to the Union workers. The Textile Union was started with the opening of the Brinton Carpet Works, with a membership of only nine.

The next meeting will be held at the same time next week in the Labour Hall.

Oriental Hotel Will Close On 4 June the First

The closing of the Oriental Hotel is announced to take place on or about June the first. A sale of furniture will follow a few days later. The passing of the Oriental Hotel will lessen the amount of available hotel accommodation in the city and will throw greater business on those that remain.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM PTE. C. ROBINSON

Former Employee of the Brinton Carpet Company Who Went Overseas With 93rd Battalion Tells of Conditions in England.

IS WITH THE C. A. S. C.

The following letter has been received by the Brinton Carpet Company from Pte. C. Robinson, a former employee, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion:

To the Brinton Carpet Co. and Employees.

Please accept my warmest thanks for parcel received to-day. It has sure been a long time coming, but it was well worth waiting for. All the contents were in good condition. You know we don't get exactly the best of food, and the mustard was fine with our bully beef. I have never been a heavy smoker, but this life, at times, is so trying, I have smoked a lot lately. While writing this I am enjoying a cigarette out of the parcel, and in the clouds of smoke I can see the inside of the carpet factory and almost hear the looms and the shouts of the weavers. "Whoa- A bobbin dropped." But I feel sure I will be back at the old job about Christmas or New Year's; for the rate the war is going now, neither side can stand the strain, especially Germany. Just now the fiercest battle of the war is raging, and men are being mown down like grain. I have about two years' service in. Eight months at the outbreak of war with the Worcestershire Regiment, (Imperials), and sixteen months with the Canadians. I have seen hundreds of wounded, both British and Germans; I have attended concerts for wounded and seen the singer break down, crying, half way through the song, and the boys have taken the chorus up and almost lifted the roof. The spirit of the boys is wonderful. You know this soldiering business is a pretty rough life. I have slept in water six inches deep and in some places you could wake in the night and light a match and see dozens of rats running around the tent. We used to get a cheese and stick it on the end of the bayonet and hold it by a rat hole and when the came to get a bite we used to jab the bayonet into him. We have caught lots that way. You should see the people buying potatoes over here. They are only sold about twice a week, and the people have to line up one behind the other to buy them. We have meatless days, potatoe-less days, but no work-less days. Of course you know I came over with the 93rd Battalion, and when they were split up I was sent with a lot more to the 39th Battalion. Now I am with the Canadian Army Service Corps. We are the boys who feed the whole Canadian Army, or I may say, armies. We handle thousands of tons of meat, fish, bread and groceries, etc., every day. I have not met many Peterborough fellows. I saw Jack O'Dette the other day before he went to France. That was in February or March, 1917. He was then a Sergeant and looked fine. The last time, but one, I was on leave, I saw a Zeppelin brought down just outside London. Believe me, that is some sight. As soon as we get word that a raid is expected the sky is a-blaze with searchlights, and directly they find it the strong light seems to blind them in the Zeppelin. Then the star-shells go up, and light the whole sky up like day. Then the guns open fire and our aeroplanes go up and get above the Zeppelin, and the order is given to the guns to cease fire, and then the aeroplane drops bombs on the Zeppelin and, as a rule, the Zeppelin catches fire, and down she comes. I tell you it is a wonderful sight. But for all that I would rather see the Hydro-Electric on George street.

Well, I think I had better ring off now. Again tendering my sincerest thanks to all.

Your fellow employee,
C. ROBINSON.

P.S.—Will be pleased to hear from any of you. Address to Pte. C. Robinson, No. 195558, 130 Wood Street, Kiddiminster, Eng.

Motor-Driven Fire Apparatus Before Committee

Last evening a committee of the Whole Council met to consider the tenders for a motor driven pumper and hose wagon for the fire department. Tenders were received from the leading fire apparatus manufacturers of Canada and the United States. In many cases the prices asked for the particular piece of equipment named, were higher than the amount provided for that purpose. Ald. Dobbin revived the time-worn suggestion that instead of purchasing the regulation apparatus, the city convert two ordinary touring cars into a couple of motor driven hose wagons. Ald. Stratton said that this would only be a makeshift. One thing in particular that condemns such a move is the fact that the average car is not constructed for the heavy work required of a fire department truck. After considerable discussion it was decided to adjourn the meeting until this evening, when the Aldermen will have an opportunity of meeting representatives from the various companies whose tenders have been submitted. It is evident that the entire Council is convinced that if any money is to be spent in this direction it should be expended on something that will give good service and stand up against the hard work that will be required of it.

The Absentees.

Ald. Worth, Ald. Langford and Ald. Saunders were absent, much to the regret of Mayor Duffus, who expressed the hope that all the members of the Council would be on hand to-night when the matter comes up for further consideration. Ald. Saunders was reported to be putting in his garden, while Ald. Worth was reported to be washing his car.

Ald. Stratton and Ald. Weir may not be present to-night, as the former remarked that he would be in Toronto to-day, and Ald. Weir is to address a meeting in the East Ward.

Gala Night At The Grand

Production of "Pinafore" To-night Promises to Be Great Success —War Veterans Going

The final dress rehearsal last evening for Pinafore was an unqualified success. The scenic effects are excellent, orchestra quite a revelation, and the dancing by a ballet of 18 young ladies would put many a professional troupe to shame, while the acting, singing and costuming of the chorus and principals leaves nothing to be desired. The public should support these performances generously, for it is no small risk to prepare and put on such an elaborate production. The artistic success is assured. Come to-night and bring your friends and thus help to make the affair a complete success in every way. The curtain will rise at 8.20 sharp to-night. The Peterborough War Veterans will attend in a body.

T. WALKER & CO'S REAL ESTATE LIST

Interesting Substantial Settlers in Peterborough By a Keen Knowledge of Property Values, etc.

Being in business and being a business man are as different as two opposites. The mere fact that an individual establishes himself in a desirable location, opens an office or establishment, and announces that he has entered the commercial activities of the city, does not place him among the business brains of the community. Peterborough has not reached its present status through the work and endeavour of men who have been content to sit idly by, and watch their fellows initiate the developments of the city.

Our business men, for the most part, have had energy and character, and have gone ahead producing business for themselves and growth for Peterborough with a spirit which has developed its industries and its civic enlargement.

When T. Walker & Co. entered the real estate field, a few years ago, they added an asset to the city which has helped to expand the property value and personal ownership of freehold estates. The strict adherance to sound, solid methods, the satisfying of the patron at any price, and their qualifications for, in the language of the street, "delivering the goods," have brought T. Walker & Co. prominently before individuals and institutions of the city and district tributary. A glance at the list of their real estate offerings, which appear in to-day's Examiner, will serve to show the public the confidence and respect in which the firm is held. As general insurance agents as well as trustees for renting, collecting and the management of properties, this firm affords facilities for public service of an important character.

GOT GERMAN FOOD

Mr. Jas. Heffernan, 640 Reid street, has received a letter from his brother, Pte. Wm. Heffernan, who enlisted with the 155th at Belleville, and is now in France with the 2nd Canadian battalion. Writng on April 18th, dian battalion. Writing on April 18th,

Dear Jim,—I received your last letter about a week ago but have not had a chance to answer sooner. I am all right and feeling fine, and hope you are all well at home.

Well, Jimmy, we had some scrap last week, but I came through it without a scratch, although I expected to go up in the air any time. You have no idea what it is like until you go through it. The shells are bursting and the shrapnel is flying all around you. I guess old Fritz didn't know what was coming. I guess you have read all about our advance long ago. You wanted to know if I was getting fat or not. Well, I guess not. You don't get fat on this job, but I have been having all kinds of German bread since we moved him out. I was in one of their dug-outs for a couple of days and got four loaves of rye bread, some beef, sugar and tea, so we had lots to eat.

Rosy Cheeked Girls

Every girl—every woman—wants rosy cheeks. They mean not only good looks, but more important still, good health. Rosy cheeks is merely rich, red blood, healthy blood, shining through the translucent skin. You can't have rosy cheeks unless your blood is rich, red and pure.

When a girl's color fades, when her cheeks are pale and her lips bloodless she is in a condition of health that should not be neglected. It is then that her heart palpitates after the slightest exertion. She is breathless on going up stairs. She is troubled with headaches and backaches, and finds little or no enjoyment in life. This is a condition that comes on gradually, but its first sure sign is the disappearing of color from the cheeks, just as the sign of returning health under proper treatment is the return of a pinkish glow to the face. To every weak, pale-faced girl or woman Dr. Williams' Pink Pills offer a sure way to new health and rosy cheeks. These pills actually make new, rich, red blood, bring brightness to the eyes, and color to the cheeks and lips, and in doing this they bring new strength and energy to every part of the body. When using these pills take plenty of fresh air, exercise moderately, and take a nourishing diet. Under this treatment the weakest anaemic will soon be restored to health.

Remember delays only add to the seriousness of your conditions. If you are at all unwell begin to cure yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They are sold by all medicine dealers, or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WOMAN'S TRAGIC DEATH.

Wrapper Caught Fire from Match, and she was Suffocated.

KINGSTON, May 15. — Mrs. S. W. Day, of University avenue, met a tragic death. She lit a match in a dark corner of the cellar to locate the cause of an offensive odour. Her woollen wrapper caught fire and she was suffocated and badly burned. Her husband entered the house shortly afterwards and made the terrible discovery. She leaves two sons and one daughter here. One son, Ernest, is a law partner with W. F. Nickle, M.P., and the other is Dr. H. E. Day. Her eldest son was Lieut. Calvin Day of the 2nd Battalion, the first Kingston officer to fall on the Western front at the battle of Langemarck.

USE OF TOBACCO WILL BE DISCUSSED BY SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Next Sabbath the different Sunday schools throughout the city will be studying the temperance lesson. It is the desire of the Sunday School Association that the matter of the use of tobacco, especially by young men and boys, be particularly discussed. The smoking habit is usually learned through the use of cigarettes. In 1900 A.D., about 110,000,000 of these were used annually in Canada. In 1915 A.D. [illegible],668,666, according to government statistics, were used. Upon those imported the government collected a duty of $4,065,824.30. Since the war began there has been a tremendous increase in the consumption of cigarettes. This is no doubt due to increased circulation of money, but after all indicates a great waste. Our country since the war began has borrowed several hundreds of millions of dollars and the interest on this vast sum is enormous, but the sums paid for cigars and cigarettes per annum would more than pay this interest.

These matters should engage the attention of every Sunday School teacher, as the tobacco habit has a particularly baneful influence upon the mental, moral and physical stamina of the boys. Thrift and economy are important items these days. It takes only fifty-five men each using 5 cents worth of tobacco per day to smoke away $1,000 in a year.

Ennismore Court Of Revision Meets

The Ennismore Court of Revision met on May 7th, 1917. All members present, Reeve Young in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read.

Moved by Mr. Harrington, seconded by Mr. Telford, that the minutes of the last meeting be confirmed.

No appeals were sent in against of the said roll no errors were found.

Moved by Mr. Telford, seconded by Mr. Moloney, that the assessment roll be received and adopted and the Clerk to sign the same.

Moved by Mr. Telford, seconded by Mr. Crowley, that the repairing of the drain at the Ennismore Cross be left over for future consideration.

Moved by Mr. Crowley, seconded by Mr. Harrington that the tax roll of 1916 be received from the Collector as all taxes are paid.

By resolution of the Council Messrs. Taylor and Hall be authorized to give no tile for culverts on public roads in the Township of Ennismore without an order from a member of the Ennismore Council.

By resolution of the Council Eugene Murphy was reappointed Collector for 1917.

By resolution of the Council the following accounts were paid: John White, for cleaning Town Hall, $5. Wm. F. Cavanagh, Assessor, as balance of salary and for attendance at Court of Revision, $17. George Boate, for sheep killed by dogs, $28. Wm Harrington, for putting in culvert and repairing road, $5. Robert Boate, for sheep killed by dogs, $24.00.

The request of a deputation of residents of Ennismore Village, asking the Council to put large tile in the drain on the side of the road, in place of the small tile that is there at present, which is detrimental to their property, was left over for consideration. The matter of expending money on roads was left over till the next meeting.

C. O'Connor asked for a culvert at his gate. No action taken.

Moved by Mr. Harrington, seconded by Mr. Moloney, that this meeting adjourn until the call of the Reeve.

It is the opinion of many of the local ratepayers that the practice of having tags put on dogs should be carried out in the country as well as in the city.

TEN MILLION MEN MUST REGISTER IN UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, May 14.—There are approximately 10,078,900 males in the United States of the military draft age of 21 to 30 years, both inclusive, according to figures compiled to-day by the United States Census Bureau for the guidance of the War Department in making its plans for the drafting of the first 500,000 men under authority of the army draft bill, as agreed on in conference at the Capitol to-day.

On April 15, 1910, there were 8,898,280 males, 21 to 30 years old, in the United States. This was by actual count. It is estimated by the census bureau that this number has now increased to 10,078,900 and that there are not less than ten million males in round numbers who will have to be registered under the terms of the new legislation. The law excuses no males of the draft ages from registration. Every man must be registered. From the registered list, after certain exemptions are made, the army will draft from each state its quota to make up its first "cadre" or force of 500,000 men.

The War Department has issued the following statement:

"From many letters received daily, the War Department learns that registration and selective drafts are being confounded. These are separate and distinct processes. Registration is simply the enrolling of all male residents of the United States between the ages of 21 and 30, inclusive. Every male resident between the designated ages must register on the date set by the President's proclamation, unless he is in the regular army, the navy, the National Guard, or naval militia, actually in the federal service.

HEAVY PENALTY PROVIDED.

"The enrolling is done in each voting precinct by a registrar appointed for the purpose. The duties of the registrar are mandatory, and are performed under the sanction of an oath. Nothing is left to his discretion. He is liable to heavy penalty, imprisonment with no alternative of fine, for making a false return or in any way being a party to or conniving at practices of favoritism or evasion. A like penalty is imposed upon the individual who fails to register.

"The later process of selection will be made by lot from the names entered on the registration rolls. Full information as to exemptions and methods of selection will be published later. For the present it is all important that the primary duty of registration be impressed upon all who are subject to it.

"Interpreters will be needed especially in the foreign sections of our large cities, to assist in answering questions on the registration cards. Here is an opportunity for service by those who speak other languages than English. Schools and colleges no doubt will find in this a patriotic function. The War Department requests that volunteers for this work offer their services at once to the sheriffs of their respective countries, if they live in cities of 30,000 or over, to the mayors."

49,579 Huns Captured In Allies' Offensive

Other Captures are 444 Cannon, 943 Machine Guns and 386 Mortars.

With the French Armies in the Field, May 14.—Between April 9 and May 12 the French and British troops in the great Allied offensive captured a total of 49,579 prisoners. Included in this number were 976 officers. Other captures comprised 444 heavy and field cannon, 943 machine guns and 386 trench cannon.

This vast number of prisoners is being added to hourly. Raids all along the front last night brought in dozens, the French troops harrying German lines and seizing prisoners so that they could ascertain from the German soldiers stories and their regimental insignia how Hindenburg's troops are now disposed against them.

WON'T LET CZAR GO.

Ex-Imperial Family's Wealth Put at $9,000,000,000.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Confidential intelligence received here today through a diplomatic channel discloses, according to the Foreign Affairs News Service, a local organization, that the Russian Provincial Government's plan for the deportation of the dethroned Czar and Czarina has been defeated, at least, temporarily, by the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Deputies. The Government had decided, it was said, to banish the former ruler and his consort, together with their son, to England, which country had volunteered an asylum for them.

It was also made known, the same news service reports, that the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Deputies had been responsible for the refusal of Grand Duke Michael to accept the regency. The Council was reported to favour a Republican form of government, while the majority of members of the Provisional Ministry were for a monarchy under a liberal constitution.

The reason for the Council's opposition to the banishment of the Czar and Czarina has been attributed to its desire to deprive them, together with the Czarevitch that was, of a portion of their immense fortunes, a Commissioner having already been appointed to take over their domains. Their combined wealth is estimated to total $9,000,000,000, which formerly yielded them a prodigious income, which members of the Council have declared was scandalously squandered.

Revelations concerning the former ruler's colossal fortunes have tremendously modified sentiment in Russia, and are declared to have created an overwhelming demand for the establishment of a republic.

MUNITIONS BEFORE PAPER.

Coal Difficulties Cause Newsprint Shortage, Says Bethmann.

AMSTERDAM, May 14.— Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg has answered the plaint of newspaper publishers of Berlin, stating that the Government is taking all possible steps to insure a supply of paper to the newspapers.

The present shortage of paper, he says, is "due to the difficulty of obtaining coal. In this connection sufficient supplies of coal for munition making must take the first place."

The Chancellor asks the papers to limit the use of paper to an even greater extent than that fixed by law.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—After a short conference this morning, the Senate and House conferences wrote into the Selective Service Army Bill an amendment authorizing President Wilson to raise a volunteer force designed for Theodore Roosevelt's leadership.

LONDON, May 15.—An Amsterdam despatch says the Germans have already 325 submarines in operation, and thirty-nine of the newest type carry crews of fifty-six men each. According to the Amsterdam Telegraaf, from eighty to one hundred submarines have been lost through British nets alone. Each submarine gets wireless instructions every morning from Heligoland, the story says.

BERLIN, via London, May 15.—German forces stormed and captured St. Berthe Farm, east of Fort Malinaison, near Monchy, to-day's official statement declares. English attacks around Monchy were broken down by fire.

Fort Malinaison, which the Germans declare they have captured, is on the French front, not British. It will be noted that the German official statement is not confirmed by either the British or French.

NEW YORK, May 15.—A torpedo fired by a German submarine at the White Star liner Baltic, April 19, missed the great liner by a bare ten feet, according to information obtained to-day from travellers in New York. This was the second attack on the Baltic in two days.

LONDON, May 15.—Further details of Germany's war aims were to be announced by the Imperial German Chancellor in the Reichstag to-day. Berlin despatches declared the speech would probably not be a formal, prepared in advance document, but that Von Bethmann-Hollweg would talk in answer to various interpolations. From this it was deducted that nothing really new or striking would be announced.

Borden Is Reticent As To Conscription

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 15. — Sir Robert Borden and his two colleagues, the Hon. Robt. Rogers and the Hon. J. D. Hazen, Canadian representatives of the Imperial War Cabinet and Imperial War Conference sessions in London, were back at their respective offices this morning.

Sir Robert and his colleagues return hale and hearty despite their trying three months in Great Britain. They are full of hope that the imperial cabinet idea will produce salutary results.

As for the work of the Canadian soldiers, Sir Robert had nothing but most unreserved praise. Vimy Ridge, he declared, was regarded as one of the greatest successes of the war. Sir Robert also paid high tribute to the work of the railway construction and forestry corps.

With regard to the appointment of a Canadian high commissioner in London, Sir Robert had no announcement to make.

On the question of conscription he was equally reticent, although evidently eager to hear the latest news on the subject. The Hon. Robert Rogers, however, was more communicative, expressing the hope that Canada would raise her promised quota of troops without the necessity of following the example of Great Britain and the United States in respect to compulsory service.

The Prime Minister will make his first appearance in the House this afternoon, but will not make his expected address until later in the week, probably Thursday.

Mr. C. A. G. Spence Is Vacating Office

Former Agent of the Children's Aid Society Accepts Position as Inspector of Munitions

Mr. C. A. G. Spence has been relieved of his duties as Agent for the Children's Aid Society in accordance with his request. To-day Mr. Spence is removing his effects from the office which he occupied in the city buildings, and in the matter of a day or two will accept a position as inspector of munitions.

At first it was the intention of the Society to retain Mr. Spence's services until May 23, but owing to the urgency of his new position it was decided to release him at once.

One effect of Mr. Spence's resignation may be that the Society will have to seek quarters elsewhere, as it is hardly likely that the Utilities Commission will extend their use of their office any longer.

Two applicants for the position vacated by Mr. Spence are said to be Mr. G. W. Powell and Mr. S. Touchburn.

Refused To Discuss Germany's War Aim

Special to The Examiner

LONDON, May 15, 5 p.m.—Much to public surprise the German Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg refused to discuss Germany's war aims in the Reichstag to-day, according to a wireless message from Berlin received here late to-day.

The Chancellor refused to answer interpellations on Germany's peace aspirations, declaring such a statement "would not serve the interests of Germany."

"SPECIAL" TRACTION TREADS

Babies Starving To Death In The Streets of Vienna, Says A Neutral Traveller

LONDON.—From a neutral who has spent prolonged periods in Austria-Hungary several times since the war a Berne correspondent learns that never has the Austrian capital been in such a plight as now. Men, women and even children lately have succumbed to hunger and want, and he is assured that children have been literally dying in the streets. Nowhere is there enough to eat, he says except among the wealthy classes and the well-to-do farmers. The organization for the distribution of provisions is wretched, despite the fact that a "People's Food Office" has existed in Vienna since December 1 last.

According to the organ of the Wholesale Purchasing Association of Austrian Consumers' Associations, prices have risen taking Austria as a whole, by 104.67 per cent. since the war began, but in Vienna proportionately far more. It is not merely that all necessities have become so exceedingly expensive, but that they are not procurable. The few who have money still contrive to purchase enough, but the great majority who have not money either go constantly hungry or depend on public kitchens which since the creation, have supplied, the poorer classes in Vienna alone with 38,253,815 meals, at a total cost of about $2,165,000.

474,300 DEPENDENTS.

At the end of 1916 there were also, in Vienna alone, 474,300 persons in receipt of government relief—grants of assistance—in other words, about one in four of the entire population of the Austrian capital. These government grants since the start of the war until the end of last year had reached the sum of $50,000,000, besides which there is a large number of destitute refugees in Vienna who have cost the State since the war began $11,625,000. And yet the Burgermeister of Vienna has just been warning the public that they must be prepared for worse times still to come in the next two months.

The clothing question, especially the problem of how to provide any kind of boots or shoes, is almost as difficult of solution as the food question. Actresses and others, who before the war went about in elegant fanciful shoes, now are glad to wear any cast-off footgear, or even clothing, they can get, as also are many girls and women earning their living in offices.

Even more acute is the fuel question in Austria-Hungary, and in Budapest since February 15 theatres have been shut at ten o'clock and concert, dancing and other entertainment rooms closed until further notice. The lighting of all public buildings must be reduced by one-half.

The gloom and depression of Vienna, in short, with its restricted tram services, restricted electric lighting—even in private houses—limited gas consumption and, worst of all, restricted heating, with a degree of cold seldom experienced, is so distressing that the neutral who tells this story said if he had not been able to leave he would have lost his reason.

DEATH'S CIVILIAN HARVEST

The hospitals, public and private, are all overfilled, and death is reaping proportionately as great a harvest among the civilian population as among the soldiers at the front. For obvious reasons no regular vital statistics for Vienna are published. The last figures obtainable about the birth rates for the whole country show that in all the forty-nine larger towns reporting vital statistics in October, 1915, there were only 4,100 children born alive and more than 7,000 deaths. In Vienna alone the number of children born alive sank from 3,323 in March, 1915 ,to 1,9[illegible] in December, 1915

In Vienna, and, indeed, in all the larger Austrian cities, there are now large numbers of houses and business premises to let. Moreover, as little removing as possible is done, because this has become so costly, owing to the shortage of labour, of vans and of horses. In many cases young married women have returned to live with their parents, or several women friends have clubbed together to take a flat or house. It is not dwellings alone, however, which are everywhere to let, but rows of business premises, shops, etc., also are standing empty. Many women attempted to carry on their husbands' businesses for a time after the latter were called out, but whether because Viennese women's business ability is not highly developed, or for whatever reason, they seldom seem to have met with success and in a short while were obliged to close down.

WAR LOAN NOT SUBSCRIBED

The fifth Austrian war loan, which was to have closed on January 10 last, and which before that date was announced as so brilliant a financial success, has not yet been closed, and the banks in Switzerland are being inundated with circulars, some of them marked "Confidential," and issued by the Viennese Banking Association, offering all manner of inducements to the Swiss fly to walk into the Austrian spider's parlor. There is not a single Swiss managed bank in Switzerland which has been tempted by these reiterated offers of Austrian war loan stock. Austria, as a matter of fact, is already bankrupt. Her government does not allow any money to leave the country, even to pay for goods purchased in Switzerland since the war.

No one in Austria, for instance, is allowed to send to Switzerland a sum exceeding 200 crowns ($40). If a person wishes to send a cheque from Vienna to Berne he must get permission from the authorities; must state why he wishes to transmit the money, what it is for and whether for goods purchased, then for what kind of goods and when they were bought. An Austrian subject or any other person receiving in Switzerland a cheque on an Austrian bank cannot get it cashed in any Swiss bank until it has been sent to Vienna and there countersigned by the authorities. At the same time, a person in Switzerland must, of course, fill up a paper saying why he wishes to cash a cheque on Austria. As such a transaction generally takes about six weeks to complete—if it ever should be completed—it is understandable that there should not be a keen desire to do business with Austria at present. The reason for these unheard-of measures is stated to be that the authorities wish to improve the Austrian exchange aboard. The result is, however, that Austria is virtually cut off from financial transactions even with Switzerland, and there are hundreds of people in Switzerland who are suffering as a result of not being able to get paid for goods delivered to Austrian consumers.

CANADIAN RAILWAYS WATCHING RATE INCREASE CASE AT WASHINGTON

New Freight Rates Asked For by U.S.A. Lines Will Fall $75,000,000 Short of Increased Expenses for Present Year.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The estimated increase in expenses for the year 1917 on five United States railroads was given to the Interstate Commerce Commission as $133,500,000. This total covers the five largest Eastern carriers, who in common with other United States lines, are asking for a fifteen per cent. advance in railroad rates.

The estimated increases in expenses as compared with the increased revenues that will accrue from the rate advances are as follows:

	Estimated Inc. in Expenses, 1917
Pennsylvania	$51,900,000
New York Central	42,700,000
Baltimore & Ohio	16,000,000
New Haven	12,900,000
Erie	10,000,000
Total for 5 systems	$133,500,000
	Inc. Revenue from Rate Advance
Pennsylvania	$60,[illegible]
New York Central	31,[illegible]
Baltimore & Ohio	12,[illegible]
New Haven	5,[illegible]
Erie	4,[illegible]
Total for 5 systems	$[illegible]

On these five roads the advance sought will fall $[illegible],000 short of the increase of 1917 operating expenses over 1916, while taking all the United States roads the advance would fail by $75,000,000 to cover the increased expenses.

Detailed financial exhibits were presented to the Commission, showing that the railway rate of increase has been declining steadily for some years, due to the fact that while rates for service remain stationary, the cost of producing transportation rose steadily. By increased efficiency of operation the carriers had been able to counteract rising expenses.

The average tractive power of locomotives had been increased 50 per cent.; the average capacity of freight cars 40 per cent.; and the average freight train load 72 per cent. The diminishing return on railway investments had contracted the flow of new capital into the industry, however, and made proper development very difficult.

Mr. Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad System, speaking of the necessity for fair dividends for the railways, said: "An emergency exists, not temporary but continuing, which affects transportation in such a way as to require prompt relief through increased net earnings."

Alfred H. Smith, president of the New York Central lines, pointed out the difficulties the railroads have been experiencing. "If we had been able," he said, "to do many of the things that we know needed to be done the capacity of the railroads would now be much greater. But the capital was not to be had, at least at rates which we could afford to pay."

"I do not wish to appear as an alarmist. The problem must and will be solved in some way. But there is a change of circumstance, by which our operating income is reduced to half of what it was last year."

Representatives of the Canadian railroads are in Washington watching the proceedings before the Commission with the keenest interest. The tremendous increases in the price of coal, wages and materials have been common to Canada as well as to the United States, and the officials of the American roads appreciate the fact that the burden of increased expenses is made additionally heavy for the Canadian lines by reason of duties and war taxes which must be paid upon coal and other commodities entering Canada. A general increase for both Canadian and United States lines is confidently anticipated here.

The "Crisis" In Photo Play

"The Crisis," which will appear Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next, is an elaborate photo-play, following closely the story told in Winston Churchill's famous novel. It has been the aim of Wm. N. Selig, the producer, to emphasize the romance of the Civil War, rather than its cruel horrors, and to present the political aspects in a fair, broad and impartial spirit, vigorously, but without offence to either North or South.

The love story is told fully in the rich, romantic vein that has rendered Churchill's novel a welcome relief from the indelicate sex fiction of the day, and its thread runs through the entire length of the photo-drama. The story connects directly with history in that Lincoln is an essential character in the working out of the romance. It is he who brings the lovers together in the final episode.

Advantage is taken of the fact by Mr. Selig to work in a broad, picturesque background of history. The Lincoln-Douglas debate and the political campaign of the '60's are vividly reproduced. The bombardment of Ft. Sumter follows directly on the ascension of Lincoln to the Presidency, and the country rushes to arms. Stirring incidents of the great war are momentarily flashed before the eye of the spectator, culminating in the battle of Vicksburg, fought by both land and water forces in detail, north and south, embodied in the persons of the two lovers, are finally re-united at Lincoln's bier.

Council Makes A Cautious Move To Get Potatoes

If the citizens desire to obtain a supply of potatoes the Council has a car load in sight which Mayor Duffu believes can be intercepted and held in Peterborough. From enquiries he pursued he learned that Mr. Wm. H Crough, of Ennismore, was receiving a car of Irish Cobblers and Delawares which was expected to arrive in Peterborough in a few days. The Mayor suggested that the Council might purchase them and offer them to the citizens as cost. A motion by Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Smith was passed, instructing the clerk to write Mr. Crough, asking him to meet the clerk and discuss the proposal. At the same time any citizens desiring potatoes are asked to notify the City Clerk how many bags they need. This will afford the Council some indication of the local demand and of the prospects of a car load being purchased by the citizens.

Use Cocoanut Oil For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Army of Half A Million Men For Mr. Roosevelt Indicated By Increase in Applications

With Nation Wide Commendation For Volunteer Force to France at Once, Washington Predicts Immediate Enactment of Measure Authorizing Despatch of the Expedition.

MR. BALFOUR MAKES AN UNANNOUNCED TRIP TO OYSTER BAY FOR LONG CONFERENCE

NEW YORK, May 16.—Arthur J. Balfour, Foreign Minister of Great Britain and head of the British war mission, held a conference with Colonel Roosevelt at Sagamore Hill and the immediate despatch of a large volunteer force to the battle front in France was discussed.

That was only one development in the efforts of Colonel Roosevelt to organize and lead an expedition against the Prussians at the earliest possible moment. Following a reconsideration by the House and provision for such a volunteer force it is expected by leaders in Washington that Congress definitely will authorize the Roosevelt division this week.

Instead of an army of 180,000 or 200,000, as seemed probable, the indications were that fully half a million men would volunteer to go abroad under Colonel Roosevelt. Eleven hundred applications for service were reported in the last four days, and in Philadelphia an entire regiment is to be recruited at once.

Editorial comment throughout the country strongly favours the proposal of Colonel Roosevelt. The consensus is that Congress should not delay and should place no obstacle in the way of the Roosevelt force proceeding to the battle front at once.

MR. BALFOUR'S TRIP A SURPRISE.

Mr. Balfour astonished all observers about the Vincent Astor house at four o'clock Sunday afternoon by entering an automobile with his parliamentary secretary, Ian John Malcolm, M.P., and starting away, closely followed by two automobiles filled with Secret Service guards. An hour elapsed before any one at the Astor house would reveal that the Foreign Minister had started for Oyster Bay.

The party arrived at Sagamore Hill at six o'clock. Colonel Roosevelt, hearing the automobile horns, ran hatless upon the wide veranda and waved his arms in greeting. Mr. Balfour stood up in his automobile and waved his high hat at Colonel Roosevelt. When he reached the veranda there was a hearty handshaking and Mr. Balfour was taken inside the house to meet Mrs. Roosevelt and Quentin Roosevelt, now a private in the aviation company at Mineola, home on leave.

After supper had been served Mr. Balfour and Colonel Roosevelt started about the grounds and stopped for a long time at the famous chopping block where Colonel Roosevelt frequently works off his excess steam with an axe. With one foot on the block Colonel Roosevelt spoke long and earnestly with Mr. Balfour, pounding his hands together in emphasis, with the Foreign Minister nodding an occasional affirmative.

It was almost dark when they returned to the house, and they sat about the big table in the sitting room until eight o'clock. At that time Mr. Balfour and Mr. Malcolm left the house and Colonel and Mrs. Roosevelt followed them to their automobile. A long and cordial goodby was said and as Mr. Balfour was whisked out of the grounds he was waving back to his hosts on the veranda.

"AN ENJOYABLE VISIT."

When they had gone Colonel Roosevelt saw the waiting newspaper reporters, who had arrived with the party from Oyster Bay. He said very bluntly that he would not say anything about the call, "not even a hint of what was discussed or said," but he added:

"The visit was very enjoyable. We are old friends."

Mr. Balfour reached the Astor House a little after ten o'clock and could not be reached, but among his conferrees it was understood that he and Colonel Roosevelt had discussed principally the need of an American army at the front in France and the progress of the Colonel's effort to get one there.

It was said that Mr. Balfour and Colonel Roosevelt had been friends a long time and that at the dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Friday night to the French and British missions they met and then it was arranged that Mr. Balfour was to go to Sagamore Hill. The arrangement was kept so secret that not even the members of the Mayor's Committee having charge of the entertainment of the city's guests knew anything of it, even after Mr. Balfour had started.

The Roosevelt place was under a heavy guard, village residents observed. Armed detectives had been stationed at many places and no strangers were admitted to the grounds. It was believed that precautions was taken to protect Mr. Balfour.

No Peace With Germany Until Prussian Autocracy and German Military System Is Crushed

German Army Must First Be Crushed on the Battlefront—Some Idea of What Modern Attacks Cost—Should Not Stop at An American Force of 1,200,000.

CONSTANT INCREASE DEMANDED

(By Captain Henry J. Reilly.)

NEW YORK, May 16.—We have stated that we will not make peace with Germany until we can do it on our own terms, which include among other things the downfall of the Prussian autocracy and military system. To impose these terms it is necessary first to crush the German army on the battlefield. The utter defeat of the enemy's army by means of battle has always been a cardinal principle of war if it was desired to dictate the terms of peace. This war not only has given no evidence of this principle having been changed but has shown that it more than ever holds true.

Germany has been blockaded in every possible way for more than two years, but her army still exists in sufficient numbers and is sufficiently well supplied to enable it to fight in a most determined manner. In our civil war the blockade by the navy did a great deal to ruin the Confederacy, but above all it was Grant's policy of remorseless, continuous attack by an army numerically superior, and kept so, which won the war for the North.

CONSTANT INCREASE DEMANDED.

To crush an enemy does not simply mean to successfully withstand his attacks. First these attacks must be withstood, and then he must be put on the defensive and successfully attacked. The battle of the Marne was decisive in that it stopped the German invasion of France and for the first time put the Germans on the defensive. However, it was more than two years and a half ago, and the German army still exists and is still determinedly fighting. To successfully attack demands two things. The first of these is a force so much stronger than that of the enemy that the enemy troops cannot stop its advance. The second is a constant stream of reinforcements, such that, in spite of the heavy casualties inseparable from a modern attack, the total effectives engaged will not only not decrease but even increase.

The increase is necessary because there must always be sufficient reserve on hand in order that full advantage may be taken of any weakness which may develop anywhere in the enemy's lines. With the elaborate trench system of to-day each line of trenches passed over absorbs a considerable number of troops, who must thoroughly clear them of all bodies of enemy troops. If this is not done it will happen, as has been the case more than once in this war, that troops after successfully passing over a position and becoming engaged in an attack on the next are taken in the back by the fire of the enemy soldiers and machine guns who, protected from the artillery fire by their bombproofs, have remained quietly hidden until the attacking infantry has gone by.

Thus even in the ordinary course of an attack an enormous number of local reserves are absorbed as the attack progresses even when nothing more is done than to keep the first line at is original strength. It was formerly considered that an attack could be successfully carried out with a preponderance of three to one. The experience of the present war has shown that determined troops in a well organized position can frequently withstand the attacks of ten to twelve times their number. This, of course, does not mean along all the front of many miles of a modern offensive.

COST OF MODERN ATTACKS.

Some idea of what modern attacks cost may be got from the fact that the British losses in the battle of the Somme were around 80,000. There was a period during the defence of Verdun in which the French used up sixteen divisions a week. The infantry alone of a French division numbers about ten thousand rifles. This does not mean that the casualties alone equalled sixteen divisions, but does mean that sixteen divisions a week were so used up that they had to be replaced by fresh ones.

The war since the beginning furnishes example after example to prove that an American force of 1,200,000, which is all that it is intended to raise at present, is a small one indeed. As soon as its training and equipment are well under way we should start on another million, and as soon as that is well started begin on still another. Even then we should expect and prepare for the time when other millions will follow. The total defeat of the enemy depends upon crushing his armies on the battlefield. This can only be done by a force much superior in numbers and kept so by an unceasing supply of trained men and officers.

GALT MAY CULTIVATE LARGE PIECE OF LAND

PROPOSAL TO GROW VEGETABLES TO SELL AT COST—MAY GO INTO COAL BUSINESS.

GALT, May 16. — It is likely the City Council will take up vegetable production on a large scale. At a special meeting of the council, the proposal of Peter Patterson for the city council to cultivate 20 or 30 acres and sell the product at cost, was considered and a special committee was appointed to consider the plan and to report. The Galt Vacant Lands Production Association will also take a part in furthering the project.

Mayor Edwards has announced that in view of the scarcity of coal and the small likelihood of the situation improving the city may go into the coal business. The matter is at present receiving his consideration.

Socialists Want German Republic

Much Indignation in Germany Over Hollweg's Refusal to State Peace Terms

Early Seeding In The West

Most Farmers Are Completing Operations Before May 15—Decrease in Acreage Noted.

Winnipeg, May 16.—Of 251 points in the three provinces queried by the Winnipeg Free Press, asking the percentage of wheat seeded; increase or decrease from last year; condition of soil; outlook for coarse grains, and condition of labour supply, 163 replies had been received up to an early hour this morning. The replies were sufficiently numerous and well distributed to give an adequate idea of conditions, and those conditions are much more hopeful and encouraging than could have been deemed possible ten days ago.

One of the most gratifying features of the report is that farmers are evidently not risking late seeding, and are conducting operations along that line before May 15. There will be the individual man who will risk seeding wheat up to May 24, but the farmers as a whole are now turning their attention to coarse grains.

There is a decrease in wheat acreage in Saskatchewan, and possibly in Alberta, but in Manitoba it looks as if the acreage would be about the same as in 1916.

In Manitoba 68 points were heard from and these showed wheat seeding practically completed.

With regard to coarse grains the indications are of a materially increasing acreage.

Nearly all reports on labour had the rider that more would be needed for harvest.

In Saskatchewan 77 points were heard from, and showed a material decrease in wheat acreage. The labour supply in this province is reported adequate. In a number of instances schools have been requisitioned for labour.

With regard to coarse grains, the indication was for material increase in acreage.

In all, fifteen points, well distributed over Alberta, were heard from. All of them indicated that the soil was in good condition and showed increases in the areas seeded to coarse grains. Labour supply seems fairly satisfactory.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone, rheumatic pains and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their threefold action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and the aches and make you well again.

Canada May Have Conscription In Next Two Months

OTTAWA. — There is a growing feeling in official circles here that Canada will adopt conscription within the next two months. Nobody in government circles now believes that the war will end this year, and it is realised that unless Canada's efforts are to be reduced, compulsory military service is necessary to maintain the Dominion's strength at the front. While in England Sir Robert Borden has had access to secret and confidential military information and from what can be learned here, he is coming back to parliament with a programme based upon that information and calling for still greater efforts on Canada's part.

What attitude the Liberals would take if a measure of conscription were introduced is problematical. It is believed that the most of the Ontario and western Liberals would support the government. It is noteworthy, in this connection, that N. W. Rowell, the leader of the Ontario Liberal party, and Dr. Michael Clarke, the noted Red Deer radical, came out this week flat footed for conscription. The demand in parliament for conscription was greatly strengthened today by a national service return showing that there are over 50,000 unmarried men in Canada eligible for military service, who are absolutely without dependents and not engaged in essential employment.

There is some talk of a conscription bill not applying to Quebec, but this is highly unlikely.

A year ago Sarnia was enjoying 6 cent bread but several rises in rapid succession have been recorded lately.

Whole Wheat and Milk—the two most perfect foods given to man. Dietetic experts may quarrel about everything else, but they are agreed on this. The proper combination is Shredded Wheat Biscuit with milk—the greatest amount of protein (the element that builds muscular tissue) for the least money. Two or three of these Biscuits with milk make a nourishing breakfast on which to start the day's work and they cost only a few cents. A boon to the housewife because they are ready-cooked and ready-to-eat. Delicious with berries or other fruits. Made in Canada.

Russia Overrun By German Agents

Vast Organized Body of Kaiser's Trouble Makers Drawn From Various Sources.

PETROGRAD, May 14.—While decent Russians are striving honourably to achieve political liberty by civil methods of argument and persuasion, which, if sure, are necessarily slow, the extreme parties—anarchists and social revolutionaries on one hand, and upholders of the old regime and agents provocateurs on the other, and above all the vast organized body of Germans—are using deadly weapons in the streets and lavishly spending money.

These Germans are largely real reichsdeutscher, who have lain concealed here or got across the frontier during the revolution or through the Russian lines at the front during the orgy of "brotherhood of the nations," which lasted for weeks and has not yet been entirely checked. To these must be added hundreds of German spies who were incarcerated in prisons and liberated with ordinary criminals during the first hours of the revolution, and unknown numbers of German prisoners of war who have taken advantage of the newly declared liberty in Russia and of the moujiks' apathy or misunderstanding of the situation to escape from Siberia and elsewhere.

All these cases of open foes to Russia find assistance, refuge and effective support in secret friends of the old regime and in such of the Baltic Provinces German as favour ties of blood more than bonds of fellowship.

Altogether these categories make a very formidable force in Petrograd, and are in newise susceptible to methods of argument or persuasion. The time has come for some united effort to be made to deal drastically with attempts to create dissensions which, if not checked, will lead inevitably to a crisis.

PUT HORSES ON RATIONS.

Britain Limits the Use of Grain for Food.

LONDON, May 14.—All horses in the United Kingdom are to be placed on rations after May 21. With the exception of horses used for war and agricultural work, of stallions in the stud and thoroughbred brood mares and foals, which are to have a limited amount of grain, horses after May 21 must be fed only on hay, straw, bran and dried brewers' grains.

HAD INDIGESTION
COULD KEEP NOTHING ON STOMACH

Indigestion is one of the worst forms of stomach trouble. The stomach becomes upset and you have a raw, debilitated feeling in it.

After a meal you feel that you must get rid of that nasty, bilious, burning sensation; that souring and rising of the food which is so unpleasant and in many cases very painful.

It is not necessary for you to be troubled with indigestion when Burdock Blood Bitters may be so easily obtained. This old and well-known remedy, which is a combination of nature's best roots, herbs, barks and berries will cure indigestion and all stomach troubles.

Mr. Lazare Savoy, Pokemouche, N. B., writes: "About two years ago I was troubled with indigestion that bad I could keep nothing on my stomach. I was sorely disappointed in everything I tried to relieve me. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles and can now eat anything that is set in front of me."

That grand old medicine, B.B.B., has been on the market for the past forty years, and we think without any fear of contradiction that it is the best cure for all stomach troubles.

Progress Slow On War Bills

NEW YORK, May 14.—A despatch from Washington this morning says:—The United States has been at war with Germany thirty-nine days and practically all the measures through which the American Government is to do its part in the world's battle for humanity and civilization still are in the talking state in Congress. The accomplishments since President Wilson convened the special war session on April 2 have been the passage of the resolution declaring a state of war with Germany and enactment of the seven billion dollar loan law.

Those who predicted that Congress would provide the nation with the means for making war successfully and adjourn by June now have extended their estimates to the middle of August.

Pressed for speed by the Administration on one side, and on the other by constituencies at home demanding action, Congress faces many big things to do, and quickly, if the aid of the United States in the world war is to be of its full value.

The immediately pressing need of the aid the United States can give the Entente Allies in the war on Germany is best known to the President and his closest advisers, who have heard from the heads of the French and British missions. Those to whom it has been communicated have been impressed with the necessity of greater accomplishments.

The War Programme.

As Congress to-day went into its thirty-seventh working day the war programme stood this way:

WAR TAX BILLS—Under debate in the House and up for public hearings in the Senate Finance Committee. At the present rate of progress it probably will be up before one House or the other for at least a month.

ARMY BILL—In conference again to thresh over the action of the House in restoring the so-called Roosevelt amendment. It provides the army the Allies need in France.

FOOD CONTROL BILLS—Debated one day in the House; an entirely different form of bill has been introduced in the Senate.

SHIPPING BILLS—The bill to vest legal title to the seized German ships in the Government has passed both Houses, but is in conference for reconciliation of differences; the bill to appropriate $400,000 for a start on the great merchant fleet to overcome the submarine menace has not yet been introduced, and may not be, while plans are being discussed of paying for the ships out of the $7,000,000,000 loan. The bill to authorize the taking over of shipbuilding facilities and ships building for foreign account has been introduced, but is not yet under consideration.

ESPIONAGE BILL—The House in passing the bill, retained the newspaper censorship section demanded by the administration, but did not enact an embargo section which the administration wants to keep supplies from going to Germany through neutrals. The Senate still has its bill under debate, retaining such an embargo section, but entirely without a censorship provision. The enactment of this bill probably will be in conference where the administration will bring pressure to have both censorship and embargo sections inserted.

PROHIBITION—As an amendment to the espionage bill, the Senate has attached a section prohibiting the manufacture of intoxicating liquor grains. Various prohibition proposals are pending in the House. The normal strength of the prohibition forces in Congress, coupled with the rising prices of food, present a likelihood of something to prevent foodstuffs from being manufactured into liquor, at least during the war.

FEDERAL RESERVE LAW AMENDMENTS—These additions to the existing bank law were proposed by the administration to bring more banks into the Federal reserve system and by liberalizing the reserve requirements, increase the gold holdings of the system more than $360,000,000. Congress was told their enactment would prepare the Federal reserve system for practically any shock it might be called upon to sustain.

Pressure On Congress.

In addition to these principal measures there are a few others which have administration sanction and which Congress will be called on to pass before adjourning.

For the present all the pushing influences of the administration are being conducted to convince Congress it ought to hurry with the army bill, the bills to provide ships as the first means of combatting the submarine menace, and to enact laws to guard the country against the pinch of hunger.

Expansion of the regular army to the full war strength contemplated in the Administration Army Bill has been authorized by President Wilson. Organization of the new regiments will begin to-morrow. About 65,000 of the 183,000 men to be added to the army already have been recruited.

"GOLDEN IS THE DAY."

The slim white birches
Flutter by the pines,
That darken the hillside
In straight, solemn lines.

At the brook's border
Ferns bend above—
In the wood a pigeon
Calls mournfully its love.

A little brown sparrow
Sings through the hours.
Golden is the pollen
Of pussy-willow flowers.

Golden is the day
And not yet sorrow.
So farewell, Mourner,
Till my love goes—to-morrow.

—Dorothy Leonard, in N. Y. Times.

DESPAIRING WOMAN NOW HAPPY MOTHER

Mrs. Stephens Did Not Need The Suggested Operation.

Patoka, Ill.—"I had been married five years and my greatest desire was to become a mother. The doctor said I never would have a child unless I was operated on for female trouble and I had given up all hopes when a friend told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly for sometime, and I am in better health than ever, and have a healthy baby girl. I praise your Vegetable Compound for my baby and my better health. I want all suffering women to know that it is the sure road to health and happiness."—Mrs. George STEPHENS, R. F. D. No. 3, Patoka, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming women's ills because it contains the mild, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are continually testifying to its strengthening, curative influence.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroids, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

BEIT NAAMAH NOW HOSPITAL

(Correspondence of the Associated Press from Basrah, Mesopotamia.)—Beit Naamah is the mecca of the wounded, sun-scorched officer sent down from the Mesopotamian front to the base at Basrah.

Beit Naamah is indeed a pleasant place, compared with what the officer has been used to at the Mesopotamian front. There are clean, white beds, electric fans, and a broad roof on which the convalescents lie beneath mosquito netting and awning, and enjoy the cool breeze.

The hospital stands about twenty yards from the right bank of the Shattel-Arab and occupies some two hundred yards of the river front. Between the main building and the river is a grove of orange trees laden with fruit, and on the north side another garden produces grapes, pomegranates and figs.

The main building is constructed on the oriental plan of courtyards, of which there are three—the men's, the harem or women's, and the outhouses with the hamman or Turkish bath. All are built around square gardens or orange trees.

Women and All Put-Out.

When it was decided to convert the long-standing Beit Naamah into a hospital the nucleus of the staff arrived and encamped in the court yard. The house was full of Arabs and the women were still in the harem, while the sanitary conditions and general filth of the place were unmentionable. Arabs, women, furniture and all were cleared out, and everybody turned to the work of housecleaning with a will.

A whole village behind the main house had to be cleared away, cesspools forty years old had to be filled up, rooms were scrubbed and whitewashed, water supply, drainage, kitchen and sanitary arrangements planned and executed, and scores of minor matters attended to. Gradually stores and appliances were accumulated, and in about a month the hospital was ready to receive patients.

Only Spot Without Dust.

Every evening nowadays a row of convalescent officers may be seen on the embankment under the orange trees, peacefully fishing. There is a fine breeze off the river, and the air is free from dust. Many avow that here is the only spot in Mesopotamia which is really free from dust.

The chief event of the day's routine is the arrival of the steamer, officially known as "P-33." When her whistle is heard from beyond the bend, everyone who is able to walk rushes down to meet her. Always there are a few new patients on board, sometimes the latest war news and sometimes letters from home.

As a hospital centre, Beit Naamah has been the most successful experiment of its kind in the East. Eighty per cent. of its patients have been able to return to duty, instead of having to be sent home or to India to recuperate.

SWEDEN WILL BAR SALOONS.

New Statue Forbids Private Establishments.

STOCKHOLM, May 14.—Sweden has taken a further step in the restriction of the sale of alcoholic beverages. Under a law adopted by the Riksdag, effective on Jan. 1, 1919, the present system of selling distilled liquors is extended to cover wines and beer. This means that every consumer will have to be equipped with a pass book in which his purchases will be entered.

Private saloons also will be abolished and all private trade in beer and wine and the importation of wine by individuals are forbidden.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitations of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Fred Ebert, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells."

There isn't a member of the family need suffer from indigestion, sick headaches, biliousness, flatulence, stomach, etc., if he or she will take Chamberlain's Tablets. They cleanse the stomach and bowels and stimulate the liver to healthy activity and tone up the whole system. Take one at night and you're RIGHT in the morning.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Heirloom

It Once Served as a Hiding Place

By SADIE OLCOTT

"Flora, here is a letter from Chesley, your Uncle William's lawyer, and he has inclosed a copy of the will."

"To whom has uncle left his property?" asked Flora.

"I can only speak for that enormous mahogany bedstead by which he set so much store—the gargoyle bedstead."

"Did he leave it to me?"

"Of course he did. Don't be foolish, my dear. Listen:

"I, William Gray, being of sound mind, etc., do give and bequeath to my grandniece, Isabel Gray, her heirs and assigns forever, my Sheraton sideboard and the sum of $1,000; to my grandniece, Flora Gray Winchester, her heirs and assigns, the mahogany bedstead which stands in my own chamber and which is known as the gargoyle bedstead, together with the sum of $1,000."

"Where shall we put it, Harry?" interrupted Mrs. Winchester breathlessly.

"Put it? You don't expect to get it into this flat?"

"We must have it here. I wouldn't examine it there with Isabel looking on. And, besides, it is such a journey down to Rosedale. Anyway, you cannot spare the time to go down now, and we must examine it together. I want to get it here as soon as possible. Who knows but behind, or some of the others might find the diary of Nancy Gray and learn the secret? My inheritance would be worthless!" Mrs. Winchester's voice trembled.

"Oh, all right!" said Winchester tractably; "but how the dickens are we to get it in here? I don't quite see. It's a very large piece of furniture, isn't it?"

"Now, Harry, dear," she cried, with one plump hand upon his lips, "that bed must be got into this flat somehow! First I will finish my letter to Mr. Chesley and let Nora post it at once. I can hardly wait to see the bedstead, Harry, and I don't dare dream of what will be ours when the secret of the bedstead is disclosed. Do you think, dear, I was wrong not to tell Uncle William about the diary of Nancy Gray I found in the garret?"

"Well, truthfully speaking, I'm afraid it wasn't treating the old gentleman quite on the square."

Two weeks afterward, while Mr. Winchester was engaged in a most important business transaction, he was summoned to the telephone.

"Yes, this is Winchester. What? Oh, the bedstead there! I can't possibly leave at present. I can't help it. Tell them to send it up tomorrow. I know it's important—the bedstead! No, I didn't speak. Yes, I will come home early. Good-by."

When he reached the Etruscan apartments that evening Winchester was confronted with a box of candy and a huge bunch of violets. He stepped to the elevator and pressed the button. A faint tinkle responded from some depth below.

Presently the janitor emerged from an obscure doorway and surveyed him with an unpleasant eye.

"It isn't a-running," he said gruffly.

"Poor management," commented Winchester as he prepared to conquer the eight flights that barred him from home and dinner.

"Huh!" exploded the man. "What with the freight elevator out o' order, and people breakin' windows movin' in big pieces, and them chumps a-tryin' to get the Teck Board in my passenger car and a-tearin' a lady's dress, and her the landlord's sister-in-law"— He glared wrathfully at the vanishing form of Winchester.

Opening the door of his apartment, resumption disorder met his eye. A huge, dark form almost covered the floor of the tiny parlor, which in its chaotic disturbance looked strangely unfamiliar to the master of the house.

In the library Flora reclined on a couch before the bright gas log, while sympathetic Nora applied wet cloths to her mistress' aching head. Wreckage from the parlor impeded progress at every step.

"My dear girl!" he uttered.

She turned a woebegone face to his.

"Such a time as they had trying to get it in the window! They were nasty because the window was too small, and one of them pulled it in with a jerk, and it struck the chandelier. The pieces of glass fell on my Wedgwood vase, and that is broken! I—I am quite discouraged!"

With a restless glance toward the parlor, where the gigantic bedstead lay like some dark shadow on his little home, and with an unpleasant recollection of the sporting janitor below stairs and of the tenderloin tip it would require to reduce him to his customary state of patronizing familiarity, Winchester endeavored to soothe his wife's shattered nerves, and together they obeyed Nora's summons to a belated dinner.

At table Mrs. Winchester drew a folded paper from her gown.

"This is the page I copied from the diary of Nancy Gray, Harry," she said, spreading it open before her. "I thought I would refresh my memory as to the exact location of the secret spring.

"'Richmond, Va., April 21, 1864,' read Mrs. Winchester in solemn accents. "'I am greatly alarmed for the safety of Grandmother Binpah's diamonds, and have vainly tried to find a closing place for them. The Yankees are digging up every inch of ground on the adjacent plantations searching for buried treasure, and I am quite at a loss to find a safe place for our heirlooms.

"'April 22.—Such an excellent idea! I have just recollected that there is a secret hiding place in Grandmother Binpah's mahogany bedstead. I will conceal the jewels there and will describe their hiding place so that in case anything happens to me one of our family may be able to recover them, even if the bedstead should be carried away.

"'First, one must observe the row of hideously grinning faces—"gargoyles," grandfather called them—that outline the top of the headboard; there are twenty-five of these gargoyles in all, and one must press the right eye of the thirteenth gargoyle from either end, when the face will swing outward, disclosing a cavity. Into this cavity I have dropped the leather bag containing the finest gems—they are worth many thousands of dollars—and I hope to recover them when the war is over.'"

Armed with hammer and screwdriver, husband and wife repaired to the parlor and locked themselves within, greatly to the disgust of the interested Nora, who availed herself of the keyhole as the only salve to her wounded self respect.

"My dear girl, how do you think I'm going to handle this thing alone? It weighs a ton! Why wasn't it put in the upper room?"

"The instant I saw it in the wagon I knew it would never fit into that room, so I told them to put it in here. We can remove it to the cellar afterward—or store it."

"It fits in here," remarked Winchester.

"Let us rip off the covering—I believe I know just where to place my finger on the spring! This is the headboard, of course, and here are the gargoyles!" cried Flora excitedly.

Winchester took out his knife and leisurely opened the blade. He lifted one corner of the bedstead, grossed and dropped it heavily.

There was a straining and snapping of cords as he applied his knife to the wrappings.

"Oh, Oh! I am just as nervous as I can be!" cried Flora, regardless of her husband's groan as he dragged aside the covering and disclosed the rounded, polished top outlined by a semicircle of hideously carved faces.

"Jove, what a beauty!" ejaculated Winchester, yet with a note of respect in his tone. "What a nightmare! Fancy wishing a guest 'pleasant dreams' and then introducing him to that couch! Whew! Now, which face, Flora, love?"

Mrs. Winchester triumphantly produced the paper from her laces and read solemnly: "'The thirteenth gargoyle from either end.'"

"The one in the middle, of course," announced Winchester.

"'Press the right eye,'" quoted Mrs. Winchester breathlessly. "I shall have them set in a glorious pendant, Harry!"

They hung expectantly over the bed.

"Now press!" she whispered sibilantly.

Winchester pressed.

"Nothing doing," he announced flatly.

"Press harder," urged his wife. "The secret spring has probably rusted. They do rust sometimes, don't they?"

"I never heard of one doing so. They always yield easily, and the door rolls noiselessly aside and leaves an aperture," said Winchester grimly.

"We must get it open!" cried his wife tearfully. "Try some of the other eyes, Harry."

"But why try the others, my dear? It says the middle one."

"There is—there must be a spring!" retorted Mrs. Winchester. "Why should Nancy have put it in her diary if there was not?"

"I give it up when you ask me to explain the vagaries of the female mind"— began Winchester as he viciously jabbed the eyes of all the gargoyles in turn without result.

Flora burst into tears.

"Don't cry, my darling," comforted her husband tenderly. "I'll find out the truth if I have to chop the confounded thing into kindlings!

"I wish I understood the meaning of it anyway," said Winchester presently when his wife had reached a degree of tranquility where she could nibble a bonbon appreciatively.

Again the tears flowed. "I might just as well have had another thousand dollars!" wailed Flora.

"What is this?" he asked, picking it up.

"An express parcel that came this afternoon. I haven't had time to look at it."

He ripped off the covers and looked stupidly at a small leather volume in his hand.

"The Diary of Nancy Gray!" he exclaimed. A letter fell from the book, and he opened it eagerly.

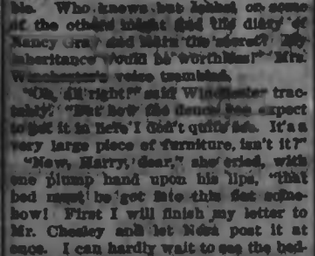
"Read it!" commanded Flora impatiently. And he read as follows:

My Dear Mrs. Winchester—Your uncle, the late Mr. William Gray, has placed this little volume in my hands with instructions to turn it over to you after his death. Of course you are aware that your uncle wrote this fantastical little tale for his own amusement many years ago, but it was never published. You are probably in a position to recognize that your uncle's clever wit enabled him to trace great liberties with your family history. As the present owner of the Gargoyle bedstead, this little book will prove to be of especial interest to you. Congratulating you on the possession of such a valuable antique, and with kind regards, I am, very sincerely yours,

JEREMIAH CHESLEY.

The long silence was broken at last by a suppressed chuckle from Mr. Winchester.

His wife buried her face in the sofa pillows. "Brute!" she sobbed bitterly. And Winchester is still wondering whom she meant.



Two Splendid Things

One is plenty of open-air exercise.

If you can't get all of that you should, it's all the more important that you should have the other tried-and-true remedy for a torpid liver and bowels that don't act freely and naturally.

Take one pill every night; more only when you're sure it's necessary.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS

Colorless faces often show the absence of iron in the blood.

Carter's Iron Pills will help this condition.

Was Anaemic

FOR OVER A YEAR

Anaemia, or blood turning to water, is caused by the heart becoming deranged, and, if the heart becomes weakened it cannot pump the blood as it should. As a result the blood becomes impoverished, and it loses its nourishing qualities. The face becomes pale and thin, and the lips bloodless. There is a weakness, tiredness and loss of weight.

When those suffering from thin or watery blood start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they can see a change from the outset.

Every dose introduces into the blood those vital elements necessary to make it rich and red. The pale cheeks take on the rosy hue of health, the weight increases, and the whole being thrills with a new life.

Mrs. R. J. [illegible], Dunsmuir, N. B., writes: "[illegible] a great worker at general housework. I overtaxed my strength and became completely run down. For over a year I was very bad with anaemia. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I got a box and when it was done I decided to get six more. When I had taken them I gained not only in strength, but in flesh and colour, and best of all was good health."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box; three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FIGHTING GARDEN FOES

Destroy Them or They May Destroy Your Crop.

SPRAYING A READY REMEDY

In This Column the Amateur is Introduced to Insects and Fungus So That He May Know Them by Their First Names.

(By E. C. JOHNSTON, Vegetable Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Garden Foes.

Unfortunately the backyard vegetable grower has some difficulties to overcome. It will not be all pleasure and profit which he must look forward to because there are innumerable insects and fungus diseases which cause much worry and trouble and necessitate the use of extraordinary methods to prevent or control. Most of these troubles may be overcome by spraying the plants with remedies which can be secured from seed stores and other firms handling them.

The following is a list of the more common vegetables and the insects and plant diseases attacking them with remedies or preventives.

ASPARAGUS. Beetles. Blue, black or yellowish colored, about one-half inch long, which appear early in May and feed on the young shoots. Keep the bed closely cut in the spring or allow poultry to run through it. After cutting season is over, spray with arsenate of lead. Encourage the lady bird bettle which destroys many of these insects.

Anthracnose or Pod Spots. Brown or reddish spots on the foliage and pods. Found on low damp ground. Plant only seeds which have no signs of the disease. Pull up and burn diseased plants as they appear.

CABBAGE, CAULIFLOWER, AND BRUSSELS SPROUTS. Root Maggot. A small whitish colored maggot one-quarter of an inch long. Looks something like a grain of wheat, found just below the surface of the ground either close to or on the roots. They eat the roots, causing the plant to drop over. Apply a solution of corrosive sublimate one-half ounce dissolved in five gallons of water, at the rate of half a teacupful over each plant once a week for five weeks after they are set out, commencing three or four days after planting.

Cut Worms and White Grubs. Greyish white grubs which work at the surface of the soil cutting off the plants. They may be trapped by spreading a mixture of poison bran over the surface of the soil close to the plants. A pail of bran with sufficient paris green to highly color it, should be moistened with molasses until it crumbles readily in the hand. This moisture should be kept on the ground during the early part of the season.

Worm. A small greenish worm three-quarters of an inch long, which appears quite early in the season. Dust with pyrethrum or hellebore powder when the plants have headed, or dust with a teaspoonful of paris green mixed with three tablespoonful of flour when young. A piece of burlap may be used for this purpose or an empty can with holes punched in the bottom.

Aphis, also called louse. Small greyish insects which multiply rapidly. They may appear at any time in the season. Spray forcibly with a solution made from steeping one pound of tobacco refuse in one gallon of water. This solution may be used on all plants on which Aphis are found.

CELERY. Blight. Black spots appear on the foliage followed by wilting of the plant and a soft rot on the stock. Spray each week with a mixture of Bordeaux mixture covering the entire plant.

CUCUMBER. Striped Beetle. Black and yellow striped beetle which feeds ravenously on the tender leaves of the plant in the very early stage of growth. Dust leaves when wet with sabes or air-slaked lime.

Squash Bug. Dark brown bettle which sucks the juice from the plant. Hand pick and destroy. Found on the leaves.

MELONS. Cucumber insects usually attacks and may be destroyed as given above.

ONION. Onion Maggot. A white maggot similar to the cabbage root maggot. No effective means of control. Spread charcoal over the ground or try the corrosive sublimate solution as recommended above.

Blight. A violet color, patches appearing on the leaf of the onion. Some advise spraying with Bordeaux mixture from the time the onion plant is three inches high.

POTATO. Colorado Beetle or Potato Bug. Dust with paris green when the dew is still on the plant, or place a teaspoonful in a watering can of water and sprinkle over the plant. If possible have the plant dusted with paris green before the bug appears.

Scab. Easily recognized by characteristic roughness of the tuber. Immerse the sheet tubers just before planting in a solution of two pounds ounces of formalin with two gallons of water. Dry, cut, and plant.

Blight. Brown spots distributed over the leafy surface, usually found in July. If they are not prevented from growing, the whole plant will be destroyed. Spray once a week for four or five weeks with Bordeaux mixture from July 1st.

RADISH. Root Maggot. Use the same remedies as given for cabbage and onion maggot.

TOMATO. Tomato Worm or Horn Blower. A large worm which rapidly defoliates the plant. Hand pick and destroy.

Blight. Black spots appearing on the leaves which spread rapidly and cause the whole plant to die. Keep the plants growing vigorously.

WOMEN IN TEARS HEAR MRS. SUNDAY

One Man Pleads His Way Into Meeting at New York Hippodrome

Mrs. Sunday, wife of the Rev. William A. Sunday, "preached" to 5,400 women and one man Tuesday afternoon in the Hippodrome, New York. The man was a reporter, and it was only after pleading his cause with much eloquence that he finally got inside the door. Even the ushers and policemen were excluded. This was not because anything was said which would have been unsuitable to a mixed audience, but just because Mr. Sunday was preaching at the same time to men only up at the tabernacle.

After the sermon by Mrs. Sunday 200 women shook hands with her. On the stage a choir of five hundred sat and sang softly as the women came up the runway to be greeted by Mrs. Sunday "Come to Jesus now"; "Jesus Is Tenderly Calling To-day"; "Just As I Am, Without One Plea," and "I Hear My Saviour Calling."

Young women prominent in society, acting as ushers, succeeded in getting the names and addresses of 187 of the "runway hitters." When she saw the aisle was too narrow Mrs. Sunday walked down it and made it easier for those who came forward.

Prayer was offered by Mrs. J. E. L. Davis, chairman of the local Women's Work Committee for the Sunday campaign. The music was led by Mrs. William Asher, of the Sunday staff. It was the general opinion that Mrs. Sunday proved herself as good a preacher as her husband. There is one marked difference. Mrs. Sunday used no slang. She has a rich, penetrating voice. She announced she would speak the next evening in the University Place Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Sunday introduced the members of the Sunday staff, each one explaining her particular line of work. Mrs. Sunday wore a black net dress with black jet trimmings.

Miss Frances E. Miller announced that a meeting would be held next day at noon in room 508 of the Municipal Building.

"The Hippodrome people have been mighty kind," said Mrs. Sunday in announcing the collection. "They cut their price in half and let us have it to-day for $300. I would like to get that much to-day and to have $300 over to hand to the local committee toward the general expenses of the campaign."

In beginning her sermon she told many instances of lives that had been reformed through her husband's preaching in other cities. She took for her text "In the beginning, God," and she delivered a plain gospel message, closing with the story of the conversion of her own father, in his Chicago home, only eight months before his death. All the rest of her family were confessing Christians, she said.

"I have rebuked myself a million times for not speaking to him about becoming a Christian," she said, and requested the women present to go home and ask the members of their family to give their hearts to Christ.

"Finally my courage came when we were leaving for a campaign in Spokane," she continued. "I was bidding my father good-by, and he looked at me so strangely! I knew afterward that he was waiting all the time for me to speak to him about his soul's salvation."

DISOWNS GERMANS IN U. S.

Fatherland Is No Longer Bound to "Hyphenates" in America.

AMSTERDAM, May 10.—Ritter condemnation of German-Americans is the feature of an article in the German paper Kreuz Zeitung on mobilization in the U. S. The writer refers to loyal resolutions passed at a meeting of German-Americans, and says: "German-Americans could not betray their old mother country more shamefully, seeing that nobody will assert that the existence of the U. S. is endangered by Germany. The more pitiful is the cowardly zeal with which the two million German-Americans in their national associations disown their race in time of distress. The term German faithfulness is hereby forever dishonored. Nothing any longer binds us to these 'German-Americans.' We only cherish one wish, that as speedily as possible, they erase the word German from the name of their organizations, its use being as insulting to the German people as to themselves."

The idea of a "tonic" for baldness that is tonic is manifestly quite absurd. But when your hair is falling in quantities appalling there's hope in that refreshing word,

AGE OF THE TIN CAN.

The Container That Carries Innumerable Necessary Articles.

It has taken a shortage of tin to awaken people fully to the fact that this is pre-eminently the age of the tin can. We have come to depend almost abjectly upon the can and its contents. Almost any kind of food, to say nothing of drugs, tobacco, cleansing agents, confections, and a host of other things is retailed in cans, and the can opener is more indispensable about a house than the hairpin.

Once the tin can was a subject for jesting alone, and was humorously set down as the provender of goats and the chief accoutrement of the hobo. But it went on gaining for itself gradually increasingly serious import, until now, when a deficiency is threatened, the Secretary of the Interior takes charge and captains of industry begin to issue orders.

If tin becomes expensive it will mean costlier food for the masses, whether the food goes up or not. If there were no canned foods at all to be had, a good many families would go hungry for a while. Nor would that be the end. Such articles of common use as do not come in tin cans are contained in soft tin tubes, so that tin controls the fate of all sorts of medicaments, dentifrices, complexion aids, and what not. Great is tin, and apparently it has no understudy. —Spokane Spokesman-Review.

ENGINEERS SAY CITY CAN MAKE ICE AT HALF CENT A BLOCK

MONTREAL, May 15.—While the ice barons of Montreal are not only raising their prices but are also arbitrarily deciding where and where not they will contract for deliveries at the increased rates they are charging, three of the foremost engineers in Canada, Messrs. H. E. Vautelet, J. B. McRae and A. St. Laurent, have informed the city authorities that should they so desire the city can at reasonable cost establish a plant and turn out ice for fifty-cents a ton or at the rate of twenty pounds for a little over one-half cent, ice which could be delivered for $1 a ton.

The information of the engineers regarding the manufacture of ice from filtered water is buried in the elaborate report on the waterworks improvement system which was presented to the Board of Control last Friday. Details as to how and where the ice plant might be established, together with data of the cost of installation and the securing of the necessary electric power follow the remarks of the engineers in connection with the establishment of a municipal power plant and the use for refrigeration or ice manufacturing purposes of the surplus power over and above all required for the operation of the civic pumping system up to a summer average of 142,000,000 imperial gallons per day.

During the scheme which they recommend for the municipal power plant the engineers estimate that a total of 9,500 h.p. would be available in the summer for purposes outside of the pumping of the city's water supply. Referring to this surplus power in connection with the ice manufacturing plan the engineers proceeding say:

"We have estimated from accurate data that the capital cost required for an ice manufacturing plant of a capacity of 300 tons per day during seven months, if located at Atwater avenue would be $337,000.00.

"This amount might be diminished by about $60,000, if the buildings of the present pump house (which would then have been moved near the filters) were used for the ice plant and as a garage for the motor trucks used in its transportation."

"This plant would manufacture ice from filtered water, at a cost of fifty-four cents per ton. We have estimated that the cost of delivery at different central places, such as the bath houses of the city, would be about forty-five cents per ton, so that the cost of ice delivered (not distributed) would be about $1.00 per ton.

Since the plan outlined by the expert engineers could not at latest be put into operation for a considerable time, the city at present has before it an opportunity of promoting the sale of ice to poor people at $7 for the balance of the season.

Mr. P. A. King, who has offered to manage a municipal ice plant for the city and to supply the ice at $7 a ton has, he stated at the City Hall last week, purchased 40,000 tons of ice which he is prepared to sell to grocers and butchers for delivery to their customers at a price not exceeding $7 for the season. Mr. King stated that he would furnish the ice to the grocers and the butchers but that if they did not care to undertake delivery to their customers at $7 a ton he would guarantee delivery to any families at the $7 rate. At present Mr. King says he is waiting to learn what the Board of Control intends to do with regard to the proposed establishment of a municipal ice plant. The chief city attorney has reported that the city cannot delegate its powers in connection with any commercial enterprise to any private individual and if the Board decides to defer action until they have studied the ice manufacturing scheme of the board of engineers, Mr. King will at once proceed to dispose of the ice he has purchased.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GREY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients; called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

RECKLESS FEAT OF DARING.

Soldier puts Hand over Muzzle of Mortar to Save Another.

One of the most reckless feats of daring reported during the war is recorded in a list of military awards just issued. Private Daniel Hall, who won the distinguished Conduct Medal, "put his hand over the muzzle of a trench mortar as it was fired in order to prevent the shell from hitting a man who had inadvertently stepped in front of the gun."

The same list mentions awards to six men who picked up live shells and threw them over the parapet.

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT ANY BREAKFAST

Wash Poison From System Each Morning and Feel Fresh as a Daisy.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, woman and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

NO DEFENCE MADE BY VON RINTELEN TO PLOT CHARGES

Prosecuters Had Hoped To Find Out About $500,000 Fund—Lamar Case Begins.

NEW YORK, May 14.— To the astonishment of everyone connected with the case, Captain Franz von Rintelen, of the German navy, declined to offer any defence to the evidence produced by the government to show that he and the seven men being tried with him before Judge E. E. Cushman, in the United States District Court, had conspired to prevent shipment of munitions to the Allies.

Captain von Rintelen's move came as a surprise to the special government prosecutors. It was equally unexpected by counsel for all of the other defendants, an agreement having been made in the court room the day before that von Rintelen's would be the first of the defendant's cases to be presented.

The decision of von Rintelen not to go on the witness stand in his own defence prevented what was expected to prove the most sensational feature of the trial. From the moment he was brought here from England, where he had been held for a year as a prisoner of war, it was expected the German officer would tell himself exactly what became of the $508,000 he brought with him to this country from Germany, revealing at the same time the names of the men to whom he gave it. Only $45,000 of the fund remained unspent when von Rintelen, using a forged passport, fled, and was captured in England.

So confident were Isaac R. Oreland and John Lord O'Brian, prosecuting the case for the government, that Von Rintelen would take the witness stand in his own defence that they spent the larger part of Wednesday night preparing the questions they intended asking him on cross examination.

Other Defendants Surprised.

Similar preparations had been made by counsel for the other defendants, several of whom contend that their clients never had any dealings with Von Rintelen.

Albert Massey, counsel for Von Rintelen, refused to state what caused the abrupt change in the programme. When Judge Cushman called upon Mr. Massey to open the case for his client, Mr. Massey announced merely that Von Rintelen did not desire to "controvert the government's case any further than had been done on cross examination of other witnesses."

Before this turn to the case Judge Cushman ordered dismissed the indictment against Frank G. Monnett, one-time Attorney General of Ohio. Mr. Monnett had appeared as counsel for Labour's National Peace Council, the organization through which, it is alleged, the defendants sought to achieve their purpose. In response to a motion by Mr. Monnett's counsel, however, Judge Cushman ruled that the government's evidence was insufficient as against Mr. Monnett.

Judge Cushman refused to entertain similar motions in behalf of Frank Buchanan, one-time Representative in Congress from Illinois; H. Robert Fowler, also a one-time representative from that State; David Lamar, Jacob C. Taylor, president of the Peace Council after Mr. Buchanan resigned that office; Henry B. Martin and Herman J. Schulteis, as well as the motions to dismiss that had been made previously in behalf of von Rintelen.

Introduced by Theologian.

M. Martin Dolphin, counsel for David Lamar, made his opening address to the jury. He caused surprise when he declared it would be shown that Mr. Lamar, brought here from his cell in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., to stand trial, had been introduced to von Rintelen by Professor Thomas C. Hall, of Union Theological Seminary. Mr. Dolphin, however, did not go into the details of the meeting.

At the offices of the seminary it was said, however, that Dr. Hill obtained a leave of absence early in 1915 to go to Germany and has not since returned to this country.

Mr. Dolphin caused another surprise when he called Mr. Monnett as a witness. He added to this surprise a moment later when he asked:

"Didn't you hear that it was intended to include William Jennings Bryan and Mr. Ford in this indictment?"

Mr. Oeland and Mr. O'Brien were on their feet in an instant, objecting to the question, however, and Judge Cushman sustained them before Mr. Monnett had an opportunity to answer.

Mr. Lamar's counsel also stated that it had been his intention to have Joseph B. Foraker, formerly a United States Senator, appear as a witness, but announcement of Mr. Foraker's death was received just before a subpoena was issued for him. It also was learned that Senator Lee S. Overman, of North Caroline, had been summoned to appear as a character witness for Mr. Buchanan, but he sent a telegram asserting he was unable to come because of his Senate duties. Judge Cushman intimated he would insist upon Senator Overman's answering the subpoena.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S PLAITED SKIRT.

By Mabel Worthington.

For practical wear, walking, sports and the like, a well cut skirt and a smart blouse make the best sort of costume. For the woman whose work is at a desk instead of in the home it is always "strictly business"—while the one piece frock is more readily taken up for afternoon or dressy wear.

Any woman who is at all interested in current styles in separate skirts will be sure to take special notice of the design illustrated. The model is cut in six gores so arranged as to give broad panel at front and back; to add to the straightness of line the side sections are laid in plaits. The left side of the front is chosen for closing the garment, which at lower edge in size 24 measures just 3 yards. A raised waist line is used and for novelty a separate belt with side tabs is added. It may show braid trimming or not as you like or be omitted entirely.

Serge, gabardine, satin, taffeta, wool novelty goods, mohair or linen and other spring and summer fabrics may be counted upon for an attractive skirt. By buying the pattern you can well afford to indulge your desire for this good looking model.

The skirt pattern No. 8,160 cuts in sizes 24 to 32. To make the skirt in size 24 requires 5¼ yards 36 inch material; 2¾ yards braid. Or 3 yards goods without the belt.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Nine-tenths of all Stomach Trouble, said to be Due to Acidity

A Physician's Advice on Cause and Cure.

A famous physician whose successful researches into the cause and cure of stomach and intestinal diseases have earned for him an international reputation, said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many diseases of the vital organs, were directly traceable to a deranged condition of the stomach which in turn was due nine times out of ten to excessive acidity, commonly termed sour stomach or heartburn, which not only irritated and inflamed the delicate lining of the stomach, but also set up gastritis and stomach ulcers. It is interesting to note that he condemns the use of patent medicines as well as of medical treatment for the stomach, stating that he and his colleagues have secured remarkable results by the use of ordinary bisurated magnesia, which, by neutralizing the acidity of the food, removes the source of the trouble. He contends that it is as foolish to treat the stomach itself as it would be for a man who stepped on a tack to rub liniment on the foot without first removing the tack. Remove the tack and the foot will heal itself—neutralize the acid and the stomach trouble will disappear. Irritating medicines and medical treatments are useless, so long as the contents of the stomach remain acid; remove the acidity, and there will be no need for medicine—the inflamed lining of the stomach will then heal itself. Sufferers from acidity, sour stomach or heartburn should get a small bottle of bisurated magnesia from their druggist, and take a teaspoonful in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after meals, repeating in fifteen minutes, if necessary, this being the dose which the doctor has found most efficacious in all cases.

THE BRITISH ARE STEADILY GAINING IN HARD FIGHTING AT BULLECOURT

In Spite of Bitter Resistance and Frequent Counter-attacks of Germans General Haig's Men Have Regained Nearly All the Ground Lost Yesterday and Have Established New Posts West of the Village---Germans Make Tremendous Attack on French.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH FORCES IN THE FIELD, May 16.—Despite determined resistance, the British early to-day regained nearly all the ground in Bullecourt which they lost yesterday, and also established new posts to the west of the village.

Bitter fighting is still in progress as this is despatched.

The Germans are striving to the utmost of their power to retain the initiative of action on that part of the front where the British pressure is increasingly threatening them. Early to-day the enemy started a heavy barrage fire along the British front positions from the Scarpe north to the railway running from Arras to Douai—a distance of nearly a mile. The hail of Teutonic projectiles rattled away for an hour and then came the attack. East of Bullecourt, near the Hindenburg line, some Germans, including an officer, were captured.

PARIS (French Official), May 16.—A tremendous German attack on a front of two and a half miles between Moulin and Laffeaux early this morning was repulsed by French troops, the official statement announced to-day.

"Along the Aisne there was an artillery battle during the night," the statement said. "Early this morning the Germans launched a powerful attack on a front of four kilometers in the region of Moulin and Laffeaux. Despite their efforts the French held all their positions. The battle is still continuing.

"At Auberive, Avocourt and Berry-En-Kopf German attacks also failed "In Haut Alsace the French cleared up German trenches imprisoning many."

PETROGRAD, May 16.—The Provisional Government decided to-day to reject the terms under which the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council proferred coalition in the new government.

The Council's insistence of certain matters of foreign policy was the demand which the Duma leaders refused to approve. The Provisional heads held the Government could not make the renunciation of principles announced formally on April 9, which was practically made necessary by full acceptance of the Council's terms.

LONDON, May 16.—British forces are steadily gaining around Bullecourt, and north of the Scarpe the fighting is continuing with unabated violence, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day.

"In the western portion of Bullecourt the fighting continued yesterday to our advantage," the British Commander-in-Chief reported.

"To the north of the Scarpe in severe fighting we are progressing."

Four Men Are Killed and Three Fatally Injured by Explosion on Michigan Side of the River—Explosion Rocked the Entire City

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., May 16.—Four men were killed and three fatally injured here to-day when an explosion damaged the Government pier near the Soo locks. A preliminary investigation indicated the explosion was an effort by plotters to destroy the locks which have been under guard of Michigan National Guardsmen for several weeks. The idea was apparently to interfere with the grain and ore traffic down the lakes. The explosion rocked the entire city and caused considerable damage to the State Fish factory nearby.

Unexploded dynamite caps were found on the pier after the explosion.

Later—It was later ascertained that the explosion was not the result of plotters, but accidental ignition of a dynamite cap.

AMSTERDAM, May 16. — German newspaper comment to-day on Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg's speech in the Reichstag reflected considerable disappointment. "The address does not alter the situation. It gives no evidence of deep thought," declared the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger. "The speech was disappointing, but it forced Scheidemann to drop his mask by threatening a revolution," said the Tages Zeitung. The Frankfurter Zeitung said the speech would "have a bad effect on the people because it indicated the war will last throughout 1918." "But," the editorial concluded, "a majority of the Reichstag have confidence in Hollweg as long as his peace views coincide with those of Hindenburg."

HAVE SENT OVERSEAS 7,376 PAIRS OF SOCKS

Seven thousand three hundred and seventy-six pairs of socks have been shipped by the Canadian Kitchener League direct to our own boys in the trenches. That these socks have been a necessity and a comfort is evidenced by the number of letters received from the boys from time to time, thanking the ladies for their untiring efforts. It has taken much financing to purchase yarn for such a large number of socks, but the generosity of the citizens of Peterborough has made the work possible. The ladies of Peterborough have given freely of their time and energy in knitting 7,376 pairs of socks, but the appreciation, expressed by the boys, from the wet and muddy trenches, more than repays the home sacrifices. The war goes on, many of the boys whom the League have helped make comfortable by an extra pair of dry, home-knit socks, have made the supreme sacrifice, but there are many more we can remember, and to do this the League requires financial assistance, and they once again appeal to every citizen to do his part on Saturday, May 19th, "Trench Day," be it ever so small, every penny counts.

THE ONE CENT A DAY CLUB GAVE $45.27 DURING APRIL.

The contributions to the One Cent a Day Club of the Ashburnham Red Cross Society for the month of April amounted to four thousand five hundred and twenty-seven (4,527) cents, making a total to date of $1,268.87.

OWNER WANTED FOR PHOTOGRAPHS PICKED UP AT VIMY RIDGE

The Examiner received an unusual souvenir of the Vimy Ridge battle to-day in the shape of a package of Canadian picture postcards picked up on the battlefield by Pte. Chris. McGrath of Peterborough, who in sending them to The Examiner, writes: "I am sending a few photos to you that I found on the field. As we went through the German front line I saw the photos and stopped and picked them out of the mud. They are Canadian photographs so will you please try and find the owner." The pictures which may be seen at The Examiner Office includes several photographs of a bathing party, a couple of snaps of a railway accident, several groups, and two or three postcard photographs of Canadian soldiers, one of whom is wearing the numerals of the 18th Battalion.

TWO PETERBOROUGH SOLDIERS REPORTED IN WOUNDED LIST

Casualties To-day Much Lighter Than for the First Two Days of the Week When Twenty Were Recorded—The 74th Battery, Peterboro's Artillery Unit Opens Its Campaign by Securing Two Recruits—To-day's Military News.

WOUNDED.

Pte. Geo. Lilly, late 93rd Battalion, Park Street.

Gunner Wm. Payne, Canadian Artillery, Peterborough.

There was a welcome falling off in the number of Peterborough casualties received to-day, two Peterborough men being reported both wounded. This was a marked contrast to Monday and yesterday, on each of which days there were ten casualties recorded.

GUNNER WM. PAYNE.

A message received to-day from Ottawa stating that Gunner William Payne of Peterborough is officially reported admitted to hospital and wounded, and suffering from a fractured leg.

PTE. GEO. LILLY.

Pte. Geo. Lilly, 464 Chamberlen street, who enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion and went overseas with the Peterborough county unit, afterwards being transferred, is officially reported accidentally wounded, this message arriving to-day. Pte. Lilly is well known in Peterborough as a boxer and athletic instructor, and was at one time physical instructor at the T.A.S. The official message stated that Pte. Lilly has been admitted to No. 26 General Hospital, Etaples, France on May 4th, with gun shot wounds in the abdomen, left arm and leg.

The Examiner has received the following letter:

Dear Sir,—Just a few lines from a Peterborough boy. I'm in the Y. M. C. A. just at the present time, and I have just found one of your papers and believe me, I was glad to get it. I saw where a lot of my old chums are back to Peterborough again, and one of my best chums, Bill Teabo. I guess the 207th Battalion will never fill up, by the way they are going. The weather has been lovely over here this last few weeks, and it is to be hoped it keeps up. Why don't they make half of these fellows enlist, instead of letting them have all the good jobs. Well, they won't hold them very long when the boys come home, as there will be — to pay. I guess by the time this letter gets to you I will be in France as I'm ready to leave any time now.

Yours truly,

PTE. N. GRAHAM.

No. 539070, West Cliff Hospital, Folkstone, Kent, Eng.

Mrs. W. G. Perks, 393 George street, has received the following letter from Sergt.-Major Tom Miller, W.O., formerly of the 93rd Battalion:

Seaforth, Sussex, England.
May 2, 1917.

My Dear Mrs. Perks.—A parcel containing socks arrived in camp to-day addressed to Pte. E. Baumer, who, having left here for Canada, gave me permission to claim the same and serve out to the boys of the 93rd who are still here. I will supply you with a list of names of those receiving socks from you: Sergt. Bradley, Sergt. W. Jones, Q.M.S. J. Williams, Lance-Corp. Wason, Pte. (Scotty) McKinlay, Pte. J. Johnston, Bugler McCall, Buzler Gibson, Pte. Benbichon, Clapper, Doughty, C. Primeau, Williard, Bird, Hunter, Smethurst, Sturgeon, Wood, Mann and R. S. M. Miller.

On behalf of the boys I wish to thank all who were so kind as to knit socks for the boys who are trying to do their bit. Socks are the one thing needed, and home-made socks are much appreciated by the boys who receive them. Again thanking you and all the people at home for the many kind things they have sent us, I remain, your humble servant,

THOS. MILLER.
R.S.M., E.O.R. Depot.

Two recruits in two days is the record of Peterborough's new battery, the 74th. Major Crocker is now installed in the old cavalry headquarters at the Armouries with a very efficient staff of recruiters. Any man who wants to ride a horse, wear a snappy pair of breeches, a shining bandolier, and clinking spurs would do well in having a talk with Major Crocker.

One of the recruits who signed up last night, Gunner Louis Hele, Mark street, East City, comes of a family that is doing more than its bit. His father went overseas with the 93rd battalion, one brother has been at the front with the 2nd battalion since the Canadians first landed in France and another brother is with the 253rd Queen's Highlander now in England.

The 74th are going to make a big drive for recruits in Peterborough and already the enthusiasm of the officers is coaching on.

BELLEVILLE, May 16.—Alderman Wm. S. Smith has tendered his resignation as a member of the Municipal Council because of his enlistment at Toronto in the mechanical branch of the Aviation Department. For nine years he has been a member of the Board of Education and the City Council, and has been one of the most popular public men. During his residence in this city he has been engaged in the furniture business.

OTTAWA, May 15—The number of men under the care of the Military Hospitals Commission increased from 5,952 to 6,515 in the first week of this month.

The figures issued by the commission to-day show that on May 8 there were in the convalescent hospitals 2,155 men returned from overseas and 435 camp men; with 2,474 overseas and 440 camp men on the out-patients' list, making a total of 5,504 convalescents.

In the sanatoria for tuberculosis on the same date there were 396 overseas and 212 camp men, besides six overseas and four camp men as out-patients, making a total of 618 under this heading.

At other institutions there were 307 overseas and 98 camp men, besides three overseas men as out-patients, a total of 408.

MUNITIONS EMBARGO HAS NOT YET BEEN LIFTED

The embargo on munitions referred to about two weeks ago, has not been lifted yet, and it is understood that the manufacturers, instead of moving the finished shells, are forced to store them in their factories. It is expected that the difficulty will soon be removed when the congestion at the ports has been relieved.

BAKERS PLACE ONUS UPON THE GOVERNMENT

In Convention at Toronto They Urge the Appointment of a Food Controller With Cabinet Rank and Full Powers to Deal With the Situation.

RESOLUTION PASSED

"In view of the very critical situation, the Bread and Cake Manufacturers' Association, in convention assembled this 16th day of May, 1917, believe that the time has come for prompt action by the Government in the appointment of a Food Controller, with Cabinet rank, who should have full powers to deal with and regulate the manufacture, delivery, prices, and use of all foodstuffs throughout the Dominion."

TORONTO, May 16.—Upon the Dominion Government the bakers of Canada place the onus of the present famine bread prices. Among the men who voted for the above resolution yesterday at the meeting of the Bread and Cake Manufacturers' Association were some of Canada's biggest business men. Behind closed doors they freely expressed their opinion of a war-time Government which permitted its people to be exploited by whoever happened to control a sufficient quantity of foodstuffs.

Want Food Minister.

Unanimously they demanded that the Government at once appoint a Food Controller, as every other belligerent country in the world has done. To make sure that Canada's Food Controller will be something more than a rubber stamp, they also demand that he be appointed with Cabinet rank. The makers cannot control the upward tendency of flour prices, declares their resolution, and if the Government will only take some initiative along the lines suggested the Bread and Cake Manufacturers' Association promise co-operation. They made it clear that yesterday's assembly was absolutely non-partisan.

Representative Gathering.

Delegates from as far east as Montreal and as far west as Winnipeg attended the meeting. They at first intended meeting in the Fleischmann Co.'s building on Simcoe street, but when the hour arrived there were far too many on hand to accommodate there, so they adjourned to the Musicians' Hall. Some of the men present were: Mr. Mark Bredin, Canada Bread Co.; Mr. John Turnbull, President of the Nasmith Co.; Mr. E. Parnell, representing interest in Winnipeg, London and Toronto; Mr. D. M. Todd, Oshawa; Mr. James Strachan, Montreal; Mr. J. Bridge, with bakeries in London, Sarnia and Windsor, and Mr. H. E. Trent of the Fleischmann Company.

Mr. Parnell of Winnipeg was the mover of the resolution, and after his opening address the meeting was thrown open for general discussion.

FIRST CHEESE SOLD AT 21 13/16 CENTS IN SPITE OF EMBARGO

Salesmen and Buyers Discuss Present Shipping Difficulty and Probable Prices—New Zealand Cheese at 19 Cents a Bear Factor

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

The Peterborough Cheese Board re-opened this morning under the cloud of doubt and uncertainty that has followed the recent embargo on Canadian cheese from home and United States ports. There was an undercurrent of belligerency in the farmers' discussion of the prospects of the market. They realized the difficulties of shipping and were fully aware of the possibility that since the British Government was in complete control of cargo space it would likely fix the price of cheese. But, asserting that the farmers had been whipsawed in the wheat market, the salesmen asserted that they must be informed what commission the cheese middlemen receive.

"We are asked to produce," said one man, "and we do, but speculators grab a big profit before our products reach the consumer."

It was evident that the farmers will not soon forget the wheat transactions in this country during the past year, but having been duped in wheat they apparently intend to defend themselves on their dairy side.

Opinions of Buyers.

Mr. Harry Hodgson of Montreal, stated that cheese could be shipped from New York up to eight days ago, when an embargo was placed upon that port. To-day not a box of Canadian cheese is moving. Commissions recently appointed in Canada to cooperate with the united Boards of Trade in England, and Lord Devonport, food controller, have not yet received a word of definite instruction. It was expected that they would fix a price soon, but, said Mr. Hodgson, remember the soldiers' song, "Pack All Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag, and Smile, Smile, Smile." Canadian cheese had sold at 128 shillings previous to the action of Lord Devonport, and the Board of Trade, it has since dropped to 103 and 100 shillings.

Advised to Sell.

Mr. J. A. Kerr advised the salesmen to keep their cheese moving until the present situation cleared up.

"If you can get 18 3-4 cents or more just now, I advise you to sell. The forty days following Good Friday are up to-morrow and warm weather is coming. Keep your cheese in cold storage, anyway. I have no orders for export, but I want a few cheese for home demand."

Mr. Gillespie stated that it might be well for the farmers to hold their cheese until the present doubts were removed.

"The Government's price will be fair," said Mr. Flavelle, "but it will not be excessive."

"In the meantime," observed Mr. Kerr, "give our own people all the cheese they can eat."

New Zealand's Supply.

"New Zealand's cheese of last season was bought by the Government on a basis of 19 cents, f.o.b. New Zealand. There are nearly a milion and one-half boxes lying there yet.

Mr. Thompson remarked that the first Canadian prices this season were from 23 to 23c.

This might be realized when buying is resumed.

Mr. Kerr and Mr. Flavelle scouted that idea, stating that the New Zealand cheese would have a depressing effect on the Canadian price.

Mr. R. W. Wood, local dairy instructor, stated that the April cheese

WEDNESDAY, MAY 16, 1917

THE BRIDGE QUESTION.

On Thursday, May 31st, a by-law will be voted upon to authorise the raising of a sum of money for building of a high level bridge over the river, at Hunter street, and of an ordinary level bridge over the river at London street.

There are two main reasons why these bridges, especially the high level bridge, should be built. The first is because it is necessary. The present bridge, which has done service for years, is at the end of its usefulness, and must be replaced before long, or the city will be cut in two without means of access between one section and the other.

The other chief reason is that the Quaker Oats Company must conform the character of the splendid new buildings they will erect, so that the erection of a high level bridge, which is regarded as a necessity before long, would not put them to disadvantage and place the city in the position by building such a bridge, of of injuriously affecting the interests of the Company.

The business of the Quaker Oats Company is growing rapidly and, with its new buildings and increased facilities, it will be greater than ever, and increased railway accommodation will be necessary. This can not be easily and safely provided with a level traffic crossing on Hunter street.

Only a high level bridge will provide the room for additional spur lines and insure safety to public travel that cannot consist with level crossings with dozens of trains in and out every day.

Some idea of the traffic at this point may be got by the fact that for freight charges for supplies in, and products out, the Quaker Oats Company paid over a million dollars a year—a sum that will be greatly enlarged when, with new buildings, the Company's business will be immensely increased.

The question of freight rates was a big factor for the Company to consider in locating its new buildings. A difference of one cent a hundred pounds would, with the immense weight of freight they handle, amount to fifty thousand dollars a year.

Peterborough's faith and interest in the Trent Canal consists in the facilities it will provide for new industries, by cheapening freight and for other reasons. Its completion is near at hand, and its usefulness is closely related to the Quaker Oats Company's prosperity, which means the city's prosperity, and the high level bridge as a medium.

The river above the C. P. R. bridge is strictly not yet a part of the Canal, and it becomes the duty of the city to extend the canal further north. This will e done by a high level ridge, which will afford unimpeded traffic for all time, serve the purposes of the city, and serve the purposes of the Company, which considers the canal so valuable to their business that there would have been no doubt of the Company building here if the canal had been completed, as it will be in two or three years.

Considering everything, the Company decided to rebuild here if the city would erect these bridges within a reasonable time.

It is to be remembered that the by-law gives nothing to the Company. It provides for a necessary bridge that will last for all time, is absolutely necessary within a short time, and will benefit the city and the general public. The necessity is no less, and the public benefit will be no less because, incidentally, the building of it will be a benefit to the Company.

There is no question that the old Hunter street bridge will have to be replaced by a new bridge, and a good substantial bridge will cost considerable. A high level bridge will cost considerably more; but, while we are doing the thing, why not do it right? If it costs a little or a good deal more we get value and advantages worth all the increased cost.

A high level bridge will eliminate the danger of the level crossings on Hunter street, which would remain a menace to life, a hindrance to traffic, both of which will become greater with the growth of the city and the growth of business, and this danger will remain no matter how costly a low-level bridge is built. Before long, as it should be now, the Street Railway will have to be extended across the river. The high level bridge will provide a way, and, besides, it will add a half a mile in the heart of the city to the Trent Canal, whose barges can pass under the bridge to the mills of the Quaker Oats Company and other mills that in time may spring up—and the sooner, if encouraged—on the other side of the river.

This consideration imposes a duty on the Government to assist. The Government has acknowledged responsibility by dredging the river from Little Lake north to Hunter street. And, to make this stretch of canal of use it would have to build a swing any way. The cost of this, and the cost of maintenance would be considerable, and would be obviated by an overhead bridge. The Government should come down handsomely, and it should be Peterborough's politics from this time out to insist upon Government aid to a substantial extent, that will greatly reduce the amount the by-law asks for.

The public, in adjusting their attitude, should remember several things:

We must have a new bridge very soon.

We must build it for ourselves at any event.

We must build it to keep the city together.

We should have a high level bridge in the interest of public safety, facility of street traffic and Street Railway extension, and, incidentally, in the interest of the Quaker Oats Company, without costing us a cent more.

We must keep faith with the Company, which has decided to build here largely because of building an overhead bridge to make Trent traffic available and permit of greatly expanding operations, for which the city will derive corresponding benefit.

We must regard the proposal as part of the ambition of a Greater Peterborough. If we are to grow we must make provision for it.

VIVIANI'S VISIT.

The best day's work the Dominion Parliament has done in many a long day, was when it suspended business, suspended its rules to welcome to a seat on the floor of the House Premier Viviani, Chief of the Mission for France; and suspended its breathing while the members listened to the thrilling eloquence of the great French tribune. His admission to the chamber in breach of all tradition, the admission of a "stranger" to a seat beside the Speaker, marked a new sense of the rapprochement of the allied nations and their cause, aroused and impressed and conferred a new sense of unity, of interest of Canada with the allied nations who are battling with us for our own good, their good and the good of the world.

The closeness of our relation was emphasised and the lessen of the occasion made more striking by the newness of the occasion and the magnificent oratory of Viviani. Though he spoke in French, literally understood by only a part of his hearers, from his tongue, the whole man spoke—his gestures and facial expression were so eloquent of his meaning that the English speaking heard through their eyes and were thrilled to the heart as strongly as those who understood the French text of his oration.

His speech and its sentiments not only drew Canada closer to France and her allies and opened to a wider and keener view of the avenue of duty, but it demonstrated that the big part Canada has done in making la entente cordiale, a veritable union of forces and accomplishment.

Viviani, in the opening of his address, showed that France, as the world has done, has had her eyes upon and seen what Canada was doing and has done. He told how Paris was thrilled when it saw march through its streets, "your admirable Canadian soldiers, with martial bearing and proudly bearing upon the helmets the Maple Leaf." He spoke of "ambulances innumerable on the front," and the hospitals at St. Cloud and elsewhere, Canada had provided.

He recalled the members of parliament who had gone to the front and fallen and those who had sent fifty of their sons. He spoke of the Canadians at Ypres—when in the face of new and terrible means of war—"it was the Canadians who stood firm and saved the situation."

The merit of Viviani's visit and oratory was that it was more to the point, a more piquant call to duty and action, than most of the oratory that wastes its vain vapidness upon the air of the Legislative Chamber at Ottawa. Hour after hour, and day after day we have hum-drum harrangues on the budget; we have members wandering in wasteful wilderness of words about almost everything but the supreme duty of seeking to learn how Canada can best and most fully do her duty by herself, by her allies and by this war. We have ministers verbally fencing in defence of their failure to devise means to put our logging manhood into the ranks; their neglect of obviously necessary mean to provide food for our own people to keep them fit, to help our great ally and the mother country.

If the visit of Viviani and a desire to honour in his person our chief ally in this war, aroused a new sense of the unity of sentiment and purpose, and of the necessity for comunity of effort, and established a new parliamentary precedent, pray heaven it may, as it does, justify a new precedent for parliamentary and government action that will lead to something definite in the way of service and not to the trackless expanse of vain repetition of meaningless verbiage in which the government and parliament are wandering. 'Tis true, 'tis pity, and pity 'tis, 'tis true that in earnest, effective, practical, alert and energetic action in war administration and prosecution, the government is not keeping up to the mark; and it is likewise true, that Parliament, at whose hands, after the people, the government holds its life, is not keeping the government up to the mark.

THE WORK OF THE Y.M.C.A. AT THE FIGHTING FRONT

In all recent wars the Red Triangle of the Y.M.C.A. has been a beacon of comfort and good cheer for the man in uniform; assuring him of the near presence of an institution which was willing to act as "Big Brother" for him, and to minister to his three-fold needs: mental, bodily and spiritual. There is scarcely a letter which comes home from the soldiers at the front which has not been written on Y.M.C.A. activities. The value of the services performed by the association to soldiers is recognized by every civilized country, and those in authority, cheerfully give the association workers the utmost possible encouragement and consideration.

At no time have the activities of the "Red Triangle" been more apparent, more valued, or more needed than during the present great world's conflagration. This helpfulness, however, involves a large expenditure of money and therefore places the military Y.M.C.A. among the patriotic funds. In 1914 the money at the disposal of the Canadian Y.M.C.A. military branch amounted to $7,000. In 1915 it had grown to $33,000, but in 1914 it reached the huge figure of $529,126. How this money is expended may be learned from the estimates of the military fund committee for this year, which include the following items: Huts and equipment, motor transportation and upkeep, $68,637.40; athletic games, gramaphones, cinemas, hospital and gifts comforts, including film records and supplies, $11,157.64; letter paper and envelopes, magazines, and books supplied free to Canadian soldiers $21,315.24; expenses of speakers and concert parties, $8,538.82; field expenses of secretaries, $13,102.64; supervision, including rent, salaries, stationery, printing, postage, etc. at London office and storage, $6,950.98; advance to canteens in England and France, $68,452.20; net cost of operation and equipment of work in home camps and barracks, $60,368.33. Transportation charges, office expenses here and in England and France, and other items must also be taken care of. —Brantford Expositor.

MUNITION WORKERS TO WAR.

Some to be Released from British Plants to Meet Pressing Need.

LONDON, May 14.—In order to meet the pressing need of the army for 500,000 men between now and July, recently announced by General Sir William Robertson, a large number of munition workers are to be set free for general military service. The process of release began May 1, and it is intended that the men released shall be called up as far as possible in age groups, beginning with the younger men. All men whose service is found indispensable for the output of munitions will be protected. Similarly all essential men engaged on shipbuilding, ship repair, and marine engineering will, for the present, be protected from recruiting.

The War Cabinet has approved a new plan, submitted by the Director General of National Service, for obtaining from less essential industries a sufficient number of substitutes for men who must be released for military purposes from essential industries. Committees of employers and employees in the trades affected are being formed to arrange what men shall be released from their trades and to transfer them to the essential trades.

The main feature of the plan is that it places upon those concerned in the trade itself the responsibility of finding the men required with the least possible injury to the trade or hardship to the men.

SEED POTATO SUPPLY FOR THE NORTH TORONTO FARMERS.

NEWMARKET, May 14. —The local board of trade has ordered a carload of Delaware potatoes from the Maritime provinces, which is expected to arrive this week. A similar order has been given by the Aurora board of trade for potatoes from the Western provinces. These carloads will be sold for either seeding or consumption but are intended first to help the farmers to increase their acreage of potato crop. Prices of potatoes on the local market dropped to $3.50 a bag yesterday after having been as high as $4.50 early last week.

$20 FLOUR MAY RESULT WITHOUT FOOD CONTROL

Mr. Hoover Outlines Conditions as He Finds Them in This Country —No Justification For Outrageous Prices Now Being Charged —Regulation Would Solve Problem.

NEW YORK.—Herbert C. Hoover, who recently came from London to advise the government on food conditions in Europe, says that without control we may see flour at $20 a barrel before the year is over, but that with control "the present price of flour can be reduced forty to fifty per cent and at the same time the producer be treated in a liberal manner."

Mr. Hoover has outlined food conditions in a statement:

"There is absolutely no occasion for food panic in this country nor any justification for outrageous prices, unless the opposition of special interests defeats the President in obtaining the necessary powers to control the nation's food fully and adequately America's problem is not one of famine, for we now have and will have next year a large surplus Our problem is, after the proper protection of our own people, to give to our allies the last ounce of surplus of which we are capable.

PROBLEMS CAN BE SOLVED.

"Therefore the nation needs a food control for two purposes—to regulate prices and to increase the surplus. After providing our normal consumption we will have together with Canada a surplus for our allies equal to only sixty per cent of the food they require from us. If we take broad measures of control we can with as little disturbance to economic machinery as need be furnish them an additional twenty per cent. Their loaf even then will be a privation loaf, and every ounce we can put in it will diminish their privation. The problem is capable of solution. If, however, the whole world, allied and neutral, is to have the unrestricted run of our markets in competition with each other and in competition with the speculator in this country we may expect to see $5 wheat before the year is over.

"Large measures of food control do not mean arbitrary interference with the necessary economic machinery of trade. They mean that every branch be called in by the government and force themselves into a link from which the contemplated chain will protect producer, legitimate distributer and consumer.

"For instance, I am assured that the American farmer did not realize $1.30 a bushel for the 1916 wheat harvest, yet the price of wheat in New York to-day is $3.25 per bushel and flour is $14 per barrel per bushel its attendant hardships and dislocation of social and industrial life.

$20 FLOUR A POSSIBILITY.

"I have no hesitation in saying that if the able patriotic men representing the majority of each branch of the food trades were called in and clothed with the necessary powers to force the small minority of skunks that exist in every trade, one result would be that an equally nutritious flour based on even $1.50 wheat could be sold in New York for a good deal under $8 a barrel, and every trade would receive its legitimate profit. Without control we may see $25 flour before the year is out and a total dislocation of wages and consequent dislocation of industry and living.

"On the other hand, if we overcome the submarine and if we open other markets to our allies, we may see wheat at $1 a bushel and flour under $6. In any event, with sufficient control the present price of flour can be reduced by forty per cent. to fifty per cent and at the same time the producer treated in a liberal manner.

"Without any form of control we are likely to see an even worse situation than the high prices prevailing, resulting from the unrestricted drain on our wheat abroad. It is possible that the last three months of next year we may be bare of breadstuffs in this country.

"Food control does not mean bread cards to the American people. It means the broad conservation of our food, the better handling by elimination of waste and speculation. With proper control for America the government would ask only one thing from the individual consumer, that he eat plenty but wisely and waste nothing, and if democracy is a faith worth defending our people will do this service voluntarily and willingly.

THE SURPLUS IN WHEAT.

"Hoarding and speculation are rife, yet there can be no particle of a doubt that we have to-day in North America a surplus of from 50,000,000 to 70,000,000 bushels of wheat beyond our ordinary consumption and beyond the needs of our allies before the next harvest comes in. Out of next harvest, with no economy in consumption, North America, even with the loss in winter wheat, can give our allies 400,000,000 bushels of cereals of on kind or another. But to protect our consumers from to-day and to legitimately expand our exports to our allies without breaking into our own necessary food the government must have widest and absolutely immediate powers to be used not against the legitimate interests of trade and production but against the small minority who are blackening the high and patriotic character of our great producing and distributing classes and to enable the able and patriotic majority to give play to the devoted service they can well and willingly give. This is the essence of the matter. No European government except Germany was able to secure these powers until after great disaster was irrevocable sit here dumbly waiting for and then we shall scream and cise the government for not done something that they are less to do.

"Legislation has already been duced into Congress looking the creation of food control. tail of means and measures evolved from our own co institutions with the experi the vast European laboratory control problems as a guard repeating over paths learned with bitter experience. Two Ways To Acquire An Estate

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family and yourself, may be and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered, or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

Two Ways To Bequeath An Estate

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape of Court. Requires Court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator — you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of Court proceedings—no expense of Court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor Court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

Scandinavian Countries Are Hard Hit By The War

LONDON, May 15.—For a fortnight, writes a Stockholm correspondent, the three Scandinavian countries have been cut off from a great part of Europe and practically from the whole extra European world. With the Entente countries of West Europe and with America the only direct communication is by cable. Immediately after the German submarine proclamation optimists expected restoration of at least the Bergen-Newcastle traffic, but so far nothing has been done. The great Russian transit traffic has ceased, and the express trains to Harparanda, on the Finnish frontier, no longer run. The only direct trade worth mentioning is with Germany. Business men are proclaiming that Scandinavia's one resource for the rest of the war is to tighten the belt and live on half rations in Germany's own way.

Consumers who have been grumbling for two years over the minor inconveniences caused by British trade measure are now realizing what really oppressive measures involve. All three Scandinavian countries are threatened with the most serious difficulties. Sweden has not enough grain to last till next harvest, and she is doubtful whether she will ever see the 200,000 tons of flour already ordered in America by the State Food Commission. Denmark's case is worse. She is threatened in greater degree than Sweden with shortage of grain, and the suspension of her dairy produce exports to England threatens her trade balance. Still worse is Norway's lot. Norway produces a smaller proportion of food than either of her neighbors, and she risks both having no food and having her chief industry, shipping, permanently lamed.

Card System Extended.

All three countries are busy with measures, already taken or suggested, for meeting the general famine; the card system is to be extended; public buildings, theatres, and schools are partly or wholly closed, owing to lack of fuel; railway and local shipping services are being curtailed, and more and more branches of production are being bought under State control. In Stockholm only one street lamp out of four is to be lighted, and in one large auburb domestic electric lighting ceases at 9 a.m. A threatened complete lack of English cloth and other English manufactured goods has led to a run on shops, and citizens are laying in stocks of everything obtainable in preparation for coming drastic State measures of limitation of purchase and sale.

To-day every Scandinavian admits that the much complained of British restrictions were trifles. In spite of this admission the Scandinavian States have not adequately reacted to Germany's latest act of aggression. President Wilson has not been supported, and Sweden has even gone out of her way to condemn the United States policy. Dread of war with Germany has dominated every other feeling. Every pro-German newspaper, like the Evensk Dagblad admitted that German's submarine campaign, in so far as it infringed Swedish rights, must be protested against; but, on the other hand, the strongest pro-Entente newspapers, such as the Socialdemokrat, were against accepting Mr. Wilson's invitation to break off diplomatic relations, much less to take up arms.

Would Escape Hostilities.

In Norway conditions are the same, the press unanimously condemned Germany's action but it proclaimed that the issue was not worth a war. Denmark, too, is at one in denunciation of the "blockade," but there is the old difference between the conservative opposition's unqualified anti-Germanism and the radical-socialist group's dread of giving offence to Berlin. From the first it was inevitable that the Scandinavian countries would not risk a conflict with Germany, but it is mainly the achievement of Sweden that so little was done. The Germanophile conservative party, which is now in power, never so clearly goe its way.

At first the pro-German press, while agreeing that protest must be made, proclaimed that the submarine blockade might do neutrals no harm. Great Britain would be hit, but Scandinavians might profit. Instead of going into Kirkwall the ocean going vessels could go north of the Faric Islands, thus entirely escaping British inspection; or they might be convoyed, this involving a government guarantee that no contraband was carried. For days the pro-German Aftonblau played with the convoy solution, which was suggested, it is understood, by Berlin, though early in the war England refused to recognize the expedient.

After a few days the danger to Scandinavia was more clearly seen, and the need for solidarity with England is now realised by most serious business men. This change of opinion has been influenced by the return from London of Sweden's four negotiators who are understood to have brought with them a trade agreement, which now only needs ratification by Mr. Hammarskjold.

Efforts to Break Blockade.

The more enterprising shippers are seeking means of breaking or ignoring the blockade. Whether this can be done depends upon the State Insurance Commission. In the first days of the blockade no insurances at all were granted, but the government has since got through the Riksdag a law authorising the commission to insure at higher rates than the former maximum seven per cent and also authorising the insuring of foreign vessels. This means that Sweden will do what she can to restore traffic.

Through its handling of the submarine crisis a fresh blow has been dealt at the Cabinet of Mr. Hammarskjold, which was badly shaken by criticism from all three quarters at the Riksdag opening in January. Mr. Hammarskjold, though technically a good neutral, is known to be privately one of the most emphatic Germanophiles in his Gedmanophile conservative party. He is being made personally responsible for the surprising reply to President Wilson, and is being severely criticised by both socialists and liberals. Such criticism has little effect on the Premier. He keeps to himself, sees few people, ignores newspapers and generally governs more like a German Secretary of State than like a Premier of a parliamentary country.

Unluckily, Sweden, as the strongest Scandinavian State, has dominated her neighbour's politics ever since the Christiana agreement that all three should act together. This prevents resolute opposition to German aggression. Even Mr. Hammarskjold's Cabinet could not resist the need for defending some special Swedish interest or right, but as long as it is in power united Scandinavian action against Germany on general grounds of policy or humanity will be out of the question.

GAMBLING IS BLAMED FOR THE HIGH PRICES.

BRANTFORD, May 15.—Brantford millers are of the opinion that the only relief possible in the matter of the present rising of the wheat market must come from government action. All agree that the situation is lamentable but that there is no alternative save that the Dominion government awake to the present conditions and put the clamps on the speculators who are engaged in the wild gamble. The prices offered on the local market yesterday were $2.75 and $2.80 a bushel.

SUCCESSFUL RECITAL BY MISS M. MATHER

Peterboro' Pianist Scores Heavily in a Splendid Programme at the Toronto College of Music Hall on Monday Night.

GRADUATES A. T. C. M.

Miss Marjorie Mather, daughter of Mr. Francis Mather, 16 Inverlea street, gave a most enjoyable and educative piano recital in the Toronto College of Music Hall on Monday evening. All her solos were rendered in such a manner as to display real depth of feeling, musicianly taste and brilliant technique, combined with a quiet restraint and true appreciation of the spirit of the composer. When the nature of the composition called for warmth and passion, Miss Mather responded with the ease and abandon of the real artiste and demonstrated without doubt that she is no mere mechanical performer. Miss Mather, happily, is not only the possessor of brilliant technique, but added to that is the true musical temperament, without which quality the most perfect technique is soulless and without colour and carries absolutely no appeal to the listener.

The programme concluded with an excellent rendering of that most exacting concerto in E major, of Moskowski's, for piano and orchestra, which afforded Miss Mather every opportunity to show of what she was capable and which she certainly grasped, fairly exceeding herself in this number.

Miss Mather has passed every examination, both theoretically and practical, called for by the Toronto College of Music, and by her brilliant graduation recital, has now fulfilled every requirement, and is therefore entitled to use the degree A.T.Coll.M.

Miss Mather is undoubtedly one of the best pianists in the city, and one of whom Peterborough may be proud. It is likely that Miss Mather will give a recital soon, or in the early fall when she will render her graduation programme.

Credit for Miss Mathem' training and graduation is due to two of our best known musicians, Mr. J. H. Renwick and Mr. John Allan, both of whom much feel gratified at the success achieved by her on Monday night.

Editor, Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly give me space and afford me the pleasure to express my very high opinion of the splendid presentation of the beautiful "Pinafore" at the Opera House, last night. I am somewhat of an "old stager," and from what I have seen, I think I am qualified to know a good thing in the shape of musical or dramatic production when I see it. Last night's "Pinafore" was a most creitable production to the performers that gave it. The performers, one and all, both principals and chorus, in both singing and dramatic action, were very good indeed. The singing was good, some of it exceptionally so, and the accompaniment was good, what calls for high words of praise for the Conservatory Orchestra. Its work was, without undue praise, excellent. Its accompaniment of the singers, choruses and dances was quite first rate—judiciously adapted to the circumstances. The dancing by a company of young girls, (a sailor's hornpipe chorus I may call it) was magnificent in its way—as perfect in step and time and harmonized agility as any professional ballet would have done it, and more so, because it lacked the leggy mannerisms of professionals. I speak of the whole production as a really pleasant and enjoyable performance. It is highly creditable to the amateur musical talent of the city, and shows the practical benefit and possibilities of public musical enjoyment from the presence in Peterborough of a musical centre like the Conservatory of Music, which can produce, for I believe nearly all of the performers—singers, actors and orchestra—were members of the faculty, or students of, the Conservatory of Music.

Allow me to add that the object of the production—to strengthen the funds of the 57th band—was not as satisfactory as the play itself. It is to be hoped to-night that a full attendance at a most worthy performance will add to the "silver bullets," as necessary for a band as Lloyd George thinks they are for fighting.

Yours truly,
CITIZEN.

BRITAIN WANTS REPORT OF TORONTO'S CITY ARCHITECT

His Findings on Peterboro' Fire Gain a Wide Reputation—Concrete With Steel Reinforcements Not Absolutely Fireproof

TORONTO, May 16.—City Architect W. W. Pearse is gaining even more than a continental reputation by his investigation and report on the Quaker Oats Mills fire at Peterborough some months ago. He has received many requests from all over America for copies of his findings, and now the British Fire Prevention Committee sends a request for his report.

It should be noted that Mr. Pearse found at this fire that even steel-reinforced concrete is not a fireproof construction if the materials stored within the walls is particularly inflammable. The fire was so fierce and the heat so intense in the Peterborough blaze that it literally ate up the concrete and twisted the steel reinforcing into all sorts of fantastic shapes. In an alley-way between the walls the heat was so intense that the freight car wheels and steel rails melted and flowed together.

The query from Britain came in duplicate in separate mails, because of the submarine menace. The letter is as follows:

"Dear Sir,—We understand that you have had an important report prepared in the Quaker Oats Company's fire at Peterborough. This report will be of considerable interest to this committee, and we venture to ask you to let us have two copies (posted by separate mails for the sake of safety).

"You will observe from the enclosure that we have set up a special commission here to deal with the question of fire resistance of concrete and reinforced concrete, and any assistance, data, or technical suggestions you would care to make would be most gladly welcomed.

"We are sending you a duplicate of this letter by next mail for the sake of safety.

"Your's truly,
"For THE BRITISH FIRE PREVENTION COMMITTEE,
"Ellis Marsland.

A TORONTO ADVOCATE OF WOMEN CONDUCTORS

Surplus of Female Labour Now Being Felt—Think They Should Release Young Men

A surplus of female labour is being experienced now in Toronto, owing to the curtailment of production in some of the munition plants. The following letter, in the News of last night, is advocating the removal of street car conductors and drivers, and replacing them with women. It is to be hoped there is no foundation in the rumour that there will be curtailment through shortage of orders in the operation of munition plants and other factories making war supplies of different kinds in Peterborough:

Now that many competent young women are being thrown out of employment owing to the curtailment of operations in certain of our munition plants, why do not other commercial firms try these women, and free the young men in their employ? We have still male street car conductors and drivers. We have also male delivery men on the post office staff, and also on the railway trains.

Any one taking a walk down town between 7 and 8 o'clock in the morning might well wonder at the splendid-looking and apparently fit crowd of young men.

It is surely high time to let the women who have proved their fitness, efficiency and bravery, as well as their willingness, prove their ability to do greater things."

Service Cards Show There Are 364,470 In Active Duty Class

OTTAWA, May 14.—In all 1,549,360 men between the ages of 17 and 60 years filled in National Service cards and returned them to the National Service Commission, Sir George Foster told Mr. E. F. A Wonderful Picture Coming to the Grand

"The Crisis" One of the Most Spectacular Films Presented to Photoplay Enthusiasts

"The Crisis" following closely the romance of Civil War days in St. Louis by Winston Churchill, will be presented in elaborate style at The Grand Opera House, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next.

Mr. Churchill's novel, published more than a decade ago, has become recognized as an American classic. It is written in a spirit of fairness and impartiality, unusual with stories dealing with the conflict of the sections. The scene is laid in St. Louis, where North and South met, where members of the same families were divided in their allegiance to the respective flags, and where both causes were hotly debated with all the facts immediately at hand. Mr Churchill put himself in the attitude of an impartial magistrate, considered carefully both sides, and set them forth without prejudices for the public as a jury.

In making the photoplay version for the Sherman-Elliott Company, Wm. N. Selig followed exactly the threads of Mr. Churchill's story, without any re-arranging or alteration so common with makers of film dramas. The story had already proven its dramatic power in the minds of more than a million readers, and was found by Mr. Selig's experts to be properly arranged for screen reproduction. The play works up a powerful climax in the storming and taking of Vicksburg. The battle scenes have not heretofore been equalled, it is said, in any photodrama. A novelty is promised in a Lincoln who is human, instead of being, a mere figurehead as a part of a historical background.

Optimistic About The Grain Crops

EDMONTON, May 16—Seldom have farmers in the Edmonton district been so optimistic as to-day over the prospects of the grain and other crops in this vicinity. While seeding here this year has been late, it has not been the latest in the history of the Province by any means, according to farmers in a position to know. Approximately 75 per cent. of the crop is in the soil to-day.

Wheat, barley, and all coarse grains seem to be given the preference.

The Bridges By-Law Will Be Voted Upon On May 31st

East City Ratepayers Hear Instructive Addresses Concerning the Proposed High-Level Bridge Over the Otonabee River at Hunter Street. City Engineer and Two of the Aldermen Were the Speakers.

WHAT ONE CITY PLANNED

A meeting of the Ashburnham Ratepayers' Association was held last evening in the Guild Room of St. Luke's Church. The speakers of the evening were City Engineer R. H. Parsons, Alderman J. Smith and Alderman A. Weir. An interesting and lucid address concerning the bridges by-law was given by each of the three speakers. The City Engineer gave a detailed description of the proposed new overhead bridge to be erected over the Otonabee River on Hunter street, and also the removal of the present Hunter street bridge to London street where it will be erected across the Hydraulic Company's dam and provide an adequate connecting link to the north end of East City.

The By-law which is to be voted upon on May 31st is to authorize the erection of a high level bridge over the Otonabee River at Hunter Street and a bridge over the river at London Street.

These bridges have been talked about for several years, and the question of their erection was brought up definitely for decision in connection with the rebuilding of the Quaker Oats Company's plant.

BRIDGES ARE NECESSARY.

It was necessary for the Company to know what will be done regarding the high level bridge, because their building must be erected to conform to the conditions that will be created by the bridge. The Company was of the opinion that, sooner or later, such a bridge would be erected, and that if they rebuilt their plant as it was before, with their offices on the ground floor, the bridge when built would practically destroy their offices and seriously affect their plant. Yet if they re-erected their buildings to conform to the high level bridge, with their offices in the third storey, and the construction of the bridge was unduly delayed, they would be put to serious inconvenience in the operation of their mills and business. Consequently it became necessary for the Company to know that the bridge would be constructed, and within a reasonable time.

Further, the increasing business of the Company necessitated a re-arrangement of their railway spur lines and further railway accommodation. This would be difficult with a level crossing of the railway lines across Hunter Street, and the high level bridge will provide for these spur lines, and will greatly facilitate the Company in doing its business. The handling of the products of the mills by the railways is of utmost importance, as is shown by the fact that last year the Company paid over $1,000,000.00 for freight charges.

A DANGER AND ANNOYANCE.

The London Street bridge has been petitioned for several times by ratepayers in that section of the City. Since the old Dickson Company wooden bridge became worn out large numbers of citizens have been using the Quaker Oats Company's dam for crossing the river, much to the danger of the people and the annoyance and inconvenience of the Company. The Company desired this danger and annoyance and inconvenience to be done away with by the erection of a bridge.

When the Company took up the question of the rebuilding of their plant they considered where it should be located. A slight difference in freight rates would in a year make a great difference to them, on account of the immense quantity of freight they had to handle. One cent per 100 lbs. would mean to them about $50,000.00 a year, and any greater difference would mean a larger sum. The Trent Canal is not yet open for traffic; if this Canal were completed there would be no question about the Company rebuilding here. The building of these bridges will facilitate the business of the Company and the assurance that they will be built within a reasonable time will enable the Company to erect their buildings to conform to the high level bridge and without any fear that they will be damaged by the erection of such a bridge in the future.

The Company, after taking everything into consideration, decided, after consultation with the City Council, that they would rebuild here if these bridges would be erected within a reasonable time.

A PUBLIC WORK.

The By-law does not give anything to the Company. It provides for public works that will be of general public benefit, while at the same time facilitating the business of the Company.

The high level bridge will do away with the danger to the public of the railway crossings on Hunter Street, a danger that will increase as the City grows and as the business increases. It will provide a way for the extension of the Street Railway into the East Ward, which is required and has been demanded for some time. It will enable barges, when the Trent Canal is opened, to be taken above the bridge to the mills for which the river has been dredged by the Government. It will be a great convenience to the public in crossing the river to and from the City, and will give an impetus to the development of the City on the east side of the river.

As has been stated, the bridge at London Street has been petitioned for repeatedly. By making use of the iron superstructure of the present Hunter Street bridge for the bridge at London Street it can be erected at comparatively small cost. It will save the danger to the people of crossing on the dam, upon which there is a railway track, and will result in the development of that part of the City.

WILL PLAN ACCORDINGLY

If the Quaker Oats Company erected their buildings on plans similar to the old buildings, and later the City decided to construct the high level bridge, the result would be that the property of the Company would be seriously damaged, for which damage the City would be liable. By passing the By-law, and thus giving assurance that the bridge will be constructed, the Company will plan their buildings accordingly, and agree not to claim damages, and the City will not have to pay anything to the Company for land or other damages on either side of the river, as they would have to do but for this agreement. Consequently the City will save a large sum by providing now for the erection of the bridge so that the Company will build with this in view.

The Company is giving a right-of-way on each side of the river for access to the London Street bridge in exchange for Mill Street, which is of no public service and only used for access to the Company's mills, and a few yards of the east ends of Murray and London Streets, which only lead to the unused Mill Street. The rights-of-way are thus secured without expenditure by the City.

GOVERNMENT MAY CONTRIBUTE.

While the By-law provides for the estimated full cost of the bridges, it is expected that the Dominion Government will contribute to the cost. The high level bridge will enable that part of the river above the bridge, which has been dredged by the Government, to be utilized without a swing, and it is expected that the Government will contribute what it would cost to construct and maintain the swing. As soon as the Minister of Public Works returns from England this will be taken up with him. He has been communicated with and asked that the matter stand over until he returns. Any sum the Government pays towards the construction will lessen the estimated cost to the City as set out in the By-law.

The Company is clearing away the remains of the old building in preparation for building the new ones on the assurances given that the bridges will be built. The new plant will be a large one and will give larger employment than the old one, with good prospects for greater development in the future.

Public convenience will be served by the erection of the bridges; grave dangers to the public will be avoided; the development of a large section of the City will be facilitated, and the continuance of a very important industry will be assured by passing the By-law — an industry that other cities were most anxious to secure and were ready to expend large sums to get. One city had made preparations to expend $100,000.00 on one public work alone in the hope of getting this industry.

One Pound Of Butter Per Week Would Help The Belgians

MONTREAL, May 19. — The North American continent is the one great hope of the Belgian people. On the generosity of the people in this happy, favored land depends the whole future of the Belgian nation. With the people living here in plenty lies the alternative of the extinction of the Belgian nation, or their preservation for a happier future, when the time of deliverance comes.

Such is the declaration of the central Belgian Relief Committe here — the organization of influential Canadians who have the work in hand for collecting funds in Canada to help carry on the relief work in Belgium under the Belgian Relief Commission.

The urgent appeal now being sent forth all over this continent for extra funds to give a larger ration than a mere starvation pittance to the growing children of Belgium, among whom disease is making frightful ravages, owing to restricted rations, is being answered by many, but much more help must come if the children are to be saved.

One woman is putting aside one pound of butter she makes, and sending the proceeds along. It is all she can afford, she says. Her help is saving more than one child. A girl has sent along $10. "I decided to do without a spring hat," she says, "and send the money for the Belgians." That $10 will give the extra needed rations to ten Belgian children for a month.

This is the spirit that will save the Belgians. Rich or poor—all are asked to help. Contributions should be sent to the Central Belgian Relief Committee, 59 St. Peter Street, Montreal, or to any branch committee. Now is the critical time with the Belgians. The most effective help is help given NOW.

No War Time Election.

The 1916 officers were re-elected on a motion of Mr. J. Coughlin of Hastings, seconded by Mr. W. T. Buck of Mt. Pleasant, as follows:

President—Robert Duff.
1st V. P.—J. J. Breckenridge.
2nd V. P.—G. W. Mann.
Sec.-Treas.—Ed. Hawthorne.
Auditor—W. A. Anderson.

Treasurers' Report.

Mr. Hawthorne reported a balance of $7.36 from last year. The remainder of the Board's patriotic fund from the 1915 season was distributed last year as follows: $25 to Mt. Pleasant Patriotic Society, and $243.16 to the British Red Cross.

The Cheese Boarded.

The cheese were boarded as follows:

Warminster	80
Shearer	110
Villiers	35

Westwood	110
Selwyn	60
Oakdale	55
Lakefield	25
Pine Grove	35

Young's Point	70
Lang	40
East Emily	18
Treswern	150
Norwood	94
Fleetwood	50
Killarney	45
Total	1,177

Discussion by Salesmen.

When Mr. Duff called for the boarding, Mr. W. A. Anderson of Keene factory, stated that there was no use proceeding until there was some definite information to work on. "We should know what price the Government intends to fix. It looks as if it might be like last year's wheat that passed from farmers' hands at $1.80, and is now $3.20, and is still in this country.

Mr. W. Mann—"Everybody gets a slice of the profits but the farmer."

Mr. Anderson—"We wouldn't object to a price of 20 cents so long as we know the cheese is going straight to the Government."

Mr. Kerr—"At 20 cents a pound, cheese is the most profitable item in farming. What's the use of talking about the commission men getting the big end of the profit. Cheesemen all die poor. Has there been one die with a dollar. Look at the wrecks up and down the country. For the risk and money involved it is the poorest paying business of all.

Mr. Anderson—"We want to know what the Government is going to pay for cheese and what commission the buyers will get."

Mr. Kerr—"Nothing has been settled yet."

Mr. Anderson—Then why try to do business?"

Mr. Hodgson—"If the Government fixes too low a price then you farmers can speak and with more weight than we have."

A Cause of Embargo.

"I believe the embargo on Canadian cheese is because those having the responsibility of buying it feel that our opening prices were too high," said Mr. Flavelle, "and they are considering what would be a fair price to fix."

Mr. Kerr—"I don't believe there will be a price set."

Mr. Mann—"With corn $60 a ton, chop $48, and other feeds high, I understood that the Government was going to do the fair thing. The April cheese was produced on that high-priced fodder."

Mr. Duff—"We can't blame the farmer for demanding a high price for cheese in view of the way everything else is soaring."

Mr. Kerr Bought.

Mr. Kerr opened the bidding at 18 3-4c, and finally, at 21 13-16c., bought all but Shearer, Keene and Selwyn factories.

The Board then adjourned for three weeks.

THE COLLECTION OF GARBAGE IS ABOUT NORMAL

East City is Being Covered Today—Getting Over the Peak Load

The collection of garbage is getting back to normal and by the end of the week the contractor will again be on top of the heap. Another team was placed on the routes this morning, and East City, which has for some time been suffering from an accumulation of garbage, was receiving some attention at the hands of the collectors. The contractor has fewer complaints regarding the manner in which the householders put their garbage out. A recent enactment of the City Council is as follows:

1. Garbage receptacles must be placed out on the morning of collection, at the street line, or where there is a lane, just inside the door or gate, and the door or gate must be unfastened.
2. Receptacles must not be more than two cubic feet in capacity, and when full must not weigh more than 75 lbs.
3. Receptacles for garbage must be of galvanized iron with tight fitting lids.
4. Table and kitchen waste must be drained and wrapped in paper before being placed in receptacles.
5. Waste paper should be tied in bundles.
6. Ashes must not be mixed with other refuse.

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton has been authorized to see that this enactment is enforced.

"PINAFORE"

Peterborough talent registered another operatic success in the presentation of "Pinafore" by the Conservatory Operatic Club assisted by the Conservatory orchestra at the Grand Opera House last night. It will be repeated to-night and is worthy of a capacity house. The principal roles have been well placed, the chorus has been excellently chosen, the movement is smooth, the hornpipe, danced by a group of [illegible], is a treat in itself, and the orchestra of twenty pieces brings out all the beauties of Sullivan's music. "Pinafore" is a household word in English light opera, and in its successive revivals loses none of the charm that has established its security of place. The Conservatory Club undertook its preparation during the winter and has given a great deal of time and attention to its musical and comedy possibilities. The result is a delightful production, appropriately and handsomely staged, splendidly sung and generally acted with a freedom that was highly satisfying. "H. M. S. Pinafore" is nautical in its setting and contains some of the brightest work of Gilbert and Sullivan. The libretto sparkles with a good humoured satire that occurs particularly in the lines of Sir Joseph Porter, First Lord of the Admiralty, among them the familiar couplet:

"Stick close to your desks and never go to sea
And you all may be rulers of the Queen's navee."

The melodies are tuneful and of a quality that has endured decades of repetition. Particularly timely is the stirring solo, "For He is an Englishman." But the entire score is a succession of numbers that, being once heard, leave an indelible impression upon the memory. The Conservatory Club was fortunate in possessing the group of soloists who shared the leading parts. In this respect their production was especially satisfying. Messrs. Ed. Hanrahan, Walter Evans, Harold Lee, Asa Huycke, Newton Staples and Misses Helen McLaren, Florence Scott and Georgie Cuffe comprised a group who ably responded to the essential demand of vocal ability and most of them displayed a natural stage presence that enhanced the smoothness of the action.

The Caste.

The caste of principals was as follows:

The Right Hon. Sir Joseph Porter, K.C.B., First Lord of the Admiralty, Ed. Hanrahan.

Capt. Corcoran, commanding H.M.S. Pinafore—Walter Evans.

Ralph Rackstraw, able seaman — Harold Lee.

Dick Deadeye, able seaman— Asa Huycke.

Bill Bobstay, boatswain's mate — Newton Staples.

Bob Becket, carpenter's mate—F. C. McNallen.

Tom Tucker, midshipmate— Lorne Conway.

Sergeant of Marines—Bob Langford.

Josephine, the Captain's daughter—Florence Scott.

Hebe, Sir Joseph's first cousin — Georgie Cuff.

Little Buttercup, a Portsmouth bumboat woman—Helen Hodgson.

To individualize the work of the caste presents an evident difficulty in view of the general excellence of the performance. Miss Florence Scott as Josephine, the Captain's daughter, showed to distinct advantage in amateur theatricals and created a fine impression. Her voice is a clear soprano of extensive range and particularly strong in her high notes. Her numbers included the solo, Acquaintance, "Sorry Her Lot," duet with "My Poor Heart Obey," the duet, "Refrain Audacious Tar" and others, all of which she sang with confidence and in pleasing voice. Her acting was reserved and effective, particularly the closing scene in the first act.

Mr. Lee had the tenor solos of the leading part of the opera. He sang the tender melody, "A Maiden Fair to See" particularly well, and likewise "Farewell My Own." Ralph's dejection at Josephine's rejection of his love was quite creditable, but Mr. Lee emphasized it a little too much in the opening action. Otherwise his performance was high satisfactory. Miss McLaren sang and acted faultlessly. Perhaps she was not a sufficiently matronly Buttercup, but that was a minor detail. Her work was not only faultless but it was admirably done. Miss Cuffe had a lighter role and made the most of it.

Mr. Ed. Hanrahan scored a new success as a suave and dignified Sir Joseph Porter. His singing was delightful, including the rollicking, "I Am the Monarch of the Sea," in which the chorus reminds him that his sisters, and his cousins and his aunts are near at hand.

Asa Huycke played Deadeye exceedingly well. He was pleasantly reminiscent of De Wolf Hopper, and appeared at his best in the duet with Mr. Evans, "Kind Captain I've Important Information."

Mr. Evans was a trifle too modest Captain Corcoran, but he sang in good voice, "The Captain of the Pinafore," "Fair Moon to Thee I Sing," the duet, with Deadeye and other parts in a strong and pleasing voice.

Mr. Staples as the boatswain, made a fine impression in his acting, and sang, "He Is An Englishman" in the spirited manner it requires.

The chorus added a richness of colouring that brightened the setting. They were winsome and familiar with the stage, a factor that facilitates the smoothness of the performance. In their singing they possessed a volume that was fully effective in the finales and most of the numbers in which they appeared.

The Y.W.C.A. girls danced the sailors' hornpipe with a precision and grace that was delightful. It was a decidedly entertaining diversion and the encore they gave scarcely seemed enough. To the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. R. Gliddon, a special commendation is due. Their harmony blended a colourful background for the vocal music, their reading never faltered and in every respect they gave the presentation a tone and quality that greatly enhanced its charm and appeal. Mr. Gliddon and his assistants are to be congratulated on their success.

Among those appearing were the following:

First Lord's Sisters, His Cousins and His Aunts.

Margaret Eaton, Helen Henry, Helen Hefferman, Mamie Cronk, Winnifred Saunders, Elsie Spring, Marion Harvey, Gladys Yelland, Ada Williams, Wilma Nelson, Edyth Kerr, Alice McFarlane, Mamie Cottingham, Olive Mann, May Nelson, Gertrude Archer, Irene Scott, Florence Emmerson, Islay Wilson, Dorothy Stuart, Louise Stone, Agnes Widdiss, Lillian Eastwood.

Motor Pump and Hose Wagon Will Cost $9,735

After hearing the representatives of three companies manufacturing fire apparatus, the Committee of the Whole Council, at a meeting held last evening, recommended that the Council purchase a motor pump and hose wagon from the White Company in accordance with their tender. The contract price is $9,735. The following representatives were present: B. E. Thomas of the American La France Company; C. R. Banks, representing Hugh Cameron and Company (Seagraves apparatus) and Morse Fuller, representing the White Company.

SELECTIVE DRAFT WILL HIT MAJORS

Each League Will Lose Fifty-Five Men, says Ban Johnson.

CHICAGO, May 14.—Approximately 55 men from each of the two major leagues are subject to national service under the selective draft, according to estimate made by Ban Johnson, President of the American League, who is back to-day after a trip over the eastern end of his circuit. He said that magnates are unwilling to attempt to influence any athlete who believes his country needs him, but that there is yet hope that the big leagues will be permited to finish the season without the disruption of the teams. The belief was based upon the promise that a ball player will be in as good physical condition at the end of the season as the average conscript who has had a month or so of military training and that most of the players have had some training in drill.

Upon the suggestion of Captain T. L. Huston, of the New York Americans, Mr. Johnson, is making arrangements to have American League scores distributed to Canadian and American troops at the front.

THE HOME GARDEN

Garden peas are classed among the cool weather plants and hence may be included in the earlier plantings. Those with round seeds should be sown first as they will sprout even in cool weather and the young shoots are not readily nipped by the frost. The varieties with wrinkled seeds should be kept until the soil is warmer.

Peas may be grown successfully in almost any good soil; they will do well even on rather poor soil. Sandy loam is to be preferred and heavy clay avoided.

Our northern climate provides the most suitable conditions for growing peas if they can be started early and form their pods before the intense heat of midsummer. Plenty of moisture is required and a little shading from trees may not be injurious.

Fresh stable manure should never be employed in the spring before planting, though well rotted manure is recommended. An old clover sod or even a grass sod will give a splendid chance for peas if the seed bed is made firm. Any commercial fertilizer used should contain a good percentage of nitrogen.

For this as for other vegetables the depth of planting will depend on the character of the soil. Naturally peas will require deeper covering than small seeds such as carrots or celery. They may be placed from one to two inches below the surface, the latter depth for light soil. The tall kinds require the rows to be five or six inches apart, while the dwarf sorts are planted in rows thirty inches apart. Home gardeners have usually grown the tall varieties in preference to the dwarf, using brush or other material for a support in the rows. Of recent years the dwarf sorts have been greatly improved and as a result are now more widely grown. A neat method for the low growing varieties is to plant in double rows six to eight inches apart and if thought necessary stretch poultry netting of the proper height between.

As the green pea crop is one of the first to mature it is possible to get them out of the way early in July and follow with late cabbage or turnips. By making the space between the rows wide enough the planting of these second crops may be done a few weeks before the peas are ready to be cleared away.

There are a few enemies to be reckoned with, the most serious of which is the pea aphis. It attacks the vines of the young vines and checks the growth. Tobacco dust sprinkled on the young plants as soon as they are up, is one of the best means of protection.

The catalogues offer lengthy lists of varieties. Any good strain of the Extra Early may be selected for smooth peas. Gradus and Thomas Laxton are the earliest among the wrinkled sorts. Improved Stratagem and Telegraph are late varieties with large pods.

Whooping Cough Vaccine Distributed

Special to the Examiner:

TORONTO, May 16.—The Provincial Board of Health is distributing to various centres of the Province, a quantity of whooping cough vaccine, by which it is hoped to prevent the spread of this troublesome disease. This has been tried in various states with success, but Ontario is the first Canadian Province to adopt it.

Russia's Foreign Minister Resigns

Special to the Examiner:

PETROGRAD, May 16.—Paul N. Milioukoff, Foreign Minister, resigned his post to-day. Milioukoff has been under heavy fire from the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council even since he announced that the Provisional Government had approved all existing treaties and compacts entered into with the Allies by the former Russian regime.

M. Kerensky, extreme Socialist, has been appointed Minister of War. M. [illegible], formerly Minister of Finance, was named in Milioukoff's place as a Foreign Minister. Kerensky was former Minister of Justice.

BERLIN, May 16. — Speaking in the Reichstag to-day, the Socialist member David declared:

"The Chancellor has not replied to our demands, but the references to possible peace with Russia are most valuable."

ROME, May 16.—Italy's great offensive is gaining ground. Over a front of from twenty-five to sixty miles Italian guns are roaring to-day while infantry is steadily advancing. Several thousand captured Austrians have already been sent behind the lines, according to word received here to-day.

The fighting was reported very heavy on the hills behind Goritzia, where it appears that the greatest force of the Italian drive has been launched. There the Italian heavy calibred guns are said to be particularly effective. Heavy losses have been inflicted on the enemy by this fire.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The United States to-day loaned one hundred millions to Russia.

While rumourgd for some weeks as being under way, the loan to-day came as a distinct surprise. It is believed the growing unrest in Russia caused the sudden decision to lend immediate financial aid to bolster up the Provisional Government.

It is understood a considerable portion of the immense loan will be spent in the United States for railroad supplies, now urgently needed by Russia.

AMSTERDAM, May 16.—Official admission that the Zeppelin L-22 has been missing since Monday, was made in Berlin despatches to-day.

The L-22 was destroyed in the North Sea by British patrol vessels, according to a British Admiralty statement issued Monday.

U. S. Destroyers In European Waters

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, May 16.—The British Admiralty this afternoon officially announced "the recent arrival of American warships in European waters."

An American torpedo boat destroyer flotilla is now "at the front," somewhere in European waters, the British Admiralty officially announced to-day.

"A United States destroyer flotilla has arrived to co-operate with our naval forces," the Admiralty statement declared. "Rear Admiral Sims, U.S.N., will command all United States' naval forces in European waters."

PARIS, May 16.—A budget calling for two billion dollars for war expenses of third quarter of 1917 was introduced in the Chamber of Deputies to-day, making a total of eighteen billions on the war to date.

YALE CAPTAINS ENLIST.

Four Leaders of Major Sports Respond to Call.

NEW YORK, May 14. — All four of Yale's major sport captains, have finished their college courses and are in the national service.

Artemus Gates, captain-elect of the football team, is at Miami, Fla., with an aviation unit, to which Cord Meyer, the captain of the crew, also is attached. Johnny Overton, captain of the track team, and Marry Le Gore, the captain of the baseball team, are both about to be commissioned lieutenants of marines. They left New Haven yesterday.

It is estimated that there are not enough "Y" men left in the university to make up one 'varsity team, let alone four major sport teams.

Studebaker
Established 1852

Studebakers for London

When the London, Ontario, Fire and Police Departments wanted motor car equipment that could be counted upon for plenty of power and motoring efficiency, but economical in operation, they chose Studebaker cars.

They made an exhaustive investigation of the leading makes of American and Canadian cars. Their selection of Studebaker — the foremost Made-in-Canada car — came only after a comparative test of the relative merits of each make.

The Studebaker is economical in operation, due to its splendid quality, reducing maintenance costs to a minimum. Its ratio to power the Studebaker is one of the most economical cars on the market in its consumption of gasoline.

If economy, as well as power, is a consideration with you, too, follow the example of the London officials and thousands of other motor-wise buyers.

Let us show you the Studebaker's splendid power and easy-riding comfort.

GREAT ARTILLERYMAN IS GENERAL BURSTAL

FORMER CHIEF ARTILLERY OFFICER OF FIRST CONTINGENT IS NOW AT HEAD OF 2ND CANADIAN DIVISION

Major General Henry Edward Burstall, C. B., was a big Canadian artilleryman before he became General Officer Commanding the 2nd Division of the Army Corps from this Dominion. In the official history of Canada's part in the great war it will be recorded that General Burstall at Observatory Ridge and Sanctuary Wood commanded one of the greatest assemblages of guns ever concentrated on the British front. And when he gave the order "cease fire" the German positions had been battered almost out of recognition. Burstall's guns not only saved a bad situation, but they pounded the life out of the Huns and prepared the way for the final, brilliant victory of the brave Canadian troops.

General Burstall had already made a name for himself at Ypres when the Canadians first proved their supremacy over the Kaiser's beloved Brandenburghers. At Langemarck and St. Julien the Canadian artillery never flagged in the sleepless struggles, and not a Canadian gun was lost in the long, grim battle of retreat when the savage Huns let loose the poisonous gas that dropped the Canadian infantrymen in their tracks. The nature of the position rendered the record then made by the Canadian gunners and the artillery officers wonderful. One battery of four guns found itself in such a position that it was compelled to turn two of its guns directly about and fire on the enemy in positoins almost diametrically opposite.

General Burstall was born in Quebec of August 26, 170, the son of John and Fanny Bett (Forsyth) Burstall. He was educated at Bishop's College School, Lennoxville, and at the Canadian Royal Military College. He passed the Staff College in 1896, served in the Yukon force, in 1898-9, and went to South Africa with the First Canadian Contingent, where he rendered distinguished service in 1899 and 1900. He remained in the Transvaal until the end of of the war and was mentioned several times in the despatches. Returning to Canada, he commanded the Royal Canadian Artillery from 1907 to 1911, when he was appointed Inspector of Canada's Horse, field and heavy artillery, filling that position until the commencement of the present war. He was also Hon. A.D.C. to his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught.

He volunteered for service in France immediately after war was declared in August, 1 14, and went to the front with the rank of Brigadier-General commanding the artillery of the 1st Canadian Division. As the Canadian forces at the front were increased General Burstall took command of all the artillery units, and relinquished the post of Artillery Commander when he was appointed to succeed Major-General R. E. W. Turner, V.C., D.S.O., who was promoted to the Canadian Militia Department in London, presided over by Sir Geo. Perley, High Commissioner for Canada.

General Burstall married a daughter of Surgeon-Major J. Denison McKenzie of Bombay, and has two daughters. In times of peace he spends his vacation hunting and fishing in the wilds of Canada.

BAKERS PLACE ONUS UPON THE GOVERNMENT

Canad must have a Food Controller, Mr. Parnell declared with vigor, to bring order out of the chaos and ferment, which the Borden Government had so far failed to do. The Food Controller must be of Cabinet rank.

"We have suffered this chaotic state of affairs long enough," he continued, "and the consumer has had to pay the price. Who is it that dictates prices to the miller and the baker and everybody else? We must put a stop to it. There must be control established in regard to foodstuffs in this, as well as, other countries."

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER

Mr. Mark Bredin in a few words echoed the demand for a Food Controller, only he told the meeting that one should have been appointed long ago.

ON TO OTTAWA.

The following is the resolution in full, which the meeting carried unanimously. It will be sent to the Government along with another one to be drawn up by a committee which was struck off last night after the meeting. The new resolution, it is understood, while it will not criticize the Ottawa powers, will gently point out how a Food Controller could have saved the situation a year ago, and how if immediately appointed, he can still help the public.

Resolved: That we, the Bread and Cake Manufacturers' Association, representing as we do the baking trade of this Dominion, and believing that owing to the critical conditions now prevailing, caused by the extraordinary price at which wheat is selling and which has resulted in the unheard of prices of flour, as well as all other materials entering into the manufacture of bread, along with the serious crop outlook for the coming harvest and the apparent misunderstanding by the general public as to the [illegible] interested in production, in view of these conditions it is deemed advisable to call a meeting of the association for the express purpose of considering by the general public as to the [illegible] interested in production, in view of these conditions it is deemed advisable to call a meeting of the association for the express purpose of considering the situation and placing before the public the [illegible] statement as to the [illegible] of this very important article of food, and that flour and bread [illegible] are falling where they [illegible] and that the Government be asked to appoint a Food Controller.

The meeting then took question of what it costs to produce and deliver a loaf of bread, there are five distinct headings under which the different items of expenditure can be classified, which are as follows:—

Raw cost raw material, flour.

Ingredients used in addition to flour, such as yeast, sugar, malt, salt, shortening, etc.

Manufacturing costs, which include all wages paid in factories, fuel for ovens, lighting buildings, water, power, light, repairs and sundry other items.

Cost of delivery, which includes horse and wagon, maintenance, oats, hay, straw, bran, stable expense, extra help, returned empties, wrapping paper, harness, repairs, advertising, insurance, interest, depreciation, horses, wagons, harness, etc., including all [illegible] that [illegible] owning and [illegible] items of a similar character.

Overhead charges, such as [illegible] ciation, general expense, telephone, office supplies, taxes, rent, insurance, workmen's compensation, bad debts, etc.

COST OF FLOUR

If you summarize your different expenses under these headings, then draw them together and divide by the number of barrels of flour used, you will get the exact cost per barrel of producing and delivering the same to the consumer.

But to enable the general public to fully grasp the situation and so that an average statement of costs outside of flour could be obtained instead of taking an isolated case, which might be misleading, we have secured figures from a number of firms in the central portion of the Dominion, which give the following results of cost per barrel, exclusive of flour, namely, five-forty per barrel.

Flour to-day is quoted in central Canada:

First patents—$16.50 per barrel.

Second patents—$16.00 per barrel.

Using half of each would average $16.25 per barrel.

In the eastern and western sections costs are considerably higher, so that by adding the flour cost to the other costs as above set forth, it will give the total cost of a barrel of flour manufactured into bread and delivered to the customer. In the central section the weight of a standard loaf is 24 ounces. A barrel of flour with other ingredients will produce about 176 full weight loaves.

WARRANTS ACTION

To-day the price of bread in the central group is 12c retail and 11c wholesale. This, with other contracts, nets the manufacturer an average of 11 1-4c per loaf; 176 loaves at this average price gives a net receipt to the manufacturer of $19.80 per barrel of flour. At to-day's prices of flour this condition shows a loss of $1.85 per barrel of flour to the manufacturer, who is purchasing his flour on the open market. These facts should explain to the Government and the public the very serious situation through which our Dominion is passing and which we as a trade believe warrants immediate action.

In view of this very critical situation, the Bread and Cake Manufacturers' in convention assembled this 10th day of May, 1917, believe that the time has come for prompt action by the Government in the appointment of a Food Controller with Cabinet rank, who should have full powers to deal with and regulate the manufacture, delivery, prices and use of all foodstuffs throughout the Dominion, and this meeting pledges itself to do everything in its power to co-operate with and help such an official in the discharge of his onerous duties. (Signed) D. M. Todd, President; W. E. Trent, Secretary.

Mr. T. Gilgour, of Gilgour and Sons and Mr. H. Stock, of Wm. Stock and Son were the Peterborough bakers in attendance.

The Kitchener League's Work Is Appreciated

Following are copies of letters received by the Canadian Kitchener League:

France, April.

Dear Ladies,--The parcel of socks which you were so kind to send me arrived a few days ago. I must thank the ladies of the League for their kindness, as the socks were lovely and they certainly will be very useful, as dry socks are just what the boys need. I am very glad that mother joined your League, and feel sure that nearly every lady in Peterborough would become a member if they only knew the great work your League is doing for us boys out here in muddy France. I will close, thanking the ladies once again and wishing you a very successful summer, and I firmly hope that your League grows until every lady in Peterborough is a member.

Sincerely yours,

PTE. D. W. KEARNS.

COAL MINERS ON STRIKE.

Six Thousand Western Workers Affected.

CALGARY, May 14.--About six thousand coal miners are affected by the strike, which was formally called into effect by the executive of District 18, United Mine Workers of America, this morning, comprising practically all of the miners in the Province of Alberta and eastern British Columbia.

As a matter of fact the calling of the strike is a mere formality, because the men in all the larger mines have already been on strike or "taking the holiday" as they call it, for several weeks. The only difference is that the action of the miner in the various camps has now been sealed with the official approval of the union.

The miners' executive is still in session in Calgary, and, according to an early report, the proposal of Hon. T. W. Crothers, that the men return to work pending an inquiry by Royal Commission, does not meet with the approval of the men's leaders. They feel now that they are in a position to dictate terms to operators, and that it will only be a matter of time until their demands are granted.

The proposed agreement, which the men recently rejected by referendum, called for 15 per cent. increase. The original demand was for 25 per cent.

IT'S UP TO YOU.

The following is taken from the American Machinist. Every American and American institution appears to be binding their energies in every direction necessary to give the allies the help that is expected of them:

The machine-shop men of Germany,
With their marks and pfennigs and skill,
Built the monster of iron and steel
That inhabits the seas--to kill.
Created a monster without a heart
That lurks in the dark to strike
Women and children, the Red Cross nurse,
The wounded and well alike.

Lathes and planers, millers and drills,
Built this plaything of Hell,
But lathes and planers, millers and drills,
Will conquer its might, as well.

Machine shop men of America,
With your dollars and cents and brains,
You are fighting to rid the earth of fear,
Drive death from the ocean lanes,
But while you labour with iron and steel
To build for the Great Beyond;
Remember, you haven't begun your work
Until you have bought your Bond.

Suppress Race Track Gambling

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, May 17.—Sir Robert Borden intimates that race-track gambling will be stopped during the war.

IN TIMES OF FAMINE.

Hallelujah, 3rd and 17th.

My trust shall be in God's sweet mercy still,
Although, no golden grain, the garners fill,
And unresponsive to long toil, the field
Fail, a plentious harvest store to yield;
Empty the fold, nor herd, within the stall,
And from the tree the fruit, untimely fall;
Nor bloom the olive, and the blighted vine
Affords no vintage of refreshing wine.

How can I, faithless, doubt my Heavenly Friend,
Though, for a while, the gloomy clouds He sends;
Forget, ungrateful, all the years of shine
And countless blessings that so long were mine.
The Friend, whose tender love and watchful power
Upheld, and kept me, since life's dawning hour,
O'er every slippery pathway, safely led,
Supplied at ripment, gave me daily bread.

Should earth's bright prospects wither and decay,
And one by one, its pleasures pass away,
Yet, He who feeds and tends with bounteous care
The plummy tribes that wing the buoyant air,
And, fairer than a monarch's rich array,
Bedecks the fragile lily, by the way,
Can ne'er, unmindful of His mercy grown,
In lieu of bread, give His own child a stone.

Then will I trust Him, what so e're betide,
For all my need, His mercy will provide;
And why, remembering all His goodness past,
In adverse day be my weak soul downcast;
Nay, to the Source of every good I'll raise
Rejoicing songs of gratitude and praise,
For what if troublous times and ills befall,
With Him we'll pass victorious, through them all.

CROP ACREAGE MAY BE LARGER THIS YEAR IN SOME DISTRICTS

Weekly Report on Farm Conditions Issued by the Department of Agriculture—The Growth Has Been Slow—Need of Farm Help is Still Urgent

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY

Reports from the District Representatives of the Ontario Department of Agriculture show that the past week has been one of but little growth owing to the cold, wet weather prevailing. In most districts about two-thirds of the usual spring crops are already in, and a York correspondent claims that already as much seeding has been done as was put in last year altogether. Judging by the general tone of the reports, less cultivated land will be idle this season than was the case last year.

FIELD CROPS.

Fall wheat and clover have not picked up as a rule during the week of raw weather that has prevailed, in fact there has been some plowing up of patchy places, especially in old meadows.

A considerable acreage of early potatoes has already been planted, and the area given to corn and beans also promises to be much larger than usual, but farmers still complain of the high prices of potato and bean seed.

Vegetable raising is booming as never before in both town and country. Commercial raisers are growing more early cabbages and tomatoes, while organized vegetable garden campaigns are being conducted in a number of towns under the direction or advice of representative local committees.

There will be a more limited acreage of small fruits, especially strawberries, while greater attention is being given to the orchard.

LIVE STOCK.

Live stock on the whole are healthy, but rather on the lean side, while values hold firm for those sold for flesh. Horses are plentiful, and a number of good animals are being picked up by buyers. Cattle for market are selling at from $11.50 to $12.00 a cwt. Hogs are in great demand at from $15.80 to $16.80 per cwt. In Leeds County at a farm sale last week an ordinary brood sow brought $65 and grade cows ranged from $65 to $107. Sheep are doing well with lambs. Fodder is getting scarce, even silage is running short, but there will be sufficient stores to carry all stock nicely on to the grass.

A considerable number of cheese factories are running actively, with the milk flow about the average for the time of year. A Dundas County condensery is paying $2.60 per cwt. for milk. Cheese has been sold on the Brockville Board during the past week for 26c a pound.

FARM LABOUR.

The need of farm help is still urgent, although District Representatives have done much to alleviate the pressure in many instances by arranging for a supply of help, much of it of a temporary nature. Although some farmers are dubious about trying out High School and other inexperienced farm labour, several returns state that the lads are giving satisfaction. Boards of Trade and other town organizations are also arranging to provide help for farmers.

Seed All Planted, 150 Kneel In Prayer For Bumper Crop

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y., May 17.—Led by the Rev. E. P. Newton, one hundred and fifty employees knelt in the grain fields and garden patches on the estates of Colonel Archibald Rogers, Frederick W. Vanderbilt and James Roosevelt and offered prayers for bountiful crops. Every tillable foot of the vast estates along the Hudson, even the extensive lawns, have been ploughed and planted for war crops.

Weather and other elements being unreliable, the clergyman arranged a joint prayer service against droughts and flood and insects and for warmth and sunshine for a "patriotic crop." All the employees, desiring success for their efforts, knelt in the fields when all the seed had been put in and joined in the prayer.

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS EAGER TO ENLIST AS PRIVATES IN NAVY

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 17.—When Senator Kenyon, of Iowa, introduced a joint resolution in the Senate permitting members of Congress to enlist as privates in the navy, it developed that several Senators and Representatives have made application to enlist to the Navy Department.

The resolution passed the Senate, and when it is adopted by the House the names of at least five, and possibly more, members of Congress will be found on the list of applications, it was stated.

While the greatest secrecy surrounds the identity of those who wish to join the navy, it is understood that Senators Kenyon and Weeks are two of them.

Under the present law members of Congress could not enlist because they are forbidden to enter into any contracts with the government. If they enlist they must do so as privates, although Senator Weeks, a graduate of the Naval Academy, could probably do better.

It is the intention of the fighting Congressmen to join the navy after Congress adjourns. When Congress reconvened they would either have to resign their seats in Congress or obtain a leave in order to resume their places in the Capitol.

Wheat Prices Take A Tumble

The Elimination of Gambling in Foodstuffs Has Resulted in a Big Drop in Prices—The Cattle Market

Drastic action taken by the grain boards in an effort to eliminate the gambling in foodstuffs has already resulted in a sharp come-down in prices of both wheat and flour. The bottom for a time fell out of the July option trading yesterday at Chicago, when the price got down to $2.18, a drop of 24 cents from Tuesday's closing price. Later there was a rally and the price went up again, closing at $2.30, or 12 cents below Tuesday's closing. September lost 13 cents at the close. At Winnipeg prices were equally demoralized, breaking 21 1-2 cents from the previous close and closing 15 cents below. Winnipeg and Minneapolis flour mills are all lowering their flour quotations and Manitoba patents were quoted yesterday afternoon at Toronto $1.10 below Tuesday's prices. Ontario flour is 80 cents down.

Manitoba oats—No quotations.

American corn—$1.66, nominal, subject to embargo.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 75c to 77c, nominal, according to freights outside; No. 3 white, 74c to 76c.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, per car lots, $2.95 to $3.00; No. 2 winter, $2.93 to $2.98, according to freights outside.

Peas—No. 2 nominal.

Barley—Good malting, $1.40 to $1.45, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, $1.98 to $2.

Manitoba flour—First patents, in jute bags, $15.40; second patents, $14.90; strong bakers, $14.80.

Ontario, flour—Winter, according to sample, $12.50 to $12.60; track, Toronto; prompt shipments.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered Montreal shorts, $45; bran $40; feed flour, per bag, $3 to $3.10; middlings $48.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots, No. 2, $12 to $13; mixed $9 to $11; straw, $7 to $7.50.

THE CATTLE MARKET.

Union Stock Yards—Receipts, 86 cars, with 975 cattle, 418 calves, 2,864 hogs, and 114 sheep and lambs.

There was a fairly good market yesterday, though trading for a time was a little slow, and it seemed as though it would be hard to hold prices at this week's level. Later trading was a little more active, and practically all offerings were cleared up at good steady prices.

Good stockers and feeders and grass cows were in good demand at firm prices.

Spring lambs are considerably lower, as a result of a partial agreement arrived at not to kill lambs until July.

Sheep and yearling lambs are steady.

Calves good and steady.

Hogs firmer at $17.35 to $17.40 fed and watered.

AMERICAN TROOPS TO BE ARMED WITH ENFIELD RIFLES

Small Arm Used by British to Be Constructed to Use American Ammunition—War Department Prefers Springfield—Latter Weapon Cannot Be Furnished in Sufficient Numbers and There is No Lack of Other Make.

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 17.—American troops in the war with Germany will be armed with British Enfield rifles, so constructed, however, as to use American ammunition.

Uniformity and standardization of equipment has been urged by the representatives of Great Britain, and it has been reported that they have offered to supply the entire equipment of such a force as Colonel Roosevelt has offered to raise.

It has been explained by American officers, however, that the adoption of the British standard rifle ammunition would necessitate the total waste of the enormous quantities of American ammunition which are now on hand.

The War Department regards the American Springfield army rifle as much better than the British Enfield rifle, but frankly admits that more American manufacturing plants are equipped to turn out quickly the Enfield rifle than the Springfield, due to the large British contracts placed in this country since the war started. Therefore the department has decided to purchase large numbers of the Enfield rifle, equipped with chambers especially designed to use the American Springfield ammunition now on hand in this country.

It is a problem admittedly capable of two solutions, but the War Department has decided that it is best to use the American ammunition now on hand, rather than to discard this entirely, even if by so doing the American troops that go to France will not be able to use the British ammunition in a pinch.

Frank A. Scott, chairman of the General Munitions Board of the Council of National Defence, issued the following statement:

"We are in a position now to assure the country that rifles and ammunition will be ready for American troops as fast as they can be raised and otherwise prepared for foreign service. There are on hand more than enough rifles for the rifle carrying men of an army of approximately a million, and arrangements have now been made to provide for the arming of a large force and for the reserve which the wastage under modern war conditions makes necessary. Plans have been completed to take advantage of the small arms factories developed in our country as the result of the European war, and convert them to our use. In addition the government arsenals are being expanded. In general, it may be stated that small arms, including ammunition, can be provided for practically any number of men that the country may call to the colours.

FACILITIES NOT ADEQUATE.

"Manufacturing facilities for the Springfield rifle are not adequate to supply the number required for the larger force which the United States may decide to send abroad and to replace the wastage of such a force. Fortunately the existing small arms factories throughout the country which have been turning out quantities of rifles for the British army are equipped to manufacture the Enfield rifle in more than sufficient number. Therefore, it has been decided to adopt the Enfield rifle, but manufactured to use American ammunition, and to issue these rifles to our troops to such extent as may be necessary. Our government will continue to manufacture the Springfield model, the ammunition for which will be interchangeable with that of the new Enfield.

"The United States is in a very satisfactory position so far as all types of ammunition are concerned. This country has developed during the last three years great plants for the manufacture of high explosives, small arms ammunition and field artillery ammunition of various types. This development has been so great that several of the belligerent nations have received the greater part of their supplies from us. New plants have been developed in the interior of the country where they are safe from any raiding parties that might land upon the coast. The supply will be such that the United States can take advantage of it without taking needed ammunition from our allies.

PROVIDING FIELD ARTILLERY.

"Steps are being taken to provide for the additional quantities of field artillery necessary for modern battle conditions through the extension of plants already in operation for the Allies and through the introduction and adaptation of new plants that have not hitherto manufactured war material. The process will be slower than that of providing rifles, but this country has been noted for its machine tools, an industry which has been developed beyond that of any other nation, and this is proving a decided asset in these days of preparation for a great war, and will help us to make good a shortage which is greater than it should be. The General Munitions Board is endeavouring to develop these various resources to the fullest capacity, in order that the country may be prepared for any developments of the military situation, no matter how serious they may prove.

"In order to secure the great quantities of artillery immediately necessary for the large armies that are to be raised a certain number of guns of tried types, but manufactured in the United States, will be introduced into our service. Satisfactory arrangements have been made to accomplish this. In the meantime the munitions plants are pushing forward their preparations for the manufacture in large quantities of the various types of mobile artillery that have been adopted for our own service. Among these types is the three-inch light artillery gun, of which the latest model is said to be even superior to the famous French 75."

LEARNING TO LIVE

France's Blinded Heroes are Re-educated to Usefulness

Miss Winifred Holt, President of the "Pare de France," Paris, where blinded soldiers are helped to lead useful lives, gave the following interesting account: Some of the blind soldiers, she said, after several months in the institution are enabled to read, write, roller skate, play checkers, ride horseback, knit, weave and take part in other activities. A blind sergeant was formerly an architect. After leaving the school he again started his profession and presented Miss Holt with a miniature lighthouse which he made. Having invented a stringed apparatus as a substitute for a missing arm, one blind soldier was able to hold the appliance with his foot and do wonderful work, she said. Miss Holt also told stories of how armless, blind men learn to eat; how one-armed blind men studied and graduated in stenography and typewriting and gave other remarkable instances of re-education.

LOST TEN BROTHERS

Record of Henry O'Brien, Sailor, of Montreal

The youngest of eleven brothers, the other ten of whom have lost their lives in the great war, and a veteran of nine naval battles—such is the record of Henry Joseph O'Brien, of Montreal, first class petty officer of the British navy and honorably discharged from His Majesty's Service. Petty officer O'Brien was himself well nigh shot to pieces. He received shrapnel and rifle bullet wounds in the back and arms and his right leg almost shattered by shrapnel. He had two of his brothers shot to pieces at his side, on H.M.S. Triumph. Three brothers went down in another naval engagement, three in the Canadian army and two lost their lives in British regiments.

HAD AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

For 5 or 6 Years

Diseases and disorders of the heart and nervous system have become frightfully prevalent of late years.

One can scarcely pick up a paper but he will find recorded instances of sudden deaths through heart failure, or of prominent men and women unable to prosecute their ordinary business or profession on account of a breaking down of the nervous system.

We do not desire to unnecessarily alarm anyone, but to sound a word of warning.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, has shooting pains through it, it is time to stop and think.

To all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N. B., writes: "I had awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At the present time my sister is using them for nervousness and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

NERVY CARD-PLAYERS

Lucky Escape of British Officers Learning Novel Game

R. F. Foster had several inquiries about the fine points of the "pirate bridge" game from officers with the British expeditionary force in France. In response he sent them copies of the official laws. He received one letter marked "On His Majesty's Service," acknowledging the receipt of the book, somewhere in France, by one of these players who modestly being unable to occupy himself at present. He says: "We are all delighted with pirate here and were getting along finely with the tailboard of a wagon for a card table and outside our dugout when we found it necessary to leave the cards as they were and go inside to consult the book as to whether a player could change his own bid after it had been accepted. While we were inside a shell exploded within a few feet of our card table and we have not been able to find as much as a squeezer mark of that pack of cards since. As no one will lend us a pack our game is postponed until some thoughtful person puts a couple of packs into one of those marvellous assortments of knitted goods that we get from the good people at home."

Not a word about the marvellous escape of the four who had just left the card table! It really looks as if these men at the front thought as little of an exploding shell as we do of the backfiring of an automobile.

Planner of Campaigns

GENERAL SIR WILLIAM R. ROBERTSON, long Chief of the Imperial General Staff at London, and a leading figure in the Great War. He rose from the ranks.

GLIMPSES OF GENERALS

Gough, Cavan, Rawlinson, Monro, etc., in Rapid Survey

Wrote a British war correspondent: Whenever I have met a British general in this war I have made it a practice to study his features and general characteristics to see what estimate might be formed of his military character. There is Monro, a thick-set, stout-hearted, amazingly, indomitably cheerful in all circumstances; Plumer, tenacious as a bull-dog, with a fine sense of humour flashing at you out of his eyes; Rawlinson, tall, debonair, slightly lackadaisical, highly intuitive; Gough, bright-eyed, vivacious, keen as a Toledo blade; Cavan, stocky in build, indefatigably energetic, his personal courage equalled only by his unfailing optimism—the mind passes them over in review until it rests on the figure of Haig, "The Chief," the keystone of the whole fabric of our armies in France and Belgium, in whom may be said to be united all the different characteristics of our generals, in that he has had the discrimination to recognise the varying qualities which fit each for his appointed task.

VERDUN HEROES RETIRED

Age Limit Affected Gen. Balfourier of Iron Division

Among the victims of the [illegible] ing the age limits for the [illegible] who during the war are Gen. Balfourier, who was commander of the famous iron division at Verdun and on the Somme, and Gen. Charles Lanrezac, who distinguished himself at the battle of the Marne. Two Generals with nineteen other officers of lesser rank were placed on the reserve list in this batch. The law under which they were retired from active service fixed the age limit for Colonels at 60 years, of Generals of brigade, at 62 and of Generals of division at 65.

Table Talk of the Babies

A mother writes: One does not want to save lives in one class only, but the lives of the babies in every class. They are every one needed. The strength of our armies has been in their unity of spirit, and this feeling must animate those who have stayed at home, for there is a heavy task before us in repairing the breaches the enemy has made in our ranks, and married and unmarried we must go to our work of saving young lives for the Empire in the same spirit as our men go to do battle.

LAND FOR SOLDIERS

Aristocrats of Britain should Step, Declared Countess

Although she owns 25,000 acres in England, the Countess of Warwick wrote as follows: "For the betterment of social conditions in England a supreme sacrifice is required. It is no more than justice that the men who have offered their lives in this war for Britain should have the freedom of Britain for their reward. It is no justice that calls men to fight for the land and leaves it in the hands of a fraction of those who fought. To me it is impossible that in the future 'his grace' or 'my lord' should own square miles of the mother earth for which Tom died and Dick was sore wounded and Harry fought unscathed.

"The country has great needs. If it is to remain solvent the united work of one and all is necessary. The old feudal landlord will be an anachronism, the new money spun landlord an abomination. Only the State can own the land in trust for those who can make it productive. We who are in the high places in England should retire from them in the real halo of renunciation, and our act of sacrifice would be a better memorial than the best of us could have hoped to gain."

BAGPIPES AT VIMY

Canadian Highlanders Advance with Pipes Playing

The advance of the Canadian Highlanders, with their pipes playing, made a great impression, said a wounded soldier, speaking of an incident at Vimy Ridge. One Canadian Highland battalion boasts of a pipe-major, Richardson, who during a particularly fierce fight on the Somme marched up and down in front of the German wire, playing his pipes until our force got through. Then Richardson went through too and was killed in the enemy trenches. When this same battalion moved up for the Vimy attack its pipers begged to be allowed to take part. One went with each company, and the pipe-major accompanied the colonel. The colonel was very ill with gastritis but refused to be absent.

The men said it was a wonderful sight—the colonel and the pipe-major marching in step under the heavy fire. They moved straight on, turning aside for nothing. The skirl of the pipes could be heard even amid the deafening noise of the bursting shells. Wounded men lying in shell-holes raised themselves on their elbows and cheered. "We all fought better for the sound of the pipes," said one soldier.

BRITAIN ENLISTED MORE

Canadians Did Not Volunteer so Well A Canadian's Argument

Sir Douglas Cameron of Manitoba, addressing the Empire Club of Toronto, referred to the enormous resources of this country in fisheries, timber, pulpwood, minerals, waterpower, oil, seals, grasses, livestock etc., and its health-giving climate. Then turning to our institutions he urged the duty of maintaining our own liberty and the liberty of the world. Sir Douglas pointed out what the mother land had done for the spread of civilization and education, for the development of natural resources in the colonies and possessions in India, South Africa, Egypt, etc., through services of leaders, engineers, governors, capital, etc., went abroad from Great Britain. Vast areas which had been subject to periodical drought had been irrigated; and where millions had suffered the pangs of hunger and death they now lived in comparative comfort. The pages of history reveal, he said, the facts to prove that the British people are an honest people—loyal to the greatest ideals the world today knows.

The Empire cries out for more men, he said, for the road to victory may be long and hard. It is therefore up to us in Canada to call forth steadily our every resource, to contribute all the man-power we have, to reinforce the gallant civilian soldiers who have so nobly and ably fought for liberty in France and Flanders. More man-power should be our first consideration, whether by voluntary enlistment or whether we say, "The man who has not the pluck and the spirit to fight for home and country should be compelled to do so,—compelled to give a service equal to the protection and the service which he received from the country of his birth or adoption. We should remember that Great Britain up to 1917 voluntarily enlisted 11 per cent. of her total population, as against only 5 per cent. from Canada. We must rise to the full measure of the responsibility resting on the great people occupying Canada, one of the great countries of the world.

SEE NATION'S SOULS

Commonplace Becomes Noble when Depths are Stirred

Maurice Maeterlinck, the great Belgian Dramatist and Poet, says: The Belgians, under the guise which they always showed us, gave no promise of a noble soul. They seemed to us narrow and limited, rather commonplace and honest in a mean, inglorious way; they were without ideals or generous aspirations, wholly absorbed by their petty material well-being, their petty local wrangles. Yet when the same hour of duty sounded for them, more menacing and formidable than for others, because it sounded, mysterious and terrible, before all others; while there was everything to gain and nothing to lose—that honour, if they proved faithless to a plighted word; at the first call of a conscience expressed by God, without hesitating or blanching at what they had to meet or undergo, with an irresistible and unanimous outburst of soul, they astonished mankind by a decision such as no other people had ever taken, and saved the world, well knowing that themselves could not be saved. And this assuredly is the noblest sacrifice that the heroes and martyrs, who hitherto seemed the devoted knights of sublime courage, could achieve on earth.

KNOW ENGLAND BETTER

Death of George the Third Now Admitted by Editor

Says the Washington Post: The England of to-day is not the England which, under a German king and a weak ministry, blundered into the fatal error of attempting to tyrannize over the American colonies. England now exhibits the same spirit as that which sustained Washington and Lafayette. It is battling heroically for human rights. In spite of mistakes and difficulties in the administration of its immense Empire, Great Britain stands for the essentials of self-government, home rule and individual liberty. Its subjects are free men, wherever they stand upon the earth. No war lord monopolizes their lives from the cradle to the grave, or drives them like cattle in the possession of monstrous criminal ambitions. The British people are their own war lords. Their Empire, great as it is in extent, is greater because of the spirit of liberty that guides and defends it.

Weak, Nervous, Anaemic School Children

Are Quickly Restored to Health and Vigour by the Upbuilding Influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

PETERBOROUGH, Ont., March 12.—It is only necessary to watch the children coming out of school in order to learn what a large proportion of them are weak, anaemic and nervous. One indication of exhausted nerves is the large number who wear glasses.

The school age is a most trying time because of rapid growth and development both mentally and physically and the added strain of examinations and class rivalry.

Because of its gentle action and great blood forming qualities, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is admirably suited as a restorative for anaemic, nervous school children.

Mrs. M. E. Robson, 120 Dublin street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "When about the age of 14 or 15, my daughter was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. She had a very poor appetite, lost all her colour, and at times had a trembling of the nerves in her limbs. I decided some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and gave her a treatment, using five or six boxes. The results were splendid, entirely curing her of her nervous trouble and restoring her appetite. I find Dr. Chases Nerve Food a splendid spring tonic, and best results can be found by taking some of the Kidney-Liver Pills at the same time."

Mrs. [illegible], 120 Dublin street, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Three years ago I noticed that our children seemed to be suffering from bad nerves and poor appetites, and were inclined to be anaemic. Knowing the good of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I started to give them a treatment of this medicine. I found it built them right up, made them bright and cheery and restored their usual good health. I have also used the Nerve Food myself, and found it very beneficial for nerves and heart. In fact, I have found Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to be such a valuable medicine for general family use that I have recommended it to many of our friends and acquaintances."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

ANDY MILLER, DESPERADO

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

A girl about sixteen years old was walking along a road when she saw a man coming toward her. The moment she caught sight of the figure and a certain swing there was in the walk she started. He was some distance from her, and she had time to pull herself together before they met.

"Can you tell me," she asked, "how to get to Roslin?"

"You're goin' the wrong way for Roslin. It's a couple of miles back of you."

"Oh!" exclaimed the girl. "I've been walking away from it all the time."

"I'm goin' in that direction. I'll show you the way."

"Thank you."

As they walked along they chatted upon ordinary topics. Presently the man said:

"Ain't you afraid to be walkin' along this road all alone by yourself?"

"Why should I be afraid?"

"Oh, there's lots o' rough characters in these parts. Some of 'em might harm you."

"I've heard that Andy Miller has been seen about here lately."

"Who's Andy Miller?"

"He's the man that killed Cyrus Borden."

"Who's Cyrus Borden?"

"Why he was a man that lived just outside o' Roslin."

"What did Miller kill him for?"

"Why, I suppose it was to get his money. But he didn't get it after all. Mr. Borden kept his money in the chimney, and Miller didn't look for it there."

At this the man showed interest.

"How do you know all about this?"

"I'm a friend of Maggie Borden, Mr. Borden's daughter. She told me all about it."

"I suppose since the killing they've put the money in the bank."

"No; Maggie says they keep it just where it was. Nobody would think of looking there for it. It's behind a loose brick."

The man smiled, but took care that the girl didn't see his smile. "Surely she was the quintessence of innocence. They walked on together till they came to a crossroad a short distance from Roslin, when the man turned off, leaving the girl to pursue her way alone.

"Goodby," she said. "Much obliged to you for showing me the way."

WOMEN'S BACKS BEAR THE BURDEN

"Campaigns of thrift," "Speeding up for production," and other present day slogans have influenced the women of Canada quite as much, and indeed in some quarters more, than the men.

How many thousands of women everywhere who always kept a "maid" are now doing their own housework to release another pair of hands for the munition factory. Other thousands of young girls who formerly did not find it necessary to offer their services for hire are doing effective work in the munition factories, stores and elsewhere.

This change of work, or the undertaking of new duties, has found the weak spot in the armour. We hear women say so often now-a-days, "If it weren't for my back I could stand the work fine." The reason for that sore back is the kidneys and nothing else. The remedy is Gin Pills. Just try one box and see how soon the pain in the back is relieved, and tired, swollen joints in the hands and feet are reduced.

Constipation is the usual running mate with Kidney and Bladder Trouble—Gin Pills will relieve both in short order. If not we refund your money. Sample free if you write National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto.

The murder of Cyrus Borden was one of the most cold blooded that had ever been known in those parts. He had drawn $2,000 from the bank with which to pay off a mortgage. The same night some one broke into his house and demanded at the point of a pistol the money he had drawn from the bank. Borden refused and attempted to defend himself. He was killed by the robber, who then made a search for the money. He failed to find it and departed empty handed.

Mrs. Borden was away at the time with her two younger children, Maggie being at home with her father. Maggie did not know anything about what had occurred until she was awakened by the robber searching for the money. Opening her door, she heard him ransacking a bureau drawer. She could see the flashes of his dark lantern, but not him. She turned on the lights, and he fled.

Maggie ran to her father's room and found him lying dead on the floor.

Maggie's description of the murderer tallied with that of a notorious desperado, Andy Miller, who had terrorized the country roundabout and had been seen near Roslin. Justice at the time was administered in that region by members of a vigilance committee. They searched for Miller, but he was too smart for them. He would appear when they were not looking for him but would be conspicuously absent when they hoped to find him.

The night after the meeting of the man and the girl on the road the man about 10 o'clock, walked past the house where the murder had been committed. Not a light was to be seen in it. Seeing something white on the front door, he drew near it and saw that it was a bit of paper on which was written:

Gone to Aunt Mary's. Will return at 11 o'clock.

"What fools!" said the man to himself.

Going around to the rear of the house, he tried a window sash and found it unlocked. He had only to raise it to step into the window and find himself in the kitchen. Flashing a light, he saw that the stovepipe entered the chimney. Passing into the living room, he found an open fireplace. Stooping and flashing his light up the chimney, he began to feel for a loose brick.

"Come out o' that!"

The man turned and saw the room illuminated and half a dozen men covering him with revolvers. One of them had already relieved him of his revolver when his back was turned toward them.

"Andy Miller, you're caught at last," said the leader of the vigilance committee.

"How did you get on to me?" asked the man, white as a sheet.

"Maggie, come here."

The girl who had inquired the way to Roslin and told him her innocent story appeared.

"You were trapped by this brave little girl, who is the daughter of the man you murdered. She was smart enough to do what was too big a job for us."

Half an hour later the desperado was dangling from a tree.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured. I may have had cold in the chest," writes Mrs. Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. "For me, depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

SCOTSMAN ON WHOM BRITAIN LEANED

Sir Douglas Haig—Real Professional Soldier—Man who Read Much and Thought Deeply

Lord Northcliffe, in a sketch of Sir Douglas Haig's life, says: Haig is a real professional soldier. All his life he has made his profession his principal care from those early days when he was a subaltern in the 7th Hussars, when life in a crack cavalry regiment was one long dolce far niente. It is characteristic of the man that on obtaining six months' furlough after a long term of service in India in 1906 he spent his leave in Germany, acquiring all the information he could about the German Army. Like his great chief, Lord French of Ypres, he has ever been a great reader of military books; indeed, his face is the face of a student who has read much and thought deeply.

Chief of Staff at 42.

After good experience in Egypt and South Africa, Sir Douglas held many important commands in India and at home. Promoted major-general in 1904—at the age of 43—in 1909 he was appointed Chief of Staff at home, a post which he held with conspicuous success until 1912, when he was given the Aldershot command, which he held until the mobilization of 1914. He was one of the few men in this country who recognized the imminence of the German peril. In command at Aldershot, he was compelled to be a despairing witness while our amateur strategists sagfully cheesepared at the Army Estimates, multiplying a hundredfold, in consequence, the work that had to be done when the blow fell in August 1914.

The Field-Marshal went out with "the old Contemptibles" in command of the First Army Corps, and was called upon almost immediately to give proof of his skill in extricating his troops from Mons at the outset of the retreat. From that time on the very heaviest fighting of the war was to be his lot; the retreat from Mons, the advance from the Marne, the battle of the Aisne, the great swing round to the north which culminated in the first battle of Ypres, and the winter fighting between Armentieres and La Bassee when the Indian troops were so sorely tried. When, with the expansion of our Army, the First and Second Armies were formed, Sir Douglas Haig was given command of the First Army, and was in charge of the operations against Neuve Chapelle, and later against the Fromelles Ridge, in which we were robbed of success by the shortage of shells.

Taught by Bitter Experience

It is safe to say that Sir Douglas Haig learnt the secret of his subsequent great triumphs on the Somme in those gallant but fruitless attacks between March and June, 1915. When, in December, 1915, Sir John French was given command of the forces at home, and his loyal comrade-in-arms and friend succeeded him in the supreme command of our troops in France, Sir Douglas Haig, profiting by the lessons of the past, resolutely held his hand, despite pressure from home, until he felt that he had the supplies of shells needful to smash the enemy on the Somme. When the hour struck, in the dawn of that glorious First of July, the character of the man showed itself. In the opening stages of the battle there were losses in parts of the attacking line which, with no concrete gains to show, were heavy enough to daunt the stoutest heart. But the "Tiger" held on, confident in himself and even more confident in the men whom he was adamantly resolved to lead to victory.

TRAGEDY OF TIGRIS

Poor Facilities for Caring for Sick Soldiers

The difficulties of a military campaign in Mesopotamia are many, but one of the most serious is caring for the sick and wounded British soldiers, stated a Toronto doctor who served with the British army there, and returned to London. Some of his views of Mesopotamia and the difficulties of the Army Medical Service there may be summarized as follows:

"Mesopot" is a huge flat desert for the most part, through which the Tigris winds torturously, with an ever-changing river bed. Arab villages and date palms dot the country at intervals—the palms getting scarcer as one proceeds up stream. All transport is thus thrown on the river, the navigation of which was accomplished by flat-bottomed, shallow-draft steamers usually drawing from 3 to 4 feet and taking a barge on each side. The sick were thus transported and the matter has been a tragedy of the campaign. Many were the cases of heat-stroke that developed en voyage, and the appliances were often inadequate.

POLLU'S RECORD IS PLAIN

"V" on Sleeve Denotes Wounds and His Service

The British soldier carries his whole military record on his sleeve. An inverted "V" stripe on the right sleeve means "wounded," and a new one is added for each addition. A "V" right side up on the same sleeve means "sent home on sick leave." The "V" on the left sleeve indicates length of service—one for the first year and one for each succeeding six months.

Private to Lieutenant

In a letter Lieut. M. Cook of North Battleford, Sask., related his experiences since leaving that city as a private two years previously. Rising from a private he held every rank except Reg. Sergt.-Major. He was nineteen months in the trenches, meeting with an accident—when a bomb which sent him to the Hospital. After that time he was instructor in a bombing school, being promoted first to Sergt.-Major and later given a commission as a Lieutenant. Before enlisting Lieut. Cook was a city employee.

GUARDING THE COAST.

The Brave Fisherfolk of the Old Land.

Along the coast one meets strange changes of landscape, type, feature, and fibre. If the war has drained the land (and the irrigation will soon be more drastic) of stalwart men of the plough, herdsmen, shepherds, shopkeepers, and foresters it has taken still greater toll of the coastal villages. For league upon league the grain lands and the oat lands run down to the sea and on a misty August evening one can hardly distinguish between the tall haycocks and the bumped sand dunes.

Here and anon the fishing villages and burghs lie, tough-built and low to withstand the angry battering of the North Sea. Strangely silent—sometimes desolate—are these villages to-day. There is an atmosphere of suspense about them. They seem to be waiting for something. From meat and grass stay the nets, acres of them, are spread out to air in the silver sunlight. Under them and round about them the children play, bareheaded, barelegged, black-eyed, and burnt so richly brown that you might imagine them to be sea-urchins of the Pacific. The little houses are quaint and almost barbaric with their prehistoric decorations of shells in arabesque design curiously reminiscent, at a distance, of the lucid artistry of some Cordevan mosque.

Undoubtedly these fisherfolk are a race apart. But for all that these silent, rugged people make a magnificent bulwark of the Land o' Cakes. The men of this dark, this mysterious clan, forsaking their nets and their lives, have cast in their lot with the navy. Coast patrol is their job in this mighty war, and wonderfully they do it. They are the rough riders of the fleet—the navvies of the sea. You never hear of them and, save for an occasional sudden call ashore and away again neither do their own folk.

From 18 to 85 their ages are. A grandfather and his grandson are serving in the same ship—a rusty old tin-kettle of a trawler, christened with the name of a lady saint and crowned, fore and after with a quick-firing gun. The Santa Maria's mission is strictly private and confidential. She came into Cellardyke recently after a long prowl along the edge of the plateau of the North Sea, clamorous for jam and cucumbers. These delicacies having been supplied, she stole away again to her silent business, leaving a scatter of cucumber rind in her wake. Cellardyke expects to hear of her again in the course of six weeks.

Cellardyke is a remarkably interesting place. It is one of three small burghs, all of which run into one another, after the fashion of the three towns of the west—Plymouth, Devonshire, and Stonehouse. The other two burghs, each with its separate civic and religious functions, are Anstruther Wester and Anstruther Easter. In East Anstruther I inquired the way to Cellardyke of a bearded ancient. "Do ye see that wee dip in the causeway beyond the next opening?" replied my hoary friend. "There was a burn run along there once, though it's dry now. And the far side of the wee dip—that's the toon o' Cellardyke."

From one little house in Cellardyke a father, six sons, and one son-in-law have gone from their nets to patrol work, and out of the 550 men of all ages in the three towns not less than 500 are wearing the uniform of his Majesty's navy. Women, girls, old men (anywhere up to 90) and young lads are carrying on the homework as best they may, though a good many of the fisher girls have left the place and gone south to work in the linen mills. After a few months' training they make excellent workwomen.—London Mail.

Pepper.

White pepper is allowed to ripen upon the vines, and after being plucked the berries are decorticated, or deprived of their outer coat. Black pepper is the product of the berries picked before full ripening.

Condimental.

Douglas Jerrold once went to a party at which a Mr. Pepper had assembled all his friends and on entering the room said to his host, "My dear Mr. Pepper, how glad you must be to see all your friends mustered!"

Punishing the Ladies.

Female conspirators against Ramesses III. of Egypt, says Hawthorne, were condemned in 1250 B. C. "to the servitude of keeping a beer house, which was thought sufficient punishment for ladies of delicacy and refinement."

EDUCATION.

Education gives facility of thought, explanations of construction, quickness, vigor, fancy, words, images and illustrations; it decorates every common thing and gives the power of trifling without being undignified and absurd.—Sydney Smith.

The Prompt Answer.

YOU feel almost like shaking hands with a man when he comes to his telephone the moment the bell rings.

If he answers by saying at once "Mr. Blank speaking" instead of using the time-wasting "Hello" or "Well" you are still further pleased for you have saved valuable time and perhaps avoided a whole series of unnecessary questions to find out to whom you are speaking.

To always answer promptly and to announce yourself at once instead of saying "Hello" "Yes" or "Well" will go far toward keeping up the quality of your telephone service.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Farmers are naturally deeply concerned over the inaction that has tied up the cheese market and the seemingly inevitable fixation of prices this summer. The British Government controls the shipping practically of the world just now and in the Atlantic service has been lately moving troops and grain. The embargo on munitions should indicate clearly that there is no discrimination against cheese or that the market is being gradually manipulated to the detriment of the producer. While cheese may be temporarily stored in cool-curing rooms waiting a turn of events, finished shells are being held in factories until the seaports are declared open to them. Hence there can be no ground for suspicion of the authorities by the farmer. But the fact remains, that the country has been putting more dependence than even upon dairying and the season's first taste of high prices is quickly followed by the disturbing information that the producers' price is to be fixed. The farmers' anxiety rests upon the question of what the price is to be. They are cognizant of the fact that industry is untramelled, that middlemen are cutting a wide and deep path to riches without any restrictions and they simply ask why single out the farmer for sacrifice, the real producer of wealth, while these other interests, not bigger but more closely united and powerful, are given a free hand in the market to speculate and boost prices before, they eventually reach consumers.

This is the phase of the recent development in cheese trading that alarms the farmer, for to many of them it is more than ever necessary that their dairies return fair profits this year.

Grain Prices.

Wheat, per bushel	$2.75
Oats, per bushel	.80
Rye, per bushel	$1.26
Barley, per bushel	$1.15
Small peas, per bushel	$2.60
Blue peas, per bushel	$2.60
Buckwheat, per bushel	$1.25

Hides.

The prices of hides are as follows:

Veal skins	25c to 28c
"Deacons" each	$1.00 to $1.50
Yearlings "runner-kip"	15c to 17c
Sheep skins	$1.00 to $2.00
Tallow, per lb.	7c to 8c
Washed wool, per lb.	45c to 47c
Unwashed wool, per lb.	35c to 37c

Matthews-Blackwell quote $16.40 for hogs.

SPECULATORS BOOSTING THE PRICE OF EGGS NOW

Eggs are bringing 3c to 4c more than last week, at 42c to 44c per dozen at Montreal in a wholesale way. The market has passed through an excited and unsettled condition during the past week, as it is thought at Montreal that prices have been rushed up through speculation above their legitimate status. At present, all the ocean freight space has been filled, and there is no knowing when the next space will be available. In the meantime, there is a good demand over the cable. Receipts of eggs up to the present have fallen short of those of last year to date, but this is due to the cold and backward spring; and if the present warm weather continues the production of hen fruit should materially increase.

When Flour Soars.

A Chicago report sums up the wheat situation thus: "Speculation has been the chief factor effecting the tremendous rise in prices during recent weeks. Fluctuations of as much as 20 cents and more in the price of wheat within a few hours are not uncommon. Moreover, they are daily features of the market. A sharp advance in wheat futures is immediately reflected in the cost of bread, but not so a sharp decline. This is possibly why speculation is looked upon by the public as a serious menace to the national welfare at this time."

Enforced Waiting.

Trade is stagnant, awaiting the next move of the cheese commission, which, it is explained, is solely a purchasing commission and has nothing to do with arranging the price, which would be controlled by the British Board of Trade. The Commission is only a medium between the producer and the British Board of Trade. A price will be set by the British Board of Trade, and the commission will not pay more than it. Till that price is set, nothing may be looked for on the market, but it should come. Two weeks of delay ought to be sufficient for even our characteristic "muddling through."

THE FRENCH STANDARD OF COURTESY.

(Manchester Guardian.)

There is a fine ring of the eighteenth century about the ending which Mr. Balfour gave to his letter to our Ambassador at Washington on the peace proposals. He concluded with the words—

"I am, with great truth and respect, Sir,
Your Excellency's most obedient, humble, servant."

In closing his despatch in this manner, the Foreign Secretary was following strict diplomatic rule as set down with meticulous care by the French protocol. Years ago—probably in the reign of Louis the Fourteenth—the French Government decided to set a standard of courtesy, and they drew up an elaborate protocol giving guidance for all circumstances. As time progressed all nations began to adopt the same methods, and now, not only is French the language of diplomacy, but the French standard of courtesy is international.

COUCY CHATEAU A DIRE RUIN.

Nothing left of it on which to Report, Says Whitney Warren.

PARIS, May 14. — Whitney Warren, the American architect, was the guest yesterday of General Nivelle, at whose invitation he visited the liberated territory and inspected the ruins of the Chateau de Coucy. Mr. Warren who made an official architectural report on Rheims Cathedral after the first bombardment, will again visit Rheims on Sunday as the General's guest to make another report on account of the recent statements that the last bombardment had placed the church in jeopardy of total destruction.

Concerning the Coucy chatean he said:

"All the devastation I have seen to date is child's play compared to that. Most fiendish ingenuity has been employed to efface it absolutely and all for no military advantage. There is nothing left on which to make an architectural report."

French Repulse Foe's Counter-Attacks

Further British Progress at Bullecourt

German Attacks In Waves Are Completely Stopped By French

All Idan Efforts to Retake Ground Gained By the French Failed and Teutons Lost Heavily---General Haig Reports That British Have Made Further Progress Through Bullecourt---Hard Fighting on Western Front

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (French Official), May 17.—For the second successive night, German troops threw violent attacking waves last night against French positions north of Moulin and Laffaux, and were again repulsed, to-day's official statement declared.

Another series of three German attacking waves northeast of Bray-en-Laonnais was likewise checked, the War Office declared.

"In the course of the night," the statement said, "the Germans re-attacked on the region north of Moulin and Laffaux. All their efforts to retake the ground gained by the French counter attacks failed, they losing heavily.

"Northeast of Bray-en-Laonnais three German assaulting waves were checked by our curtain of fire without the enemy obtaining any results."

The statement also detailed patrol fighting in the Champagne.

LONDON, May 17.—More progress at Bullecourt was reported by Field Marshal Haig to-day.

"There was fighting around Bullevourt again," he said. "We progressed farther through the village and reached the western edge."

LONDON, May 17.—General Maurice, director of operations of the British army, said this afternoon that the Allies were admirably succeeding in their plans of campaign on the western front. "These plans," he said, "were to wear the Germans down." There could be no big advance without the accomplishment of this, and no sensational advances into enemy territory could be expected at present.

Fighting from now on, he said, would be of the hammer and tongs variety, slight but sure gains for the Allies, with light losses, but with extremely heavy losses for the Germans.

"Lately," said Maurice, "we have been forcing the Germans to attack us in order to prevent our further advance. That is exactly what we want.

"The results to the Germans are disastrous and their losses tremendous. They are using up all their reserves to stay our advance."

General Maurice pointed out that the Germans were trying to bolster up the courage of the people by the issuance of false official statements.

(By Perry Arnold.)

NEW YORK, May 17.—On every front in Europe and Asia to-day the Allies were waging their spring offensive, except where Russian troops faced the enemy.

England and France were still gaining bit by bit in the greatest of these offensive movements, in France.

Along the Austro-Italian front, General Cadorna was hurling his troops forward in Italy's most formidable and most successful offensive against the Austrians.

In Macedonia General Cerrail, with his Cosmopolitan forces of French, British, Russian, Italian, Serbian and Greek troops, was fighting along a front of nearly thirty miles.

In Mesopotamia General Maude's British expeditionary force was pressing on north of Bagdad.

In Palestine, General Murray with his British invaders was slowly but steadily pressing the Turks back and sweeping on toward Jaffa and the Holy City of Jerusalem.

The every front offensive plan is the first result of the Allied councils this winter at Rome, Paris and London. It is co-ordinated, carefully timed, completely organized and successful effort.

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, May 17. — The greatest forces of men Germany has ever called into action have been massed on the west front in Hindenburg's effort to stop the Franco-British drive.

Between April 9th and May 11th there were at least 1,260,000 men engaged on both German sides.

Headquarters estimates to-day, based on careful calculations and evidence obtained from prisoners and scouting raids, showed in the period mentioned that the German Commander-in-Chief utilized eighty-four German divisions. Seven of these were engaged twice in the fighting in this month period.

The greatest previous massing of German forces was around Verdun. The fighting there is probably the nearest comparable to the fierceness of the struggle now progressing in the Allied drive.

In a little over a month, in struggling against the Franco-British drive, Germany has called into action a force almost double the number of fighters she threw into one year's campaign against Verdun. And Verdun was one objective for which she slaughtered men ruthlessly in an effort to gain prestige for the Crown Prince.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The American steamer Hilonian, three thousand tons, has been sunk in the Mediterranean, and four of the crew lost. The British steamer Harpagus was also sunk in the same vicinity May 9th. It is understood here that the German submarine menace is almost effaced in the neighbourhood of the British Isles, and that most of the recent sinkings were in the Mediterranean.

GRATEFUL LETTERS FROM PETERBORO' BOYS OVERSEAS

Following are copies of letters recently received by the Canadian Kitchener League:

FRANCE, April.

Dear Friends,—I have pleasure in writing these few lines to thank you for the two boxes of socks which I received, quite safe. I divided them among the 93rd boys as far as they went. We are getting fine weather now although we had a very cold winter. Thanking the Canadian Kitchener League once again and hoping that we will come back to Peterborough to thank them for their kindness, Your sincere friend,

PTE. W. J. DARBURN.

(Private Darburn is reported "died of wounds" since this letter was received.)

FRANCE.

Dear Ladies, — I am very glad to say that I have just received the very welcome present of socks you were so kind to send to us from Peterborough. I am sure we all thank you very much for your kindness in thinking of us, and I hope we will be able to do our little bit out here, in return for your kindness. I am very glad to say I was one of the first to join the 24th in Peterborough, and I have been with them ever since. The Canadians are doing some good work out here, although they have had some hard times, but we can only hope that the war will not last another twelve months. I guess I will have to close now, again thanking you for your kindness, I remain, A true Peterboro' ch Boy,

ALFRED HUDSON.

LIEUT. V. Mac. EASTWOOD, of the 93rd Battalion who has won the Military Cross by gallant work at the front.

MILITARY CROSS FOR LIEUT. EASTWOOD OF 93RD BATTALION

Peterboro' Officer Decorated For Good Work in France—Is Son of Mr. Vincent Eastwood, Manager of the Royal Bank

HONOURS FOR COLLEGIATE

Mr. Vincent Eastwood, manager of the Royal Bank has received a letter from his son, Lieut. Vincent McCarter Eastwood stating that he has been awarded the Military Cross. The young officer whose gallantry has thus been officially recognized has refrained from saying anything about the manner in which his cross was won, but it is known that he has been doing some good work in connection with patrols. Lieut Eastwood was appointed to the 93rd Battalion during the time it was being recruited and on going overseas was transferred to the 18th Western Ontario battalion at the front. Like the other two Peterborough boys whose decorations have been announced this week he was a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. His many friends will be glad to learn of the honour he has won.

Ashburnham Will Give A Big Vote

The Committee is Organizing to Support the Bridge By-law

At a meeting of the Ashburnham Civic Association the Committee charged with the organization of Ward 5, composed of R. B. Rogers, E. A. Peck, G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., E. Hennessey, George Gerard, R. H. Parsons, T. B. Maniece, A. A. Fowler, Ald. Smith, Ald. Weir, Robert Hamilton, G. L. Hay, James Drain, J. E. Ellis, D. Hennessey and John Devlin are leaving no stone unturned to get out the vote on the Bridge By-law on the 31st. Ald. Smith incidently stated at the meeting that for the last two by-laws which had to do with manufacturers locating in other wards of the city that Ashburnham gave a larger majority for the by-laws, according to population, than any other ward in the city.

The bridge is necessary and it also means that if it is built it paves the way for being erected in this city, the finest cereal mill in the world.

ANOTHER DOG GONE

Owner Neglected to Obey New Law, Offers to get Rid of it.

Charged with keeping a dog that had not been chained up nor muzzled or held on a leash "Nic" Blanco stated this morning that he would immediately have it destroyed. He promised to take it to the incinerator for the police to shoot at it, and according to recent assertions, none of the "finest" fires more than once.

LIEUT. HARRY LATIMER REVERTS TO RANKS TO GET OVERSEAS QUICKLY

Among a number of farewell messages to The Examiner from Peterborough boys with the 235th Battalion received yesterday and to-day, was one from Harry Latimer, one of the lieutenants of the 247th who left Peterborough with the draft to join Lieut.-Col. Scobell's battalion at Ottawa. He writes as follows: "Just a line to let you know that in order to be able to proceed overseas I was compelled to revert to the ranks, so here I am a private in the rear rank in the 235th. All the Peterborough boys are O.K., and send their regards." Private Latimer's letter was written on May 1st, but like other messages from Peterborough boys, was held up until the safe arrival of the 235th in England was announced. His action in throwing up his commission and going overseas as a private rather than return home when there was a surplus of officers, is just what his many friends would have expected of Mr. Latimer. The Examiner wishes him good luck and speedy promotion.

Rathwell's wife and four children reside in Norwood.

PTE. A. J. GRIER.

Pte. A. J. Grier, who enlisted here in November, 1915, with the 93rd Battalion, and went overseas with Lt.-Col. Johnston's unit, has been wounded, his name appearing in last night's list from Ottawa. Pte. Grier's relatives live in Tweed.

PTE. THOMAS THORNE.

DRIVER WM. PAYNE.

As announced yesterday Driver Wm. Payne of Peterborough has been wounded. Driver Payne has been at the front for over two years leaving Peterborough with the first artillery quota from this city in August 1914. The official message received by Mrs. Harriet Payne stated that he was admitted to the War Hospital at Huddersfield on April 23, suffering from a fracture of the fibula.

Word has been received that two former captains of the 93rd Battalion, Capt. Widdifield and Capt. Mowat, have arrived in France and are now at the front. Both reverted in rank and went to the front together.

His Honour Judge Huycke has received a cablegram in regard to his son, Lieut. Meredith Huycke, reported severely wounded a few days ago. The message stated that Lieut. Huycke had been wounded in the face, back and hip, but was resting comfortably.

Mrs. Haylock, 47 Ware street has received the following letter from Pte. Haylock, 21st Battalion, late of the 39th, who was wounded on the 17th of April.

"Now the first thing I want to ask you is not to worry about me, as I am safer here than in France, but I have a bad wound. I might as well tell you that I was shot through the lower jaw and throat and I am suffering very much. I cannot eat or drink. If I put anything in my mouth it runs out through my throat, and it was such a long time before I reached a hospital, I must have laid for eight or ten hours in a shell hole before they found me, and nearly bled to death, so please excuse this short letter. Will write again soon, as I am too weak to write any more, only give my best fondest love and kisses to my two little girls and tell them to be glad that the Germans did not get their daddy. My address at present,

AVIATOR PROMOTED.

Flight Lieutenant J. H. Drope, son of Mr. W. J. Drope, of Lake Lodge School, Grimsby, and formerly of Peterborough, has been promoted Captain and Flight Commander with a squadron of the Royal Flying Corps. He has been for two years in the air service, and his promotion is a deserved one. He was well known in Toronto as a cricketer before going overseas.

Although he has qualified for a commission as an artillery officer, Mr. Hollyman, of Toronto, has decided to join the 74th Peterborough Battery as a gunner in order to get a chance to go to the front. He telephoned from Toronto to Major Crocker asking to be taken on the strength of the battery. The 74th is attracting a splendid class of recruits, and the officers are hopeful of a ready response to their appeal in Peterborough.

Mrs. Geo. Coons, 559 Rogers street, has received a letter from Pte. J. Hartan, in which he says:

"Just a few lines thanking you ladies for the socks. I gave them to the Peterborough boys in the 4th Battalion and they were very glad to get them. I can say that we are well, although there were three of the boys from Peterborough wounded and one killed.

"Chi-namel" Has Host Of Uses in Household

The display of "Chi-namel" stains and varnishes at the Peterborough Hardware Store this week affords a reminder of the innumerable uses of these preparations, particularly during the spring decorating season. Miss Stevens of the Ohio Varnish Company, Cleveland, will continue her demonstrations to-morrow and on Saturday and ladies in particular will be assured of the success they may gain in their household uses of "Chi-namel." Miss Stevens is also showing "Shine Easy," a special polish for automobiles, and "Metal Glow" for brass and other metals.

CABINET CRISIS IN RUSSIA NOW CONSIDERED OVER

Government's Aim is Attainment of a General Peace Without the Conquest of Other Nations or the Annexation of Territory

A MILITARY CONFERENCE

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, May 17.—The Cabinet crisis may be considered as settled. A declaration of the government's policy, accepted by the representatives of the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates with merely verbal alterations, will be signed by both parties without delay. It has been decided to take into the Cabinet five representatives of different Socialist groups, which, with A. F. Kerensky, who assumes the war portfolio, will make a total of six of these groups sharing in the government. The government's aim is the attainment of a general peace without conquest of other nations, depriving them of their national sovereignty or their territory; in a word, peace without annexation or contributions, but believes firmly that revolutionary Russia will not permit the defeat of its allies in the west.

Generals Alexieff, Dragomiroff, Gurko and Brussiloff arrived in Petrograd to-day for a conference on the military situation. They declared the formation of a coalition ministry was indispensible, as it would make possible strong measures to re-establish discipline and the fighting spirit in the army.

Public Meeting To-morrow Night

Mrs. Weelard Will Address Meeting in Council Chamber—Ladies and Gentlemen Invited

As a part of the production campaign that is being waged throughout Ontario, the Poultry Association of this city has arranged for the presence here to-morrow night in the Council Chamber of Miss Weelard, from the poultry department of the Guelph Agricultural College, to address a meeting in the interests of poultry raising. Miss Weelard will show how it can be made profitable to raise good poultry in the back yards.

A full attendance of ladies and gentlemen interested in the greater production campaign and who are specially interested in poultry, are asked to be present. Mayor Duffus will preside.

PROSPECTS FAVOURABLE FOR CITY'S COAL SCHEME.

Mayor Duffus and Ald. Dobbin Opened Negotiations Yesterday.

Mayor Duffus and Ald. Dobbin returned from Toronto last night, where they opened negotiations for a supply of 3,000 tons of coal. They report a favourable reception, and the prospect is promising, but there will be nothing definite to report for some time.

NEGLECT IS NOT ECONOMY.

LETTER TO REDMOND

LONDON, May 16.—The British Prime Minister to-day sent a letter to John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalist party, outlining the Government's project for the settlement of the Home Rule question. He asked Mr. Redmond to state his views on the Government's suggestions in order that the Government may be able to consider the matter before Monday.

As soon as the Premier's proposals were available the Irish Unionists met to discuss the document. The Nationalists will hold a meeting on Thursday morning for the same purpose.

The Government, the letter set forth, have been desirous of effecting an immediate settlement which will concede the largest possible measure of Home Rule that can be secured by agreement at this moment, without prejudice to the undertaking by Parliament of a further and final settlement of the most disputed questions after the war.

Immediate Application of Act.

The Government's proposals provide for the introduction of a bill for the immediate application of the Home Rule act to Ireland, but excluding the six counties of north-east Ulster, such exclusion to be subject to reconsideration by Parliament at the end of five years; a Council of Ireland, to be composed of two delegations, representing the excluded area as well as the new Irish Parliament; consideration of the bill after its second reading by a special conference under the Chairmanship of some one commanding general confidence.

As an alternative, it is suggested by the Premier that a convention of Irishmen of all parties be assembled for the purpose of arranging a scheme of Irish self-Government.

CHOICE OF ALTERNATIVES NARROWED BY THE WAR

Premier Lloyd George's letter to Mr. Redmond follows:

"Dear Mr. Redmond: The Government have been considering for some time what further action they would take to bring about the settlement of the Irish question. They have approached the subject with a deep desire to put an end to a state of affairs which is productive of immense evil, not only to Ireland, but to Great Britain and the Empire.

"The choice of alternatives open to them, however, has been narrowed by the fact that it is impossible for them in the crisis of a war in which our safety and the liberty of most of the nations of Europe is at stake, to take action which would revive a violent political controversy, and, so, weaken or imperil the unity which is essential to the supreme necessity of winning the war. They have therefore felt that any settlement which they could propose during the war must be one which would be substantially accepted by both sides.

"They could have wished, in ac-

SUPPLY AND DEMAND.

It seems that there is a little rift in the argument that prices or wages are subject to the law of supply and demand. It is now claimed as an excuse for secrecy regarding pensions, that some employers cut down wages of soldier-employees if they learn that such men are in receipt of a good pension. If this is not accounted for by natural depravity, with a Hun bias, it must be that there is a plentiful supply of labour to permit of dismissing men at will. Give the soldier workmen a pension, which they deserve, and if employers make it the ground of discharge, give them a penalty—and a good stiff one, too.

SOMEBODY AT FAULT.

It is a little annoying sometimes to a preacher to find in his fold perhaps half-a-dozen different varieties of religious belief, and each variety clamouring for the right of way. How to harness these various forces so that they will pull the gospel chariot along without kicking it to pieces is a problem which many a minister has even now to solve.

No one can doubt that ministers are so often confronted with these differences of belief and difficulties of dealing with them. It may be that their troubles are inherited. They are perhaps, tangled in the tares whose seed was sown by their predecessors; or they may themselves be responsible somewhat for the harm they may have done themselves—the harm that is sure to follow in a religious communion where anything but the straight simple gospel is preached. We cannot find in the gospel as Christians universally accept it, and true preachers preach it, elements of schism. The Gospel is a bond. When a preacher departs from his divine brief and strays into the barren (of everything but trouble) fields of superfine theological hair-splitting, he may appeal to the minds of his hearers, but not to their hearts and souls; and the injection of little doubts in matters unimportant, and criticisms, opening the way to doubts on vital points of scripture, revelation and faith invite diversity of belief and unbelief. The plain Gospel message confirms faith and tends to make its hearers "of one heart and one mind." If any congregation contains "half a dozen different varieties of belief," there is something wrong somewhere, either with preachers or hearers, or perhaps with both to some extent. The wrong is not with religion, according to the Gospel, for that does not change in essence or in effect upon the lives of men. It is a sad truth that religion in practice, and popular attitude to it, have changed from, not long, past times. Preaching by preachers is not what it used to be, and practice has undergone a similar change. How would getting back to first principles do for both pulpit and pew?

VALUE OF SMALL SAVINGS.

When the Cent-a-Day Club, East City, was organized to help patriotic purposes—the Red Cross—not many, perhaps not even the members, hoped for much substantial result. Yet the givings were continued and increased month by month till the contributions—a cent at a time—for the month of April reached the respectable total of $45.27; and since the club was organized the total of the amounts contributed to the Red Cross funds has reached a figure of $1,258.87.

Here we have a lesson on the value of even small savings as a presently much needed lesson in thrift. High prices have set us thinking and acting in the direction of economy and many a household's enforced economy has taught her that by watching and avoiding little wastes, she can affect large saving, and at the same time feed her family as well as she had previously done, upon double the quantity of food, half wasted; carelessly and wastefully cooked, and served.

This is only one feature of domestic economy where a saving can be effected without noticeable detriment to the comfort of living. In personal expenditures there is still large room for economy. Frivolous pleasures, selfish indulgence in dress, little luxuries and amusements ,are not in these strenuous times, follies or faults so much as crimes.

This war and the conditions it has created or that go with it, have established a new standard of regard of our duties. The times demand the devotion of every unit of energy and means to object that will tend directly or indirectly in helping the cause of the country, the Empire and their allies: and it is sad to see the disregard of the demand of duty.

We see daily repetitions of the spirit expressed in the statement of "Nero fiddling while Rome burned." We see the Ontario government issuing charters to new racing companies, at a time when racing, race track gambling, and other waste of means and energy, are little short of crimes. Some persons have a sense of decency and propriety that furnishes examples to be imitated. The Toronto Young Men's Christian Association has decided in view of the circumstances, to withdraw all athletic teams, including baseball teams, and eleminate all competitive sport till after the war. It is recognized that the energy of the members is needed in higher work.

We should, and must, if we do our duty, limit our trifling pleasures and find in their stead, the nobler pleasure of working for our country and its cause. Thus we shall be both saving that we may serve, and serving to purpose, trifling as our service, rightly given and directed, may be. Small savings, by small self-denials, are elements in large results, and small services given by everybody will constitute a condition that represents the enlistment of everybody, in some way, in war time service with little individual, but great aggregate results.

FOOLING THE PEOPLE WITH FAIRY TALES.

The Ottawa Journal-Press is a government organ, but in some respects not a very good one as government organs usually go—"the whole hog"—in unthinking defence of every government action, good or bad; sometimes it breaks out and "slams" the government or some member of some department. But it is generally faithful to the government in the matter of its shortcomings in dealing with food conditions. It says:

"The high cost of living is mainly due to conditions over which the Canadian government has no control, and the problem of providing, even a modified remedy, seems almost hopeless in the circumstances."

One thing in the cited sentence is unfortunately too true—"the problem of providing even a modified remedy is hopeless." The problem is hopeless, because we have, judging from precedent, no hope of an honest government attempt to solve the problem; it is "hopeless" only because no earnest, honest attempt is made to find a solution. It is, however ,not true that the high cost of living is mainly due to "causes over which the government has on control." It is simply because the government fails to assume control, not because control is impracticable. The causes are controllable, if reasonable effort is made to control them.

It may truthfully be said that high prices and food shortage in Great Britain are due to "causes over which the government has no control"—the disorganization of shipping by submarine activity. But the British government does not act on the assumption that the causes are beyond control; it tries by heroic activity to control them, and if it does not succeed, then it controls the results — takes a firm grip of the food shortage problem and does something—it takes control, and prevents a difficult food situation from being disastrous.

But our government does nothing, when it has the power to do something. The master bakers of Toronto are demanding a food controller. As practical men, they recognize that the high prices which they are by government default of some kind, compelled to charge for bread, are subject to control. They demand the appointment of a food controller—a functionary the government could appoint. The government has power to have control over high prices to a large extent, if it would only act. But it does nothing effective. An order-in-council is passed to permit municipalities to do the government duty, without having the power for ready, prompt, easily applicable action. The Minister of Agriculture discovers, he says, surplus stores of food articles; but he doesn't raise a finger to bring them to the hands of the people. He is in this regard like the country swain who took his "girl" to a big political picnic. When dinner time came he absented himself, leaving his girl alone. He reinrned about an hour later, and said: "Sal, I can tell you where you can get a good dinner for 20 cents." He was better than the Minister. He told where the cheap dinner was to be had, but did not take his "girl" to it. The Minister tells us that there are plenty of materials to give the people cheaper dinners, but doesn't tell us where they are or how to find them. "Causes over which the government has no control!" Nonsense; they have no control because they take no steps to get some measures of control and some measure of relief. The people are getting tired of high prices, and the government's idle excuses for not dealing with them. Hungry people that hunger for relief from high food prices won't stand a steady diet of fairy tales.

CHANCELLOR STILL FOLLOWS HUN POLICY OF FOOLING GERMAN PEOPLE

Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg made a clever speech in the Reichstag yesterday, but a speech nevertheless in which he set at defiance the people of Germany. In effect he told the German nation that the objects of the war on Germany's part were known only to the German Government, that the Government did not think fit to confide those aims to the people, and that blind obedience to the orders of their superiors was Germany's only hope of salvation. He decorated this bald announcement with a lot of cunning sophistry designed to deceive the people into believing that the war is progressing according to the plans of the German War Office.

From the point of view of the Junker class, this speech was probably the wisest which he could have made under the circumstances. The truth is that the Chancellor, who is the recognized spokesman of the Kaiser, dare not state the war aims of the German Government. To lay down those terms would be a direct invitation to a revolution in Germany, either from disappointment at the utter failure of the war which those terms would reveal, or from indignation at a programme of conquest which the German nation is obviously unable to carry out.

From the outsider's point of view, it is noticeable that there is much less bombast about this speech than about any previous war speech of the Chancellor. He does not talk at the Entente Allies in the terms of an insolent conqueror. At the same time, he still assumes the pose of victory, claiming that Germany has demonstrated her ability to defeat the aims of the Allies, and that when they recognize this, Germany is perfectly willing that they shall come to her and sue for peace. The fact of the matter is that the German Junkers are in a position from which they dare not retreat. Victory or downfall —it must be one or the other for them. And victory now would be for the Allies to sue for a patched-up peace. That would be a disaster for civilization. The military power of Germany must be overthrown.

ARREST PREACHER IN MURDER OF EIGHT

DES MOINES, Iowa—The Rev. George J. Kelly, an itinerant preacher, was arrested at Red Oak, following his indictment on a charge of murdering Joseph Moorse, Moore's wife, four children and two young women who were guests at the Moore home of Villisca, Iowa., on May 9, 1912. The eight victims were slain with an axe as they slept.

Kelly was a student at the Omaha Theological Seminary at the time the murders were committed. He supplied country pulpits at Villisca and at Macedonia, Iowa, a small town not far away, on alternate Sundays.

On the night of the murders he was a guest of a Presbyterian clergyman at Villisca and, it is alleged, left the house at an early hour in the morning, going to Macedonia.

In Macedonia he is alleged to have told of the Moore murders before the crime became known to the authorities at Villisca.

EXCITING BATTLE

CASHIERS YIELD LIVES DEFENDING MONEY, AND BANDITS SECURED BOOTY FOR A TIME.

Three men were killed and five wounded at Castle Shannon, a suburb of Pittsburg, soon after noon yesterday, when an attempt was made to rob the First National Bank of Castle Shannon.

D. E. McClean, cashier, and his assistant, Frank Erbe, were at work in the bank when four men entered and ordered them to throw up their hands. The robbers began shooting immediately and both bankers fell. They then gathered up all the money in sight and ran into the street where an automobile awaited them.

George Beltzhoover, a magistrate, who had heard the shooting, caught up a shotgun and reached the bank just as the men emerged. He raised his gun to fire and discovered it was unloaded. One of the bandits fired at him and another knocked him down with a bag of money. They then ran to the automobile. Two jumped in and were driven away by the man in charge of the machine, while the other two ran toward the Castle Shannon Golf Club nearby. They were pursued by a number of people and finally cornered one of the robbers being killed and the other escaping.

Meanwhile a posse had followed the others, and in a short time overtook them at Bridgeville, ten miles away.

"Joe" Leiter of Wheat Fame Has Come Back

"Joe" Leiter, who with his father, is reputed to have lost $10,000,000 in trying to corner the world's wheat supply in 1898, has "come back" in May wheat, it is reported from Chicago.

Leiter's earnings in the last few months are estimated at $3,000,000 by persons in close touch with wheat pit operations. He is said to have been secretly in the market since Aug. 2, 1916, when May wheat sold at $1.37. Thursday it reached $3.15, the highest figure in history.

Acting on a tip that the Government would intervene in the food situation, Leiter is said to have been selling recently at enormous profits.

NEW ZEALAND'S BIG QUOTA.

One in 14 of Population Sent to War —First Reserve Almost Gone.

WELLINGTON, N. Z., May 14. — New Zealand claims the distinction of having contributed more men for the war in proportion to the population than any other part of the British Empire except England and Scotland.

Official figures show that New Zealand's contribution to the British Empire's military forces has been 80,493 men out of a population of 1,160,000, or one in fourteen. More than 10,000 horses have been sent to the front by this dominion.

Under the Military Service Act, a measure providing for compulsory service to supplement the volunteers, the first reserve, consisting of single men and men who married after May 1915, will be exhausted about August. The second reserve, consisting of married men, will then be drawn upon.

Colonel James Allen, the Minister of Defense, said lately of the working of the act:

"New Zealand reinforcements have gone forward without a break at the strength arranged with the imperial authorities. There has been no omission, no check, no alteration."

MELBOURNE, May 14. — Medals are to be issued by the Commonwealth Government to the nearest woman relatives of soldiers of the Australian Expeditionary Force by way of recognition of the war sacrifices made by women of Australia. The medals will be worn with ribbons and bars. A mother who has given seven sons for the war will receive a medal with a bar for each son. In families where a mother has given a son and a wife has given her husband, the wife will have the medal.

A Modern Venus Finds Herself

Checkered Career of Miss Madge North, the Rage of New York Artists

"A modern Venus," say the sculptors.

"Faultless in form and features," "a veritable Diana," "the personification of grace," declare painters, illustrators and photographers.

Leading members of all four branches of New York art circles are paying tribute to Miss Madge North, an English girl who less than three months ago had never seen the inside of an artist's studio and whose 'posing" had been confined to two experiences—the first at the age of three months for the family album and the second when she was graduated from school and stood in the "class picture." Upon neither occasion, according to Miss North, did the English protographer comment upon her faultless form and features or upon Diana or Venus. It remained for Madge North to be "discovered in America."

Seeking her fortune, this Yorkshire lass came to the United States a little less than a year ago. She had just been "finished" at a fashionable school for young ladies in London, and had returned to her home in the north country.

Her Hero Killed in Battle.

Two younger sisters were still in school. Every marriageable man was doing his duty for his country, and there was one in particular who had performed his last duty on the battle field at Ypres.

Perhaps this last was the particular reason that led Miss Madge North to emigrate to a strange land, under circumstances peculiar to an English girl of gentle—that is to say conventional—birth and breeding.

As a governess she came to New York.

"There were no two ways about it," she said the other day. "I felt I had to get to the United States, and I know n ther oughtn't to afford my passage money. So I worked my way over. I acted as nursery governess to two little boys, Americans, whose parents were eager to get out of the war zone.

"I had never been away from home before, except to school; I had a very little money, and no definite thought about what I should do once I landed. Mother expected me to go to Washington where she had friends but I had no idea of booking them up. I was coming to America to make my own way."

She had expected to bid adieu to her employers when the vessel reached the pier, and to set forth seeking her fortune in blissful freedom. But after an encounter with immigration officials she found that she could not remain in the country sponsored, and unconnected. So she was forced back upon her two young charges and went to New Jersey to be introduced anew as an "English governess."

Meantime, however, she had decided upon a career. On board the vessel, when she had once sung at a recital, a woman teacher of music declared that she possessed a "pure contralto voice of operatic quality." So enthusiastic was this teacher that she offered to train and coach Miss North without charge. So a few months' incarceration as governess slipped quickly by, and midsummer found an eager young passenger, with music case and an English accent, aboard the train for Nashville, Tenn.

But it was a nurse who greeted Miss North at the Nashville station, and she announced, "Your friend is ill and has sent me to take you home in this cab." The illness of the music teacher made Miss North an opportune guest, for it soon developed upon her to take charge of her hostess's studio and classes during a long siege that ended in Phoenix, Ariz., for the patient.

As church soloist Miss North existed for a time in Nashville, and out of a benefit concert she earned enough to take her to Washington. Here a recital was arranged for her in the New Willard, under the patronage of Lady Ross, Mrs. Benjamin F. Tillman and other women in society. The concert seemed to be successful, and a woman manager offered to arrange a New York debut. So it was this that really brought Miss Madge North to New York again.

Read "Help Wanted" Ads.

Before she was there a week she abandoned arrangements for a concert appearance. "Why," she said, "this woman manager thought I could appear on the same circuits with such singers as McCormack and Gluck. Ridiculous! But I had spent my last penny before I realised this."

Then, utterly alone for the first time in her experience and quite without money, Miss North set out in grim earnest to seek her fortune.

She answered "Help Wanted" advertisements for everything from amanuenses to suit and cloak models—which she finally became, at intervals. She had her voice "tried out" for practically every chorus in New York and applied for many a position in the films. A chance acquaintance made in one of the "movies" employment offices asked her if she had ever posed for fashion pictures. She made immediate application and was accepted.

Fashion [illegible] recommended her to photographers, who in turn sent her to illustrators, and so on from portrait painters to sculptors. As a per[illegible] went forth from one studio to another.

Posing Not Easy.

Success has come to her so sensationally, and from such an unexpected source, that Miss North has not yet had time to take breath, so to speak. She likes her work because it makes her a living, because she is interested in art and because she has found American artists "the finest lot of men ever." But posing is not at all easy, she declared. Then there are conscience qualms about a little mother in England, who could ne[illegible] be told that her daughter posed for painters and sculptors.

"Still, a lady can be a lady anywhere," Miss North has discovered. "It seems to me any work can be made noble and dignified, if one holds it so. I'm very happy in my work; and I like America, of course. It's so—unexpected. You come here seeking your fortune—and having landed as a nursery governess, you plunge into everything from music studio drudge and nurse, church soloist, concert singer and cloak model—to wind up in a sculptor's studio, where you are pronounced a modern Venus. What an exciting country!"

MAJOR J. C. DAVIDSON DESCRIBES A VISIT TO THE CANADIAN LINES

Former Chaplain of the 93rd Battalion Came Across the Grave of Lieut. G. N. Milburn—Met Number of Peterborough Boys in the Artillery and Infantry—An Interesting Letter From Well Known Peterborough Citizen.

The following most interesting letter from Major J. C. Davidson, formerly chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, and now on duty in France, has been received by the Examiner:

No. 3 Canadian Stationary Hospital,
B.E.F., France, April 26, 1917.

Sir,—It has struck me that Peterborough citizens would be interested to hear of a brief visit to a small part of the Canadian lines, even though so many other letters deal with this subject. On Monday morning, 23rd, I started out with rations and other necessities in my haversack. I soon met an ambulance loaded with medical supplies for field hospitals, and after a circuitous journey was set down at Beaumets, some 18 to 20 miles from here and not far from Arras.

Striking off across the country and calling for tea at a Corps Divisional Headquarters, I reached No. 19 Casualty Clearing Station, where three big field hospitals are grouped together, at 7 p.m. A fierce action was in progress on the adjacent line from which the wounded were arriving in hundreds. Two most interesting hours were spent in the operating theatre, where all kinds of operations were witnessed. The whole floor of the long receiving room was covered with stretchers which were gradually sorted out for the beds, the nearby hospital train or for operation. In quick succession the latter were placed on one of the four tables, beside which stood the surgeon, the anaesthetist, nursing sister and orderly. Though I had of course seen something of this performed in an ordinary way, this high-pressure, wholesale kind of work was new to me. I could not but greatly admire the extreme rapidity, easy confidence and evident efficiency which marked it. During that night the four expert surgeons (who had taken the places of four others) operated on some 60 most varied cases, and bullets and shrapnel coming out of all sorts of lurking places. I was kindly given the bed of one of the doctors, though sleep was out of the question with the terrific and incessant roar of the guns. Once or twice a shell came whistling over the hospital and great holes gaped nearby next morning.

By 8 a.m. I was off again, crossing the fenceless fields in a north-easterly direction. It was a beautiful, cloudless day, the bombardment had ceased, and the birds were singing as if there was no war. High up in front was the majestic monastery ruin on the top of Mt. St. Eloi, dominating the whole countryside. On the right 2 captive balloons overlooked the enemy's line, while a German air craft high in the sky, was being fired at by our batteries, little white puffs of smoke appearing in succession all around it without effect.

Lieut. Milburn's Grave.

At the foot of Mt. St. Eloi I came to a large military cemetery, into which I went in search of Canadian graves, which were all too easily found. And suddenly I stood sorrow-stricken before the newly-made grave of my old 93rd comrade Lieut. G. N. Milburn, beside whom I had sat at mess in the old camp days. I felt that I represented many relatives, comrades and friends, when I reverently saluted, offering instinctively a prayer for a soldier and a man, a stalwart, rugged and true. I managed to find a few little wild flowers and laid them on his grave like those close to his far away Canadian home. By a strange co-incidence his standard cross had that very morning been replaced by a larger painted cross, probably erected by brother officers. With the reluctant permission of the caretaker I took the tin inscription off the former (which he undertook to replace if necessary) and send it with this for his family. It will also show the uniform way in which crosses are marked everywhere, and will be an unusual and unique memento.

I also made notes of other Canadian graves—Lt. J. J. Doble, 116th (Ont. Co.), Lt. Eric Dennis, 2nd; Lt. G. B. Bullodland, 19th; Pte. G. A. Dunk, 1st; Pte. Peter Thompson, 2nd, and others. It is a large and well kept cemetery, indeed tender care is taken with all the resting places of Britain's heroic dead.

The wooded crest of Mt. St. Eloi I found deserted, except by a salvage lorry which took me through the trenches from which the great Canadian advance had been made on Easter Monday, and on to the lines of several Canadian batteries, 2nd division, near Vimy Ridge. My first greeting was from a Toronto man who had attended my mission services at St. Cyprian's. "I'm pretty well fagged," he said, "but now that I see you here looking so spry, I feel more like sticking it out!"

Met Peterborough Boys.

Calling for Peterborough men, Gunner Joseph Hagerman, 18 Dixon street, responded, followed by Farrier Sergt. Harry Gamble, 467 Chamberlen street. Then along came our well known citizen soldier, Sergt. Maj. G. W. Allen, 665 Chamberlen street, who piloted me around, and Sergt. J. M. Allan. Each of these men looked in the best of health, though Sergt.-Maj. Allen seems to be still a bit troubled by his nerves. But they can't be wholly bad to stand even the crashing explosions and din in progress during my visit. This activity prevented me seeing Lt. Hilliard, of Lakefield, who was reported in good health on duty at a nearby battery in action. The Germans too had got the range, and I saw three shells fall quite close, and many others a little farther off, and one beside the Y.M.C.A. tent. It was my first experience under fire and one was helped by the infectious atmosphere of casual indifference among the men and was not so terrifying as might be imagined. The 42nd, 43rd and P.P.L.I's were camped alongside and the Argyll and S. farther on.

After an unsuccessful effort to find three nephew gunners I left the camp, hearing the 1st and 2nd Batteries were camped a mile or two away. It proved, however, to be only their transport lines, but I came across that young star soldier, Corp. O. Brooks, M.M., (whom I was delighted to congratulate), and Corp. Dan Connolly, 367 Rogers street, both in fine health.

The day was now wearing away and a lorry drive brought me to Arras, which must have been a handsome city, with large public squares and fine buildings, now more or less wrecked. The cathedral is a huge mass of ruins, retaining, however, a certain dignity, and the city is apparently still inhabited by a fairly large population, including British soldiers. The line, which ran close alongside, has now retired, but the city is still under fire and the noise is very loud at present. I did not remain in the city, however, having the chance to be hurried back at a break neck speed in the side car of a friendly despatch rider, reaching my hospital before dark, completely tired out, but thankful for preservation during a two days' satisfactory and worth while expedition.

Thanks For Citizens.

While I am writing I gladly seize the opportunity to offer my deep gratitude for the generous interest taken in our hospital by Peterborough cities and citizens. Thanks to this generosity one of our big buildings is equipped with neat green blinds, the beds of an annex are covered with Peterborough quilts, clearly marked, while I am delighted to sleep under another handsome autograph quilt with 700 names of our people, among which I am daily coming across new ones, and all this in addition to numerous individual gifts. It is all most cheering. This hospital is now far better furnished than when I first saw it in comparative nakedness.

Among our patients we had for a time Lt. Hughes Charles, C.P.R. contractor, who had the patriotism and pluck to come over as a sapper in the C.P.R. corps, who received gradual and merited promotion and is a most popular officer. Major Osler of Toronto was also here and last week Col. Earchman, late of Port Perry, and Major A. Colville, of Campbellford, dined with us. As a rule, however, we see little of Canadians who are not in the 5th Army, our work being among Imperial officers, N.C.O's and men, as one small part of Canada's privileged contribution to the Empire.

W. J. BRYAN THE TOOL OF PRO-GERMAN GANG

UNWITTINGLY THE INSTRUMENT OF MEN SEEKING MUNITIONS EXPORT EMBARGO.

NEW YORK. — William Jennings Bryan unwittingly became the tool of David Lamar in furtherance of the German scheme to prevent the flow of munitions to the allies, according to Lamar, who occupied the stand for most of another day in the Federal District Court at the trial of himself and six others on a charge of violating the Sherman Act.

After reading the statement issued by Mr. Bryan immediately after his resignation as Secretary of State, Lamar said that it had occurred to him that Bryan could become a most powerful ally in the cause espoused by Labor's National Council, if the proper views against the manufacture of munitions by private individuals could be instilled into the ex-Secretary's mind.

WON OVER COMPLETELY.

This resulted, he said, in the plan of sending Frank Buchanan, then Congressman, and later President of Labor's National Peace Council, to Washington to see Secretary Bryan before he left the city after his resignation.

"He was won over completely," said Lamar, "to the idea that taking the profit out of war was one of the finest, shortest ways of making war impossible."

In order to make sure that the views alleged to have been newly implanted in Mr. Bryan should have their first proclamation to the public under the most favorable circumstances Lamar said that he had planned the great peace demonstration which was held at Carnegie Hall on June 19, 1915, by the Central Federated Union, and which was addressed by Mr. Bryan. Lamar said that he had induced Martin to suggest to Ernest Bohm, the Secretary of the Central Federated Union, that if the Central Federated Union would call this meeting, Frank Buchanan would probably be able to induce Mr. Bryan to be present.

All this took place, Lamar said, as it had been planned.

THE CAUSE OF INDIGESTION

Thin blooded people generally have stomach trouble. But they seldom recognise the fact that thin blood is the cause of their indigestion, but it is.

This blood is one of the most common causes of stomach trouble; it affects the digestion very quickly. The glands that furnish the digestive fluids are diminished in their activity, the stomach muscles are weakened and there is a loss of nerve force. In this state of health nothing will more quickly restore the appetite, digestion and normal nutrition than good, rich, red blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills act directly on the blood, making it rich and red, and this enriched blood strengthens weak nerves, stimulates tired muscles, and awakens to normal activity the glands that supply the digestive fluids. The first sign of returning health is an improved appetite, and soon the effect of these blood-making pills is evident throughout the whole system. You find that what you eat does not distress you, and that you are strong and vigorous instead of irritable and listless. You are on the road to sound, good health and care in your diet is all you need. If your appetite is fickle, if you have any of the distressing pains and symptoms of indigestion you should begin to cure yourself at once by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

These pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or you can get them by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LONDON, May 17.— British troops in Macedonia have made an important advance on the Doiran front and captured the village of Kjapri on the Struma front, it is announced officially. Advanced trenches on a front of 3,000 yards south-west of Ernekeui also have been captured.

Eat And Sow Beans Save The Potatoes

BETTER FOOD VALUE AT PRICE AND TEN TIMES VALUE FOR PLANTING.

OTTAWA. — The Agricultural Department has issued the following advice:

"The enthusiasm displayed generally in the matter of planting potatoes is only equalled by the enthusiasm with which potato prices are climbing up. It now costs from $45 to $50 for seed to plant an acre of potatoes. It is obvious that at these prices potatoes do not give a sufficient food value. Housekeepers would do well to eliminate the potato and turn to more economic foods, and by such elimination, leave that much more seed to be planted for the much needed crop this year. In the scarcity of potatoes it would be well for planters to turn to the question of beans. The same money that will plant an acre of potatoes, if invested in beans, will provide seed for more than ten acres. They are not only an excellent and nutritious form of food, but it looks as if they will continue to be in strong demand for army supplies and companies with army contracts are offering as high as $5 a bushel for this year's crop. Soil that is suitable for potatoes is generally also suitable for beans."

PIN THIS UPON WIFE'S DRESSER

Warns Women Against Cutting Corns and Says They Lift Right Out.

Because style decrees that women crowd and buckle up their tender toes in high heel footwear they suffer from corns, then they cut and trim at these painful pests which merely makes the corn grow hard. This suicidal habit may cause lockjaw and women are warned to stop it.

A few drops of a drug called freezone applied directly upon a sore corn gives quick relief and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out without pain. Ask the drug store man for a quarter of an ounce of freezone, which costs very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

This drug is gummy but it dries in a moment and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

DISCUSS TELEPHONE RATES.

Traffic Interchange Considered by Ottawa Committee.

OTTAWA, May 16.—The committee which is revising the railway act had a long discussion this morning in regard to the demands of the independent companies for the elimination of the extra charges for long distance calls emanating from their lines for an interchange of local traffic between the independent and the Bell Company. The new railway act provides for long distance connection on equal terms, when the companies are non-competing. In the case of competitive lines there is a surcharge.

Mr. Dagger, of the telephone branch of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board, supported the contention of the independent companies and urged joint control of telephone matters by the Provincial Commission and the Dominion Railway Board. The proposal did not meet with much favour.

Mr. Dagger said that the Ontario Government felt that there should be no increase in the cost of long distance messages. Mr. Aime Geoffrion appeared for the Bell Telephone Co. He said that the Bell Company was willing to give local connection to all but competitive concerns.

Wheat Wasted By the Millers

Government Should Compel Manufacture of Whole Wheat Flour as a War Measure.

TORONTO, May 17.—Over 3,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat could be saved annually if millers were to cease the production of white flour, and instead, roll out the whole wheat in one uniform mixture, according to C. J. Lovell, a Winnipeg financial broker, formerly of this city.

"White flour is too much of a luxury in war times," said Mr. Lovell. "Millers could save thousands of dollars in labour and machinery which is necessary to separate the white flour from the bran. At the present time most of the coarser parts of the wheat berry are used for animal feed, although it is very palatable and fit for human consumption. In fact, whole wheat bread is recommended by the leading physicians."

PRUSSIANS' PRISONERS THRASHED WITH WHIPS

With the British Armies in France —Three British soldiers, who succeeded in escaping from a German prison camp a few miles back of the fighting lines, tell a pitiable story of their treatment by the enemy. They declared there was a great deal of illness in the camp due to fatigue and starvation.

"If we showed the slightest disposition to go ill," said one of the men, "we were either thrashed with whips or struck with the butt end of a rifle."

Although this soldier had been in many hands only three months he had dropped in weight from 182 pounds to 108. He was a living skeleton. His feet had been frozen and were gangrenous for lack of treatment. The men had neither overcoats nor blankets during the coldest weather. When captured during a raid they wore leather jackets. These the Germans took away from them immediately. They also stripped the rubber lining from their shrapnel helmets and took away their regimental badges for the brass that was in them.

One of the men during the perilous trip across No Man's Land at the end of the escape, was badly wounded. For food the prisoners received daily a quarter loaf of bread, one plate of thin soup and about every second day a cup of weak coffee substitute. On a few occasions they had a bit of meat about the size of a lump of sugar. Recently the men were compelled to work so near the front that they came under shell fire from the British guns. This was an exceptional instance, however, they said.

The French prisoners, on the other hand, are constantly employed just back of the firing line and suffer many casualties. In the camp, however, the French prisoners were better treated than the English. It was strange to hear this story in view of the sleek appearance of the German prisoners in English hands, all well fed, well nourished, paid for their bits of labour and permitted to buy comforts at the canteens under the same conditions as the Tommies.

Some Wonderful Scenes in The "Crisis"

It Is Drawing Enormous Crowds —Appears In Peterborough Before Toronto

The tumble of an army officer and his horse down a steep hillside, rolling over and over each other, is the most thrilling individual bit of business in "The Crisis," that is to be shown at the Grand Opera House on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next.

It occurs during the battle of Vicksburg. The officer is stationed on his horse on the top of the hill observing the enemy, when a hostile cannon trained on him brings horse and man down.

There is no "faking" in the fall as shown on the screen. The hero is Tom Mix, world famous for his thrilling stunts in the "movies." He was brought all the way from Los Angeles studios of the Selig Company to Vicksburg for this one bit of business, consuming less than half a minute.

Tom Mix first became known as a dare-devil in the Spanish-American War, when, as a member of Col. Roosevelt's famous rough riders he outstripped most of his comrades in the famous dash up San Juan Hill. His bravery attracted Roosevelt's attention, and the two have been great friends ever since. Before the war was over, Mix had risen to the rank of Major. In days of peace in the Far West, hardly less strenuous than war days, Mix served for a time as a United States Marshall.

With the development of the "movies," however, Tom Mix found his forte. As a "stunt" man he is in a class all by himself. He has been the hero of many a daring ride and hair-breadth leap that has brought the heart of the spectator into the mouth. In addition to money and glory, Mix can exhibit, as a result of his work, a dislocated wrist, a broken arm, a dent in the breast bone, numerous scars from gashed flesh, and lighter scars from innumerable bruises. The only accident he has been in that he did not plan was a collision of his automobile with a switch engine, from which he escaped with only a few minor scratches.

AN INDUCEMENT.

He—"So you insist on breaking off the engagement?"

She—"Most decidedly. What do you take me for,"

He—"Oh, about 40. Better think it over it may be your last chance."—Stray Stories.

Weather Not Hot Enough For Oil

Besides City's Supply For Streets Has Not Yet Arrived

Complaints that dust is becoming a nuisance on the streets have been growing more persistent of late from citizens who claim that the city's street oiling work is already overdue. It is pointed out by the aldermen, however, that the weather has been too cold to permit the free running of oil and that the operation must be suspended until real summer weather arrives, likewise a supply of oil. Mayor Duffus remarked that if the first shipment of the city's order had been received demurrage would have to be paid on it until the storage tank is installed. Hence, there is no immediate relief from the dust unless the Weather Man turns the facet wide open and forgets about it for a while.

They do not expect that the experiment will be a financial success but do it to further production.

How to Rid the Skin Of Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty.)

A simplified method is here given for the quick removal of hairy or fuzzy growths and rarely is more than one treatment required: Mix a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every hair has vanished. This simple treatment cannot cause injury, but care should be exercised to get real delatone

Tea Market Short; Prices Stand Firm

MR. P. C. LARKIN EXPLAINS GENERAL TEA TRADE CONDITION; SCONSUMING PUBLIC ASKED NOT TO BUY TOO HEAVY.

The report from New York that the tea market has become more active on account of the possible imposition of a ten per cent. ad valorem tax by the United States Government, is taken seriously by the tea buyers in Toronto. The report would give the impression that there are large quantities of tea on hand, whereas the supplies on this side of the Atlantic are at a very low ebb. There is a scarcity of British-grown tea at New York, and the active blying might mean higher prices.

"I don't think you could buy 3,000 chests of British-grown tea in New York, if you would offer sixty a pound for it," declared Mr. P. C. Larkin of the Salada Tea Company. "And I doubt if you could purchase 1,000 chests of Ceylon tea if you were to offer eighty cents a pound for it. The amount of the importations of British-grown tea at this juncture, is only a quarter of the tea being consumed.

COMMON TEAS HIGH.

Mr. Larkin further pointed out that The New York Journal of Commerce quotations for the commonest kinds of tea are fifty and fifty-one cents a pound, and he doubted if even a hundred chests could be bought even at that price.

The Canadian importers are only receiving a "mere tittle" of the amount of tea they imported in pre-war days, and before the British government enforced its embargo on the British exports in March. The Salada Tea Company needs over 2,000 chests a week to meet their demand, but the company gets them in a few hundred at a time. There are about seven ships on the way just now with apportionments ranging from 500 to 2,00 chests, which are away below the normal supply.

"We never know what is going to happen," declared Mr. Larkin, "but providing that conditions do not get worse than they are just now, I do not see a rise in prices, but with the world in such a turmoil, and the possibility of loss of more tonnage, and unexpected embargoes, we have to live from day to day and endeavor to keep prices normal. The average imported is facing conditions with equanimity, for he finds that he can effect little. Once upon a time he used to get flushed up if there was a change of an eighth of a cent in freights, or a cent a pound in tea; to-day he hardly notices an increase of three to five cents a pound.

PRICES AT PRESENT LEVEL

Regarding the possibility of prices remaining at their present level, providing nothing untoward happens, Mr. Larkin declared that "very often the tea and other dealers are forced to increase their prices, because of the unreasonableness of the retailers and consumers."

"If the people would buy the usual quantities needed for consumption, they would offer the dealers a great deal of assistance in keeping down prices, because when a rush is made on a weak market the tendency is to increase prices," he said. "There is nothing to be gained by storing up large quantities of tea which deteriorates if not used. So far as we are concerned, we can carry a normal trade for several months, in the hope of an improvement in conditions later on.

"Anyway the Canadian consumer is being well served just now. Tea is being sold cheaper in Canada than in any other tea-consuming country in the world. If it were not for the package tea in Canada to-day the cheapest would be $1 a pound."

Prisoners Of War Receive Parcels

TORONTO, May 16. — Mr. Noel Marshall, president of the Red Cross Society, received advice yesterday from Mrs. E. Rivers-Bulkely, chairman of the Prisoners of War Committee in England, that 7,000 parcels had been acknowledged as received by the prisoners of war in Germany during the last week. Mr. Marshall also received assurances from Sir George Perley, regarding the despatch of parcels to Canadian boys in the prison camps of Germany. The parcels now go by mail in British mail boats and there will be no recurrence of the delays caused previously by the uncertainty of the sailing of neutral shipping.

The English committee have also advised the Canadian soldiers held in Germany that in future three parcels valued at ten shillings, would be forwarded every two weeks, this being the maximum allowance under the new regulations. In addition to the parcels, 13 pounds of bread will be sent every two weeks to each of the prisoners but no assigned pay will be drawn in future by the Prisoners of War Committee for food parcels.

Triumph in War Greater Than Party Success

N. W. Rowell, M.P.P., Asks that Politics be Sunk in Effort to Achieve Victory.

CANADA NEEDS WAR GOVERNMENT.

NORTH BAY, Ont., May 16. — N. W. Rowell M.P.P., Liberal leader in Ontario, addressing the Canadian Club to-day, declared that all patriotic citizens should repudiate the view that either political party should, for fear of imperilling party position, hesitate to adopt measures that appeared to be urgent and essential to Canada's full participation in the war.

"Surely after nearly three years of war," exclaimed Mr. Rowell, "the time has come for us to realise that this issue is vastly bigger than any party or all parties combined. What matters it if parties fall so long as Canada and liberty live and the great democracies triumph in their struggle against autocracy? Do you see any prospect of our being able to do in Canada what none of the Dominions of our allies have so far been able to do, namely, to adequately meet the situation with a purely party Government and to administer the great affairs of the war on a party basis?

"Do you see any hope of our moveing forward as a united nation, exerting our utmost efforts to win the war and grappling courageously with our own domestic problems, unless we also create a war Government which will command the confidence of the whole people, which will have the moral authority to adopt the measures necessary to meet the present critical situation, and which will move courageously and quickly along the path of duty, irrespective of personal or party consideration? Is not this Canada's present and most urgent need?

THE COST OF GETTING NEWS

It cost the Associated Press, serving over 1,000 daily and Sunday newspapers, $3,189,781 to present the world's events during the busiest news year on record—1916. Although handling much greater volume than ever before the cost of operating the service of the world's greatest news association was cut down by a reduction in telegraph rates.

Cable tolls were a very heavy item of expense not only for the 'A.P.' but for the other news gathering organizations and newspapers with their own correspondents abroad.

New services were opened up during the year whereby American news will be served direct to newspapers in South America countries and through which papers in the United States may receive happenings from Argentine and Brazil direct instead of through London as heretofore.

Arrangements were also made for sending American news direct to the Far East rather than having a European version of our affairs served to the Chinese and Japanese readers.

Fire Raging Near Haliburton

LINDSAY, May 17.—A bad fire is raging east of the village of Haliburton, caused, it is understood, by parties starting a small fire in a clearing. Fortunately the wind is blowing to the north, thus saving the Village from danger.

The fire has been raging since Monday, and on Tuesday a call for volunteers to fight the flames was sent into the village.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS CURE CONSTIPATION

Childhood constipation can be promptly cured by Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets never fail to regulate the bowels and stomach thus curing constipation, colic, indigestion and many other minor ills of little ones. Concerning them Mrs. Louis Nicole, St. Paul du Buton, Que., writes:—"My baby suffered from constipation but thanks to Baby's Own Tablets he is a fine healthy boy to-day. It gives me much pleasure in recommending the Tablets to other mothers." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Not to Blame.—"I understand the Grabitall estate is very large." Lawyer (apologetically)—"Yes, it is, but you see, I have had charge of it such a short time."

THE BATTLE OF VICKSBURG—A wonderful scene in "The Crisis," founded on Winston Churchill's famous story, which will be presented at "The Grand" the first three days of next week with Matinee on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Labour Council To Urge Action In Establishing A Fuel Yard

The Trades and Labour Council want action and not delay behind the movement to establish a civic coal yard in Peterborough. At their meeting last night they decided to wait on the City Council and urge the necessity of grappling in earnest with this project that a large supply of coal and wood may be secured for this city. There is an impression among the labour men that the City Council is not sufficiently moved by the seriousness with which this question is regarded by the people. They are afraid that the Council will drift through the summer months without exerting their full strength to reach the markets and arrange for winter supplies. Hence, they will ask the Mayor to call a meeting at which they purpose to urge upon the Council to act with as much expedition and force as the city can command. It is hoped that the restricted detailing of last winter may be avoided this year by united action during the summer months.

In justice to Mayor Duffus and the Aldermen it might be interpolated that they were in Toronto yesterday and opened up a source of assistance which they believe will afford the city the relief desired. But, it is understood, that there will be no material results evident for a month or more.

THE WIN-THE-WAR CONVENTION PROMISES TO BE GREAT SUCCESS

The programme for the Win-the-War convention at Montreal has been completed, and promises to be a very attractive one, and one that will make history. The Executive Committee, composed of members from all the Provinces, will meet in Montreal on Monday morning next, when they, together with any other delegates to the Convention, will become the guests of the Province of Quebec, and will be taken in automobiles over the new Quebec—New York highway to the city of Three Rivers. This will be the inauguration of this new highway, of which the Province of Quebec is so justly proud of—just a lap ahead of the Province of Ontario in this respect.

The first meeting of the Executive will be held on the afternoon of Monday, when an outline programme for the convention will be decided upon.

A banquet will be given in the evening by the City of Three Rivers. On Tuesday the trip in automobiles will be continued to the City of Quebec, where the party will be the guests of the City of Quebec.

The second meeting of the Executive will be held in the afternoon, and a banquet in the evening. The party will return later in the evening by the Montreal—Quebec boat, arriving in Montreal on Wednesday, in time for the opening of the Convention on Wednesday morning. The railways will grant the usual reduction rates for all conventions numbering over three hundred which is one fare return. Any person desiring to attend the convention as a delegate can do so by applying to Mr. Frank Dobbin at the Patriotic rooms on Simcoe street, who will give the necessary certificates for the convention. Of course, in voting at the convention each Province will have a proportionate vote according to population.

Clarence Wilson Of The Printers Wins Blind Score

HOME RULE PROPOSALS ANNOUNCED BY PREMIER

cordance with this principle, to enter upon negotiations with the Irish representatives, but this, as you know, was impossible owing to the decision of your party not to negotiate with the Government.

"The desire of the Government has been to try to effect an immediate settlement, conceding the largest possible measure of Home Rule which can be secured by agreement at this moment, without prejudice to the undertaking by Parliament of a further and final settlement of the questions most in dispute after the war. They are therefore prepared to put forward proposals on the following lines with a view to present action:

"Firstly—They would introduce a bill for the immediate application of the Home Rule act to Ireland, but excluding therefrom the six counties of northeast Ulster, such exclusion to be subject to reconsideration by Parliament at the end of five years, unless it is previously terminated by the action of the Council of Ireland, to be set up as hereinafter described.

A Council of Ireland.

"Secondly—with a view to securing the largest possible measure of common action for the whole of Ireland, the bill would provide for a Council of Ireland, to be composed of two delegations consisting, on the one hand, of all members returned to Westminster from the excluded area, and, on the other, of a delegation equal in numbers from the Irish Parliament, this Council to be summoned on the initiative of any six members. It would be empowered by a majority of the votes of each of the delegations to pass private bill legislation affecting both the included and excluded areas; to recommend to the Crown the extension to the excluded area, by an order in Council, of any act of the Irish Parliament; to agree to the inclusion under the Home Rule act of the whole of Ireland, subject to the assent of a majority of the voters in the excluded area, the power to be vested in the Crown in that case to extend the act to all of Ireland by an order in Council; to make recommendations on its own initiative upon the Irish question, including the amendment of the Home Rule act as finally passed. The President of this Council of Ireland would be elected by agreement between the delegations, or in default of agreement would be nominated by the Crown.

Reconsider Financial Proposals.

"Thirdly—The letter says that the financial proposals of the Home Rule bill are unsatisfactory and should be reconsidered. Important objects, such as the development of Irish industries, improvement in town housing and the furtherance of education, with increased pay for teachers owing to the war conditions it declares, cannot be dealt with under the bill without undue burden on the Irish taxpayers.

"Fourthly—The Government would recommend that after the second reading of the bill embodying the above proposals, together with the Home Rule act, it should forthwith be considered by a conference to be constituted on the lines of the speakers' conference on electoral reform, though not consisting exclusively of members of Parliament, and meeting under the Chairmanship of someone commanding the same general confidence in his impartiality and judgment as Mr. Speaker, himself.

"The governments feel that a proposal which provides for immediate Home Rule for the greater part of Ireland, while excluding that part of Ireland which objects to coming under the Home Rule act, for a definite period, when Parliament will consider the matter afresh; which recognizes the profound sentiment existing in Ireland for the unity of the country by creating a common Council to consider Irish affairs as a whole, and which, finally, set up a representative conference to attempt to address the most difficult questions involved, is as far as they can possibly go towards effecting a legislative settlement in the crisis of a great war. They are prepared to introduce a bill on these lines.

Wants Speedy Passage.

"But they feel it would be idle, and I am sure you will agree with them, to introduce such a bill unless it were assured of something like a second reading acceptance from both Irish parties. I sincerely hope that if the Government introduced this bill the party of which you are the head will give this measure of support to the proposals, which will give immediate self-government in Ireland to those who wish for it, and will at the same time create and keep continuously in being the means wherey a final reconciliation between the two sections of the Irish people can at any time be brought about.

"We earnestly recommend the proposals which I have outlined above to the dispassionate consideration of the men of all parties. If upon such consideration a basis for immediate action is found in them we shall proceed at once with the necessary steps to carry them into effect. If this should not be the case, there remains an alternative plan, which, though it has been sometimes seriously discussed, has never been authoritatively proposed—that of assembling a convention of Irishmen of all parties for the purpose of producing a scheme of Irish self-government."

South Africa's Example.

"As you will remember, the constitution of the Union of South Africa was framed despite most formidable difficulties and difficulties by a convention of representatives of all the interests and parties in the country, and the Government believes that a similar expedient might in the last resort, be found effectual in Ireland. Would it be too much to hope that Irishmen of all creeds and parties might meet together in convention for the purpose of drafting a constitution for their country, which would secure a just balance of all the opposing interests and finally compose the unhappy discords wave so long distracted Ireland and impeded its harmonious development?

"The Government is ready, in default of the adoption of the present proposals for home rule, to take the necessary steps for assembling such a convention. I should be much obliged if you found it possible to give me your views on the matter in order to allow the Government to consider the matter before Monday."

Redmond in Commons.

John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, to-day made his first appearance in the House of Commons since his illness, and said he had not received the Government's proposals for solution of the Irish question. Chancellor Bonar Law replied that they would be forwarded this afternoon, and that they would be given to all members in the form of a white paper to be published to-morrow.

AGREEMENT REACHED ON IMPORTANT POINTS

Understanding Between Duma Committee and Council of Workmen and Soldiers

PETROGRAD, May 17, via London, —The Government and the Radicals who have been hampering its activities have reached an agreement on three important points and Cabinet reconstruction has been inaugurated.

Following the publication of important Cabinet changes including the retirement of Prof. Paul Milukoff, Foreign Minister from the Cabinet, the official news agency issued this statement:

"The three cardinal points upon which the Government, the executive committee of the Duma and the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' delegates have agreed are:

"The unity of the allied fronts.

"A plentitude of powers for the Government."

The police stated that he had been sleeping in parks and was apparently homeless and without means of support. Moore stated that he was going to Buckhorn, where he had secured employment. Teamsters' Strike In Toronto Causes Embargo On Rails

The teamsters' strike, in Toronto, has already affected Peterborough shipments, and if it continues a few days or a week, may cause a freight congestion in the Toronto terminals that will hamper business all summer. It was announced to-day that there was an embargo on local goods for Toronto delivery, and there may be delays in goods coming to Peterborough. The situation appears serious, but an early solution of the difficulty is hoped for.

Flour Has Dropped $1.10 In Two Days

Examiner Special:

WINNIPEG, May 17. — Flour has dropped $1.10 per barrel in two days and is still going down. The stoppage of speculation in wheat and the "loosening up" by the people who had stocked wheat, is given as the cause of the decrease.

Successful Repetition of H.M.S. Pinafore

"Pinafore" was most successfully repeated at the Grand Opera House last night before a large and appreciative audience, who enjoyed the lilt of the Sullivan music and the wit of the Gilbert libretto, as presented most cleverly by the Conservatory amateurs. Good as was the presentation on the opening night, last evening's effort easily surpassed it, the performance going with a refreshing vim and swing and with no embarrassing stage waits. All the principals scored heavily in their respective roles and were loudly applauded, while the chorus and orchestra won fresh laurels. The whole performance from opening chorus to the grand finale was a treat and Mr. Gliddon, Mr. Adams, the stage manager, Mr. Asa Huycke, assistant stage manager, and all taking part are to be congratulated. There were bouquets for the lady principals last night, including one for the pianist, Miss Gladman, while Mr. Huycke was the recipient of a burlesque one. The members of the Peterborough Operatic Society, including Mr. and Mrs. Devey, attended in a body.

Story Not Confirmed

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, May 17.—There is no official confirmation here of the story that the Government will introduce legislation prohibiting race track gambling, although the delegation which saw Sir Robert Borden yesterday seem satisfied that this is the intention. The whole subject of race racks is in the hands of a special committee under Oliver Wilcox, M.P., North Essex, but he has been ill lately.

Organization Of Another Ward

Object of Organization to Further Interests of Bridges By-law

An organization meeting of the ratepayers in the North Ward was held last evening in the City Hall. The object of the organization is to further the interests of the Bridges By-law, which will be voted upon on May 31st. Ald. A. A. McIntyre was chairman of the meeting and Mr. G. O. Cameron was named as secretary. A representative gathering of ratepayers were present. With East City and the North Ward organized, a fair start has been made toward the complete organization of the ratepayers in each of the five wards of the city.

A straight majority of the total vote polled will be required to carry the by-laws.

Will Case Is Considered By Judge Sutherland

The following judgment at Osgoode Hall will be of local interest:

Before Sutherland, J.

Re Estate of Mary Helen Orr.—T. Stewart (Lindsay), for executors, moved for order construing will. E. D. Armour, K.C., for Official Guardian. R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., and T. H. Stinson (Lindsay) for Mary Cameron. A. M. Fulton (Lindsay) for Bobcaygeon, and for three cousins, I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., and E. C. Cattanach for various charities and religious bodies. J. A. Paterson, K.C., for father's kin. D. O'Connell for mother's kin.

Judgment: The bequest to the Mother Church at Boston I take to be a bequest for the advancement of religion and question four should be answered as follows: By the Mother Church, Boston, is meant "the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston," and it is entitled to said bequest of $10,000. . . . The purpose of bequest of $10,000 to Mother Church, Boston, etc., towards encouraging those building C. S. churches, etc. The purpose of this bequest is, I think, charitable in the legal sense and the language definite enough to make it a valid bequest. . . . I am of opinion that the legacy of $10,000 to be placed to the interest of Bobcaygeon to be used only for such purposes as will elevate the community spiritually is a charitable bequest and is a valid bequest, and there will be a reference to the Master to ascertain the religious sects, churches or associations in Bobcaygeon entitled to share therein. I think the gift of $10,000 for the benefit of those who are endeavouring to uplift the needy in Chicago may well be upheld as a charitable one, and so I construe it. The legacies to father's kin and mother's kin are valid bequests, and there will be a reference to ascertain who they are. The $50,000 bequest (question 10) and $10,000 bequest (question 12) must be held to be void, and as there is no residuary clause in the will these sums along with $100,000 left in the estate after payment of legacies, etc., will go to the next of kin of testatrix. As to bequest to Mother Church, I grant leave to the Mother Church and to the United Charities to supplement the material filed by such expert testimony as may be necessary. Costs of all parties out of residuary estate.

BILLY SUNDAY GETS DAY OFF TO MEET MARSHAL JOFFRE

DRAWING ROOM MEETING EARLY IN DAY ATTENDED BY PERSONS PROMINENT IN SOCIETY.

NEW YORK. — The tabernacle audience at Billy Sunday's revival meeting cheered with wild enthusiasm mention of Marshal Joffre's name, and then by unanimous vote decided to give Mr. Sunday an afternoon off in his fight to save New York from sin, so that he may accompany the party of visiting officials on their trip to West Point.

Mr. Sunday told the audience of 19,000 persons that he had received from Governor Whitman an invitation to go to West Point, and that he wanted to go, but had decided to "stay on the job." The preacher said that it was not an easy thing to decline such an invitation, and nobody would know how much he wanted to see Joffre.

Mr. Rodeheaver interrupted, and said he thought it would be a mistake for Mr. Sunday or any other man not to take advantage of such an opportunity.

AUDIENCE "CARRIED" IT.

"How many of you think Mr. Sunday ought to go on that trip and miss the afternoon service here in the tabernacle" Mr. Rodeheaver asked. It looked as if every person in the audience raised his hand. "Thank you: then I'll go," Mr. Sunday stated, and promptly announced who would conduct the afternoon services.

"I am glad I have had the privilege to be in New York, and see the city unfold her arms to welcome that great man, Marshal Joffre," the evangelist said, and the audience was on its feet in a moment with a roar.

"Joffre, the man who for fourteen days saw the army of France fall back; Joffre, the man who spread out out a map and stuck in a row of pegs and said, "They will not pass that line," and they did not pass it and they never will, the evangelist shouted above the wild acclaim that almost drowned his last words.

"You have flung the tricolor and the British union jack from your windows because we have locked arms with two great nations to go forward to triumph that government for the people shall not perish, and that Prussian militarism and all that goes with it, shall perish," Billy continued, and another outburst shook the tabernacle.

"SHOULD CHRIST COME TO NEW YORK."

The evangelist preached on the subject, "Should Christ come to New York." He said:

"You honour France to-day, New York, but I am proud that you are not one step behind in honoring Christ. You must have eyes in the back of your heads if you do not see that Christ is to-day giving New York such visitation of His presence as He has not shown since the Island of Manhattan was sold by the Indians for $25."

If the audience knew Christ were coming, Mr. Sunday asked, how many would hurry home and burn some letters they would not want seen, or call "her" on the telephone, and break a date for to-morrow, empty the ice box and tell the brewery wagon not to stop for a few days, and put some clothes on the statuary

"Where would you like to have Christ find you" he asked. "Would you like to have Him find you in a cabaret with a sissy on your knees, without enough clothes on to make a pair of leggins for a humming bird?"

At the evening service there were present fifty five hundred members of Brooklyn Bible classes. There were 1,162 trail hitters and 472 in the afternoon.

DRAWING ROOM MEETING.

Mr. Sunday preached a short sermon in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtis James, Park avenue and Sixty-ninth street. Standing in an improvised pulpit in the presence of 236 persons prominent in New York society, the evangelist offered a special petition for Marshal Joffre, Rene Viviani, and their associates of the French mission to the United States now in the city. He also prayed for a blessing upon Mr. and Mrs. James for opening their beautiful home. He spoke in the central drawing room, the four walls of which are hung with tapestries. They sang hymns to the accompaniment of a pipe organ.

"I don't know when I have seen a finer crowd," Mr. Sunday said, and then added: "There is one thing, however, that New York is away behind on, and that is this money business. Buffalo, Detroit, Pittsburg all did better in getting the expenses of the campaign paid off."

How To Make A Good Hair Tonic At Home

If you have been using hair tonics purchased readymade at the drug stores you can probably save some money and get a great deal better results by using the following recipe which has been remarkably successful in stopping loss of hair and making new hair grow on bald and thin spots. Anyone can easily make it at home. Simply mix 2 oz. of Lavoua De Composee with 6 oz. of pure Bay Rum and then add one-half drachm of menthol crystals and a little perfume if desired. The preparation should be well shaken and then allowed to stand a few hours before using. All these ingredients can be obtained from any well stocked drug store. In applying be sure to not merely wet the hair but rub the tonic right into the scalp as its ability to grow new hairs depends entirely upon the nourishment being absorbed by your hair roots. This preparation has been widely used for years and is entirely harmless and will not make the hair greasy or sticky. Ladies should be careful not to apply to face or where hair is not desired. G. L. B. Binghamton, N. Y.

The Men She Married

Adapted from the story by Harold Vickers
Published in the Snappy Stories Magazine

Probably the most novel subject ever presented in a play. A young heiress is tricked into a mock marriage by a suave adventurer who deserts her after obtaining her jewels and a large sum of money. Believing him dead, the girl accepts an honorable widower's offer of marriage, and it seems that at last she is to be happy. The man she believed dead turns up at a crucial time and under threat of exposure, compels her to do his bidding. "Give him enough rope and he'll hang himself." He, the villian, does, when he tries to play the same game with the woman's step-daughter. Don't fail to see how.

"The Men She Married"

ADAPTED FROM THE STORY BY HAROLD VICKERS
PUBLISHED IN THE SNAPPY STORIES MAGAZINE

A story unique in its enactment and in the collection of stars who appear in equally prominent roles. Gail Kane has been appearing very frequently in recent World releases, and after each succeeding one, her popularity greatly increases. The other World stars who are in this piece have a large standing following and will not disappoint them by their performances in this splendid story. The piece was one of the most talked of stories which ever appeared in the magazine mentioned above.

LONDON, May 17.—At least once a year from now on Britain will call a meeting of the Imperial Cabinet—the British Cabinet, prime ministers of all Britain's dominions and a representative of India—according to announcement made in the House of Commons by Premier Lloyd George to-day.

Such meetings, the Prime Minister said, would be for the purpose of discussing all matters affecting the Empire as well as its foreign policies.

LONDON, May 17.—Irish Nationalists formally to-day voted rejection of Premier Lloyd George's plan for partition of Ulster and settlement of Irish Home Rule, but agreed to adopt his suggestion for a convention of Irishmen of all parties to devise a system of government for Ireland.

PETROGRAD, May 17.—Despatches to-day declared German guns were now roaring over a great part of the Russo-German front since the soldiers stopped fraternizing, but that the Russian army morale was being excellently maintained despite this continuous pounding. Russian aeroplanes flying over the Black Sea harassed the enemy in Roumania, compelling the Teutonic abandonment of the Roumanian bank of the Danube. Later, when the Germans tried to recross, the Russian flyers again threw them back. The news of a Russian submarine flotilla shelling and silencing a battery on the Bosphorous was also printed here to-day. Heavy destruction was said to have been caused the Turkish position.

BERLIN, via London, May 17.—In the face of strong British counter attacks, German troops were forced to give up some ground captured in Roeux early this morning, according to to-day's official statement.

The War Office said so far in May 2,300 British and 2,700 French had been captured.

LONDON, May 16.—Eighteen British merchant vessels of more than 1,600 tons were sunk during the past week, says the official summary of shipping losses issued to-day. Five merchant ships of loss than 1,600 tons were sunk, together with three fishing vessels.

The summary:

All nationalities—Arrivals, 2,568; sailings, 2,552.

British vessels mined, submarined and sunk, over 1,600 tons, including one previously eighteen; under 1,600 tons, five.

British merchantmen unsuccessfully attacked, including five previously, nineteen.

British fishing vessels sunk, three.

The foregoing statement shows the losses for the week cut considerably more than half as regards the number of vessels sunk, last week's report showing sixty-two vessels as compared with twenty-six in the current statement.

In large vessels the decrease was from twenty-four to eighteen. The most marked decrease, however, was in the number of smaller vessels destroyed. Last Wednesday twenty-two merchant vessels of less than 1,600 tons were reported sunk, in contrast with the five in this week's report, while the number of fishing craft dropped from sixteen to only three.

Smoke Consumer At The Plant of Bonner Worth Co.

Work Has Been Suspended on the New Addition Owing to Submarine Menace

Work has been temporarily suspended on the new addition to the plant of the Bonner-Worth Company. The reason given for the suspension of operations is the failure to obtain machinery and raw material, owing to the condition of the shipping industry. It is expected that the work will be continued as soon as the situation clears.

The Bonner-Worth Company has installed smoke consumers in connection with their present plant. This will do away with the smoke nuisance, much to the satisfaction of the residents who reside in the vicinity of the plant. Times without number the City Council has been petitioned to enact a by-law regulating the smoke nuisance, but so far nothing definite has been done. It costs several thousand dollars to instal a smoke consumer, a fact which makes the action of the Bonner-Worth Company all the more commendable.

The Potatoes Have Arrived

There Appears to Be Some Doubt as to Whether the Spuds Are Needed

The car of potatoes which the city has been endeavouring to secure for distribution among the citizens, has arrived and is on sale at three dollars and seventy-five cents a bag at the car, so it is said. For some unknown reason the Council has failed to secure the car claiming that there has not been sufficient call for potatoes. There are four hundred bags in the car and so far only forty-nine bags have been asked for. If citizens show any inclination to buy the entire car, Mayor Duffus will call a meeting of the City Council and that body may decide to purchase the car. The safety first method of the civic authorities is in marked contrast to a number of other municipalities in the Province which of late have acted with less hesitation and supplied a real need without first waiting to see what is already manifest.

AN EXAMINER AD. DID THE WORK

That Examiner want ads pay is evidenced by the experience of a local man who lost a roll of bills amounting to $27 on the street the other day. He inserted a lost ad in the Examiner last evening, with the result that this morning Miss Furber, 218 Carlisle avenue, brought the money into the Examiner. She had found the bills, and seeing the advertisement, brought them in.

KEEP HENS
For The Sake Of PROFIT AND PATRIOTISM

Next Fall and Winter poultry and eggs are going to be higher in price than ever before. Last Winter they were high enough you know. Many housekeepers will be unable to buy them, and the wise ones will therefore keep hens in their back yards even if they never attempted it before. Poultry-keepers and farmers—the wise ones will raise double, or more than double, the number they have raised in other years. They will reap the profits.

Be wise; be prepared for coming months. Now is the time to hatch chicks, or to buy newly hatched chicks cheaply. Don't delay. You will not be able to buy layers in the Fall for love or money unless you go down into your pockets deeper than you ever had to before for a similar purpose. Everybody should start hatching now.

Lid Put On Pittsburg Cabarets For Good

Singing will no longer be permitted by the license court judges in connection with cabarets at the hotels and cafes of Pittsburg, as a result of the stringent stipulations which were exacted from license keepers before they were given their license certificates the other day. The serving of intoxicating liquors where dancing is permitted also is tabooed. Selling to women is also discouraged by the court, and practically all of the new licensed places in the downtown section were required to sign stipulations not to sell liquor to women. This was also required of proprietors of road houses.

Altogether there were more than forty dealers who had to sign the stipulations which were laid down by the court before they were given certificates. The stipulation signed by the agent and trustee for the company which operates the Hotel Schenley prohibits the management from selling liquor in the dining room or any part of the hotel aside from the barroom in the basement an hour before the beginning of any dance, during the dance and after the dancing is finished. This applies to any dances that may be held by private organizations or those conducted by the management of the hotel.

While the Schenley Hotel was the only large hostelry required to sign this stipulation, it is understood that this rule will be adopted by other hotels and in the future during the dancing hours soft drinks only will be served in the dining room, and the only place that liquors will be served will be in the barroom.

DOG SAVED CHILD'S LIFE.

A barking dog that scented danger probably saved the life of Catherine Rafferty, two years old, at Fort Montgomery village, N.Y. While alone she fell into a tub of hot water. The mother, Mrs. P. A. Rafferty, was in the yard.

The dog's barking attracted the attention of the mother. She snatched the child out of the water and summoned Dr. Blanchard. The child's legs, hands and breast were badly burned and her condition is still critical.

HERMIT'S BODY FOUND IN HOME

Henry C. Ruston, Who Became Recluse After Defeat for Office, Discovered Shot Through Head.

YONKERS, N. Y., May 17. —The body of Henry C. Ruston was discovered here with a bullet wound in the head. Oddly enough, the discovery of the body was made within an hour of the death of the City Judge, John H. Beall, who in 1905 defeated Mr. Ruston for that office.

After his defeat Mr. Ruston withdrew from the practice of law, and had kept himself to an almost hermit existence, living alone in his home in Central avenue, on the outskirts of Yonkers, he was not missed until children who played near the house told the police that he had not been seen for several days.

(An investigation led to the finding of the body on the kitchen floor with a revolver on the floor nearby. The police pronounced it unmistakably a suicide.

KIPLING DISCOVERS A NEW ITALY

Poet Gives His Impressions of Fighting Spirit of the Italians.

ROME, May 17.—Official statements indicated the Austrians are stubbornly resisting the Italian advance, the fighting steadily growing more and more bitter.

"I have seen a new world, a new war and a new Italy," declared Rudyard Kipling, back to-day from the front, in describing his impressions. He said the Italian heavy artillery was particularly effective against the enemy.

FORCED TO KILL CATTLE.

Slaughter in Germany Is Viewed With Alarm.

COPENHAGEN, May 16.—At the annual meeting of the Schleswig-Holstein Chamber of Agriculture, the President of the Chamber, Herr Rantzan Von Breitenburg, painted a gloomy picture of the probable results of the present compulsory slaughter of cattle to compensate for the reduction of the bread ration in Germany. He declared that the first detrimental result had been shown in the curtailment of milk and butter.

"In Schleswig-Holstein," said the speaker, "already too many cattle have been seized. Even cows supplying from one to two gallons of milk daily have been slaughtered. This is diminishing the much needed production of fat, and if it continues much longer I cannot see where we shall get sufficient meat and lean cattle during the coming year."

RUSSIAN COUNCIL OF SOLDIERS AND WORKMEN

What It Is and the Part It Plays in Russia—Organization Has Practically Usurped Place Formerly Held by the Duma Delegates Occupy the Duma Building as a Meeting Place

REPRESENTATIVES OF THE PEOPLE

(Special Cable by Wm. G. Shepherd.)

PETROGRAD, May 18.—Few people outside of Russia will understand why there has been so much vacillation about a coalition Cabinet — why the soldiers and workmen's delegates first refused the Duma Ministry's proffer of such a plan; why they changed this refusal into acceptance, on certain specified terms; why the Duma leaders rejected the specified terms and how it comes to-day that there is so much "jockeying" between the two factions for the reorganized Cabinet. An understanding of what the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council really amounts to is essential.

As a matter of fact, the workmen's and soldiers' delegates have practically usurped the place formerly held theoretically — in Russian administrative affairs by the Duma. The delegates are representatives of the Russian people themselves.

When the revolution succeeded the Russian people spontaneously began to consider some way of taking advantage of the lessons in co-operation and popular rule, and the experience they had gained in the Zemstvo and other co-operative societies under the old autocratic rule. Such organizations as the Zemstvo many times saved Russia under the old regime by assuring proper food to troops at the front and endeavouring to balance distributions of food. Many of the present leaders of the Ministry were prominent in these organizations — having become prominent because they were originally chosen by the people.

Elections Began.

But with the revolution a success the people began electing delegates to meet in the Duma Building to act as a sort of Zemstvo organization — and in Governmental administration. Workmen all over Russia meeting in barracks, trenches, workshops, and peasants — including women — in all settlements, to choose representatives. These delegates hastened to Petrograd. Entirely unofficial, they, nevertheless, really constitute the nearest approach to "voice of the people" ever possible in Russia.

The delegates occupy the Duma Building. The structure now resembles a convention hall in which a national Christian endeavour society is meeting, or the Federation of Labour, or the Rotarians. Improvised signs in the corridors tell the delegates at what rooms to register, where to find lodging, and when meetings will be held.

Because the workmen and the soldiers have all the rifles they predominate over the purely peasant classes. Moreover, the fighting class is backed by a majority of the people.

With this unofficial assembly added to the Russian Government machinery the Duma has been entirely superseded.

The officials selected by the now retired Duma cannot give orders now without the sanction of the workmen and soldiers. The assembly has appointed a committee — or "council" of 24 members whose duty it is to keep in contact with the provisional leaders and express to them the opinions of the assembly as a whole. If the 24 committee men are in doubt about any question they call a general meeting of all the delegates.

Poison Test Applied

Last Saturday morning Frances Fersak, twenty-four, a pretty housemaid, sak, twenty-four, a pretty housemaid, strom, in the latter's apartment in New York and announced she had taken bichloride of mercury. Mrs. Carlstrom called an ambulance. Frances was removed to Knickerbocker Hospital and ever since the doctors have been exploring her interior with stomach pumps, X-rays and other apparatus. Not a trace of poison could they find.

The way Frances giggled roused their suspicions. To-day they demanded she tell them the truth. She did. She admitted that the most poisonous things she ate that day were strawberries and cream, bacon and eggs and several slices of bread, with a stein of cream for a chaser. She was taken before Magistrate Groehl in West Side Court.

"Why did you do this, Frances?" she was asked.

"I wanted to test my John's love for me," she replied. "I thought he was making eyes at Mary." "John" lives in Albany. Mary is another maid employed by Mrs. Carlstom.

"John is going to get the license this afternoon and we are to be married," said Frances. Magistrate Groehl discharged her.

Warsaw Boy Now On The High Seas

WARSAW, May 16.—Following is a letter received by Mrs. Jos. Edwards of Warsaw from J. Wasson Lynn of H.M.S. "Sweeper"

Dear Aunt,—I received your letter when I came in last Wednesday. I got five all at once, which was a pleasant surprise as have not been getting my mail very regularly.

Well, I have made my first trip to sea. I am in the trawler section and they are going to send us home for patrol work in Canadian waters as soon as we get trained, that is, unless the powers that be change their minds before we get away, but that is what is on the slate now.

This is the largest naval depot in England. There are thousands of sailors, warships of all kinds, and also immense dock-yards here. I can't write you much of a description of these though as we are not allowed to, so that will have to wait until I see you. When we get back, I expect we will have leave occasionally, and I may be able to have a few days with you. We go out again in a day or so. We are out fourteen days, and in seven. With love.

JACK

Mrs. H. Purchase and little daughter, Gwendoline who have been visiting Rev. H. Brown and Miss Margaret Purchase at "The Manse" for the past week, returned yesterday to Toronto.

Mrs. W. K. Payne, of Peterborough was in the village on Monday.

Rev. H. Brown, who was out of town for the week-end, returned home on Tuesday.

Messrs. Walter Kidd, of Indian River and O. B. Earle, Winnipeg, were in the village on Saturday evening.

Was Troubled With Shortness of Breath

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, dizziness, and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

The nerves become unstrung, you dread to be alone, have a horror of society, start at the least noise and are generally fatigued.

On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be taken. They are just what you require at this time. They regulate and stimulate the heart, and strengthen and restore the whole nerve system.

Mrs. C. M. Cormier, Buctouche, N.B., writes: "Since two years ago I was troubled with a shortness of breath, and sometimes I could hardly breathe. I went to see several doctors, and they said it was from my heart and nerves, but they did not seem to do me any good. One day I got one of your B.B.B. Almanacs and read of a case similar to mine.

"I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking it I noticed such a change that I kept on taking them until I had used four more boxes, when I was cured."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box, three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

CAMPAIGN TO INCREASE THE PRODUCTION OF EGGS.

STRATFORD, May 15. — The Public school board passed a resolution to-day co-operating with the city council and the Poultry Association requesting Mayor Monteith to call a meeting in the near future for the purpose of discussing greater egg and poultry production. The Horticultural Society to-day distributed 1800 packages of flowers and vegetable seeds among the scholars of the third and fourth grades of the public schools and these seeds will be sown in plots either at school or at the children's homes and will be entirely apart from the gardening which the scholars are required to do under the supervision of the teachers. In the month of September a flower and vegetable show will be held by the Horticultural Society, when prizes will be given for the children getting the best results from their seeds distributed to-day.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those who are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually so thin, emaciated and lacking in that vital energy which can only come from a well fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products, I would suggest that you should try a meal of any food or foods which you may like, in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize hot or cold water. This will neutralize any acidity which may be formed and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It has no direct action on the stomach; but by neutralizing the acidity of the food contents and thus removing the source of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. As a physician, I believe in the use of medicine whenever necessary, but I must admit that I cannot see the sense of dosing an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the acid—the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia as directed above, and see if I am not right."

ONE HERO SAVED LINE

Fine Leadership by British Sergeant Gained Victoria Cross

For one of the bravest acts of the war Sergeant (promoted Second Lieutenant) Frederick William Palmer, Royal Fusiliers, was awarded the V.C. The story of his "most conspicuous bravery, control, and determination" (as the official record puts it) makes thrilling reading: "During the progress of certain operations, all the officers of his company having been shot down, Sergeant Palmer assumed command, and, having cut his way under point blank machine-gun fire, through the wire entanglements, he rushed the enemy's trench with six of his men, dislodged the hostile machine-gun which had been hampering our advance, and established a block. He then collected men detached from other regiments, and held the barricade for nearly three hours against seven determined counter-attacks, under an incessant barrage of bombs and rifle grenades from his flank and front.

"During his temporary absence in search of more bombs an eighth counter-attack was delivered by the enemy, who succeeded in driving in his party, and threatened the defences of the whole flank. At this critical moment, although he had been blown off his feet by a bomb and was greatly exhausted, he rallied his men, drove back the enemy, and maintained his position." The very conspicuous bravery displayed by this sub-lieutenant officer (adds the War Office record) cannot be overstated, and his splendid determination and devotion to duty undoubtedly averted what might have proved a serious disaster in this sector of the line.

BOOTS FOR ALL DUTIES

Many Different Kinds Used in the Army's Service

A London magazine writes: No fewer than 60 different models for army boots are set down in the regulations, and each is made in 13 different sizes, from 2 to 14 inclusive. Multiply 60 by 13 and we get the total of 780 different models, which represents the extent of the stock. Strictly speaking these are not all military boots in the fighting sense of the word. In addition to the familiar ankle boots, which Tommy wears on service, there are knee boots for officers; big cumbersome leather boots or overalls fitted with felt or rubber soles for the explosives works, magazines, and other danger buildings; slippers of various descriptions—canvas, leather, and bedroom—for different duties; gumboots for trench work; mosquito boots to protect the fighting man in tropical countries from attacks on his feet by these pests; foot-wear for hospitals and gymnasiums; overshoes with gaiters; big boots or waders for the pontoniers, and so on. For instance, there is one boot made for a section of the Canadian troops. It is a knee boot differing radically from that set down as the official pattern of present times. It is stated to be the self-same pattern which was served to our mounted troops fighting in Canada during the war of a hundred or more years ago, when Quebec fell to Wolfe's strategy. It is said to be made the same now as it was then: the passage of time has not affected its design one tittle, and now as then is hand-made. It had been adapted to the uses of Canada's lumbermen in times of peace.

FLEW OVER ENGLAND

Count Zeppelin Paid Mysterious Aerial Visit

Much discussion has been raised as to whether Count Zeppelin ever flew over England in any of the raids. Although it is most unlikely that he did, he has actually flown over England. In 1913 a question was asked in the House of Commons at Westminster about reports of a mysterious airship which had visited certain parts of England by night. The Government admitted that an airship, which was not of British construction, had flown over England. In that airship was Zeppelin himself.

First English Soldier

A soldier writes:—"I went to a place where they had never seen the English before, and you can imagine their excitement when I puffed through the town on my Douglas. 'Is he English?' you could hear them saying, and a big crowd quickly collected. I sleep in a bed occupied by a Hun officer. There is a beautiful piano there also, which gave forth the strains of 'Deutchland uber Alles,' but now it resounds to the tune of 'If You Were the Only Girl.'"

Would-be peacemakers wisely Stop, Look, and Listen before crossing the track of the belligerents.

Behind German Lines

Lieutenant William Thaw, second in command of the Lafayette Corps, of American aviators, played an exciting role in a French offensive in Champagne. While acting as scout for the advancing French forces he fell behind the German lines. To the French men and women who gathered around him he brought the news that the United States had declared war on Germany and then escaped just as the Germans were coming up. Incidentally he brought down a Teuton Fokker, his second catch of the offensive.

Daniels as Naval Expert

Opinions often differed in the United States regarding the fitness of Josephus Daniels for the Secretaryship of the Navy. He was severely criticized by various American newspapers politically opposed to him, yet Admiral Dewey who spent 62 years in the navy, said that "Daniels is the best secretary we ever had, and has done more for the navy than any other. I am amazed by his knowledge of technical matters. He has studied profoundly, and his opinion is founded on close observation."

England has a novel ally in the fight against German mines. Many reports are coming from the North Sea of dead whales being found with their heads blown off, presumably after bumping the horns of mines.

uthor And Actor Delighted in Stories

The actor-author, Captain Murray rson, has just passed away at the e of fifty-one. He had joined the ny Service Corps at the beginning the war. Murray Carson was doubt- a better author than actor, but, any rate, few could beat him as a conteur. He loved to tell of a friend o went touring in South Africa. hen later he asked after the man, was informed he was dead. "How d he die?" was the query, and the swer, "Pelted to death with eggs Capetown." "But eggs don't kill," rson protested. "Ostrich eggs do," the retort.

It is told of Murray Carson, that hen playing in "The Red Lamp," he nearly the cause of a world trag- y. A dagger used by the actor ac- dentally slipped from his hand, and ade a wild flight over the stalls, to ick quivering in the arm of a front stall. And in the seat, of all peo- , was Mr. Joseph Chamberlain.

on't Spoil Your Hair By Washing It

When you wash your hair, be care- l what you use. Don't use prepared ampoos or anything else, that con- ins too much alkali, for this is very jurious, as it dries the scalp and akes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain ulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure d entirely greaseless. It's very eap, and beats anything else all to eces. You can get this at any drug ore and a few ounces will last the hole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water d rub it in, about a teaspoonful is that is required. It makes an abun- nce of rich, creamy lather, cleans- thoroughly, and rinses out easily. e hair dries quickly and evenly, d is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluf- , wavy and easy to handle. Besides, loosens and takes out every par- le of dust, dirt and dandruff.

ELDERLY WOMEN SAFEGUARDED

Tell Others How They Were Carried Safely Through Change of Life.

Durand, Wis.—"I am the mother of fourteen children and I owe my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I was 45 and had the Change of Life, a friend recommended it and it gave me such relief from my bad feelings that I took several bottles. I am now well and healthy and recommend your Compound to other ladies."—Mrs. MARY RIDGWAY, Durand, Wis.

A Massachusetts Woman Writes: Blackstone, Mass. — "My troubles were from my age, and I felt awfully sick for three years. I had hot flashes often and frequently suffered from pains. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now am well."—Mrs. PEDRAS COUSINEAU, Box 289, Blackstone, Mass.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and dizziness, should be heeded by middle-aged women. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has carried many women safely through this crisis.

English Breweries Will Release Men

Twenty brewery companies in Sheffield, with a capital totalling £2,000,000 are to be amalgamated as a result of the necessity to save labour. Brewing is regarded officially as a nonessential trade.

Sheffield, as one of the biggest brewing centres, is one of the first places for experiment. The brewers have met and decided on a plan of amalgamation whereby the desires of the Government can be met, while each firm preserves its trade interests and individuality. Some seventeen breweries are to be closed, and the production will be concentrated at the remaining three.

Some delay has occurred through the unwillingness of one firm to close, and the time limit for a voluntary arrangement may expire shortly. The amalgamation is expected to release many men from the army and national service.

The announcement suggests that the state purchase proposals have been abandoned or postponed. It is argued that if immediate state control was contemplated such a measure as that now adopted will be unnecessary.

The wholesale price of bottled beers was raised again by the brewers and bottlers. April 2 the wholesale price of Beer was fixed at 2s 3d a dozen half pint bottles. The new increase brings the wholesale price up to 4s 6d a dozen.
